

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2007 with funding from Microsoft Corporation

AN ESSAY
TOWARDS A
NEW METRICAL VERSION
OF
THE PSALMS OF DAVID,

BY
THOMAS TURNER, ESQ.

Dedicated
TO THE RIGHT HON. AND RIGHT REV.
CHARLES JAMES, LORD BISHOP OF LONDON.

LONDON:
RIVINGTONS, WATERLOO PLACE.
1854.

LONDON :
GILBERT AND RIVINGTON, PRINTERS,
ST. JOHN'S SQUARE.

AT LIBRARY
OF THE MUSEUM
OF COMPARATIVE ZOOLOGY
AT HARVARD UNIVERSITY

From the Author

BS1440
T8
1854

TO THE RIGHT REV.

THE BISHOP OF LONDON.

MY LORD,

I TAKE the liberty of dedicating to your Lordship this attempt at a new version of the Psalms.

I am the more encouraged to do so, because I feel that one who has spent so many years in unremitting (and, by the Divine blessing, largely successful) exertions in advancing the kingdom of God, will sympathize with any effort, however humble, which has the same object in view.

I have the honour to be,

My Lord,

Your Lordship's obedient and attached servant,

THOMAS TURNER.

Hampstead Heath,
Oct. 1854.

CONTENTS.

			PAGE
Psalm	XIX	Cœli enarrant	5
—	XLVI.	Deus noster refugium	7
—	LXII.	Nonne Deo	9
—	LXIII.	Deus, Deus meus	11
—	LXV.	Te decet hymnus	13
—	LXXX.	Qui regis Israel	15
—	LXXXIV.	Quam dilecta	17
—	XC.	Domine, refugium	19
—	XCV.	Venite, exultemus	21
—	XCVII.	Dominus regnavit	23
—	C.	Jubilate Deo	25
—	CIII.	Benedic, anima mea	26
—	CXXXIX.	Domine, probasti	28
—	CXLV.	Exaltabo te, Deus	30

PSALM XIX.

Cœli enarrant.

ERRATA.

Page 10, line 2, for vain read false

— 17, — 18, for ? read !

5. There the sun's mansion hast Thou placed,
Which as a bridegroom comes
Fresh from his chamber, and with joy
Like a strong racer runs.
6. Rising from heav'n's extremest verge,
He compasses the sky,
Pouring o'er all his searching heat ;
Then to heav'n's verge descends.
7. God's law is perfect, and to health
Restores the soul diseased :
By his sure testimonies taught,
The simple are made wise.

8. The statutes of the Lord are right,
And make the heart rejoice :
Pure the commandments of the Lord,
Enlightening the eyes.
9. The fear of God is clean, and bright
With hope of endless life :
The judgments of the Lord stand fast
In truth and righteousness.
10. They're more to be desired than gold,
Yea, more than much fine gold :
They're sweeter than the luscious flow
From richest honeycomb.
11. Moreover, by their warning voice
Thy servant is preserved :
And whoso keepeth them is bless'd
With largest recompense.
12. Lord, who can tell how many ways,
How often he offends :
Cleanse me, Thou God, who know'st my heart,
From ev'ry secret fault.
13. And O let no presumptuous sins
Thy servant's soul o'erpower :
That I may upright be, and from
The great transgression saved.
14. Let ev'ry word my mouth shall speak,
Each thought my heart conceives,
Be pleasing in thy sight, O Lord,
My Saviour and my strength !

PSALM XLVI.

Deus noster refugium.

- 1, 2, 3. God is our refuge and our strength,
 In trouble a very present help :
 Therefore we'll fear not, though earth quake,
 And hills be hurl'd into the sea ;
 Though the vex'd waters roar and swell,
 And mountains tremble at their shock.
- 4, 5. See, the soft flow of Sion's streams
 Makes glad the city of our God,
 The High One's holy tabernacle :
 There God his early help shall bring,
 God in the midst of her is found,
 That city shall not be removed.
- 6, 7. The heathen raged, the disturb'd states
 With fury heaved : the voice of God
 Was utter'd, and the earth dissolved !
 Our strong foundation is the Lord,
 The Lord of hosts beside us stands,
 The God of Jacob is our rock.
- 8, 9. O come, behold the works of God :
 What desolations on the earth
 His wrath has made. Again, He bids
 Wars cease throughout the world ; He breaks
 The bow, the spear He snaps in twain,
 He burns the chariot with fire.

- 10, 11. Be still, and know that I am God :
My glory shall the heathen own,
Yea, all the earth my glory see !
Our strong foundation is the Lord,
The Lord of hosts beside us stands,
The God of Jacob is our rock.

PSALM LXII.

Nonne Deo ?

- 1, 2. TRULY I wait upon the Lord,
 To Him my soul for safety looks :
 He is my safety and my strength,
 In Him is my defence ; I shall not greatly fall.
3. How long will ye, with malice fraught,
 Against men mischievously plot ?
 Like a bow'd wall, or tott'ring fence,
 Soon shall ye be o'erthrown, yea, all of you be slain.
4. Their only thought is how to cast
 Him down, whom God loves to exalt :
 They've chosen lies for their delight,
 Good words hang on their lips, but curses fill their heart.
- 5, 6. But thou, my soul, wait still on God,
 On Him my expectation rests :
 He is my safety, and my strength,
 In Him is my defence ; with Him I shall not fall.
- 7, 8. My health, my glory is the Lord,
 My rock of refuge, and my might :
 O all ye people, trust in Him ;
 He only is our hope, to Him pour out your hearts.

9. Truly the race of man is naught,
Empty or vain, both mean and great :
Tried in the scales, the treach'rous show
Lighter than vanity, no counterpoise can find.
10. Put not, O man, thy trust in wrong,
In robbery make not thy boast :
If increased wealth around thee shine,
Set not on it thine heart, let it not swell thy pride.
- 11, 12. Once hath God spoken ; twice I've heard
This word—that Power is of the Lord ! .
Thine too is mercy, for Thou, God,
Dost each man's work requite—in judgment, or in love.

PSALM LXIII.

Deus, Deus meus.

1, 2. O God, Thou art my God, thy face
 From early dawn I seek :
 Amidst a dry and barren land,
 Unwater'd and accursed,
 My flesh, desponding, longs for Thee,
 My soul thirsts for her God :
 To see, as in the sanctuary,
 Thy glory and thy power.

3, 4, 5. For all thy loving-kindness, Lord,
 More dear to me than life,
 My lips shall praise Thee while I live,
 My lifted hands adore :
 As with rich marrow fed, my soul
 Shall feast upon thy love ;
 And my mouth still with joyful lips
 Thy grateful praises sing.

6, 7, 8. I'll think of Thee upon my bed,
 And, in the still night watch,
 On Thee my heart shall meditate.
 Because Thou'st been my help,
 Therefore I will rejoice beneath
 The shadow of thy wings ;
 My soul shall cleave unto thy steps,
 And lean upon thy hand.

9, 10, 11. But they that thirst to take my life
 Shall be themselves laid low ;
Slain by the sword, their carcasses
 Shall be the foxes' prey :
But the king shall rejoice in God,
 And faithful hearts exult ;
Whilst every slanderous tongue is stopp'd,
 And liars stand confused.

PSALM LXV.

Te decet hymnus.

- 1, 2, 3. PRAISE waits for Thee in Sion, Lord,
 And there to Thee the vow shall be perform'd :
 O Thou that hearest prayer,
 To whom all flesh shall come !
 See, my misdeeds prevail against my soul,
 O purge away my sins.
4. Blest is the servant of thy choice,
 The man whom in thy courts Thou tak'st to dwell :
 With pleasures of thy house
 He shall be satisfied,
 And, from thy holy temple's living wells,
 Refreshed, quench his thirst.
- 5, 6. By fearful judgments wilt Thou, Lord,
 Our wish'd salvation render to our prayers,
 O Thou, of furthest lands
 And sea-wash'd isles the hope,
 Who, by thy strength, the mountains dost set fast,
 Girded about with power !
- 7, 8. Thou still'st the roaring of the sea,
 The water's tumult, and the people's rage :
 Earth's utmost habitants,
 Afraid, thy tokens see,
 O Thou, that mak'st th' outgoings of the morn
 And evening's sons rejoice.

9, 10. With rain Thou visitest the earth,
And mak'st it plenteous with the riv'r of God,
Which full of water flows :
Thy hands prepare the corn,
For so hast Thou provided for the earth,
Nursed by thy fostering care.

11, 12. The ridges feel thy softening showers,
And rain abundant through the furrows runs :
With kindly moisture fed,
The bless'd increase up-springs ;
Thy goodness crowns the rich, o'erflowing year,
Thy clouds with fatness drop.

13, 14. They drop, and make the desert smile,
And clothe with verdure the exulting hills :
Around, with browsing flocks
The pasturages teem ;
The valleys, also, cover'd o'er with corn,
Shout out, and sing for joy.

PSALM LXXX.

Qui regis Israel.

1. SHEPHERD of Israel, Thou that erst
Led Joseph like a sheep, give ear :
O Thou that sitt'st in majesty
Between the cherubim, shine forth !
2. In front of Ephraim's fainting ranks,
Of Benjamin, and Manasseh's force,
Stir up thy strength, Lord God of Hosts,
O come, and help us in our need.
3. Restore our forlorn state, O Lord,
Our routed armies turn again ;
O make thy face to shine on us,
And save us with its healing light !
- 4, 5. How long wilt Thou thine anger, Lord,
Against thy people's prayers retain ?
Thou feed'st them with the bread of tears,
And giv'st them floods of tears to drink.
6. Thou makest us a helpless prey,
The booty of our neighbour's strife :
By Thee abandon'd, we're become
A mere derision to our foes.
7. Restore our forlorn state, O Lord,
Our routed armies turn again ;
O make thy face to shine on us,
And save us with its healing light !

- 8, 9. From Egypt once Thou brought'st a vine,
And bid'st the heathen yield it room ;
In the clear'd ground Thou planted'st it,
It struck deep root, and fill'd the land.
- 10, 11. Like goodly cedar trees, her boughs
Spreading, o'ercanopied the hills :
Her branches touch'd Euphrates' stream,
Her roots stretch'd to the western sea.
- 12, 13. Why hast Thou broken down her hedge,
And left her to the spoiler bare ?
Now ravaged by the forest boar,
Now torn by wild beast of the field.
- 14, 15. Turn Thee, again, Lord God of Hosts,
Look down from heaven, behold this vine ;
Look on the vineyard Thou hast made,
The branch Thou strengthened'st for Thyself.
16. Hewn down, and burnt with fire, the limbs
Around, in scorched fragments lie :
So, by thy countenance rebuked,
Thy people, Lord, consume and die.
- 17, 18. O let thy chosen seed, once loved,
Feel, as of yore, thy strengthening hand :
No more will we go back from Thee,
Quicken us, and on Thee we'll call.
19. Restore our forlorn state, O Lord,
Our routed armies turn again ;
O make thy face to shine on us,
And save us with its healing light !

PSALM LXXXIV.

Quam dilecta.

- 1, 2. How lovely is thy dwelling place,
 O Lord, Thou God of Hosts !
 My soul with longing sinks oppress'd,
 Yea, fainteth for thy courts ;
 My heart and flesh, athirst, cry out
 For Thee, the living God.
3. Behold, the sparrow finds a house
 Within thy hallow'd fane ;
 The swallow by thine altar builds,
 And fearless lays her young,
 Safe in thy care, O Lord of Hosts,
 My Sov'reign, and my God !
- 4, 5. Blessed are they, who ever dwell
 Within thy sacred walls ;
 Who, ever Thee adoring, sing,
 Devoted to thy praise ?
 Bless'd, who the way with heart intent
 And strength from Thee pursue.
- 6, 7. For them springs rise in Baca's vale ;
 Rain fills th' exhausted pools :
 And still, from strength to strength they go,
 Until, on Sion's mount,
 Before the presence of the Lord,
 The God of gods, they bow.

8, 9. O hear my prayer, Lord God of Hosts !

O Jacob's God, give ear !

O God, our shield, upon the face

Of thine anointed look,

Who here, within thy temple, kneels,

And for thy mercy waits.

10. For one day in thy courts excels

A thousand idle years :

I'd rather, in the house of God,

Serve humbly at the door,

Than, as a master, dwell within

The tents of wickedness.

11, 12. For God a sun is, and a shield ;

Glory and grace He gives :

No good thing will He keep from those

Who walk in uprightness.

Blest is the man, O Lord of Hosts,

Who puts his trust in Thee !

PSALM XC.

Domine, refugium.

- 1, 2. LORD, Thou in every age our dwelling place
Hast been. Before the mountains were brought forth,
Or ever Thou hadst form'd the world; Thou art
From all eternity, th' eternal God!
- 3, 4. Thou turn'st man to destruction: at thy word—
Children of men to dust return! They fall:
Fall at thy word, to whom a thousand years
Are as a day gone by, a night that's past.
- 5, 6. As with a flood, they're swept away: they fade
E'en as a sleep, or like the changing grass:
The morning sees it flourishing and green,
At eve it sever'd lies, dried up and withered.
- 7, 8. So perish we, consumed in thy wrath,
And by thy fearful indignation troubled;
For our iniquities before Thee stand,
Thy countenance beholds our secret sins.
- 9, 10. Before thine anger all our days are fled,
Our transient years pass swiftly as a thought ¹.
The days of man are threescore years and ten,
Or, if his strength extends to fourscore years,
That strength to labour and to sorrow turns,
So soon is it cut off, and we are gone.

¹. See Annotations of Bishop Horne.

- 11, 12. Lord, who the power of thine anger knows?
Or who the terrors of thy wrath can tell?
Teach us our days to number, that we may
Betimes by wisdom discipline our hearts.
- 13, 14. Return, O Lord,—How long dost Thou delay?
And look, relenting, on thy servants' woes:
Let early mercies satisfy our souls,
And joy and gladness all our days attend.
- 15, 16. With gladness compensate our days of pain,
And years wherein thy chastisements we've borne:
Thus to thy servants show thy gracious works,
And let their children's eyes thy glory see.
17. The beauty of the Lord upon us shine!
His glorious majesty be round us thrown!
Prosper'd by Thee, our work shall firmly stand,
On Thee depending, O bless Thou our work!

PSALM XCV.

Venite, exultemus.

1, 2. COME let us sing unto the Lord,
 And let us heartily rejoice
 In our Redeemer's might :
 Let us before his presence come
 With thanksgiving, and loudly show
 Our joy in Him with psalms.

3, 4, 5. For the Lord is a mighty God ;
 Yea, a great King above all gods :
 Earth's depths are in his hand :
 His also is the mountains' strength ;
 He made, and He controuls the sea ;
 His hands the dry land form'd.

6, 7. Come let us worship and fall down,
 And humbly let us kneel before
 The Lord our Maker's throne :
 For He, th' Almighty, is our God,
 And we his pastured people are,
 The sheep of his own hand.

8, 9. See then, this day, ye hear his voice—
 Harden not ye your hearts, as erst,
 When, on their trial day,
 Your fathers in the desert sinn'd,
 Provoked Me with their unbelief,
 Proved Me, and saw my works.

10, 11. For forty years their trespasses
My spirit vex'd ; and grieved, I said—
It is a race perverse
In heart, which hath not known my ways ;
And in my wrath I swear, that they
Should never see my rest.

PSALM XCVII.

Dominus regnavit.

- 1, 2. THE Lord is King : let Canaan rejoice,
 And all the isles the welcome tidings hail :
 'Mid clouds and darkness canopied He sits,
 On righteousness and judgment rests his throne.
- 3, 4. Before Him goes a fire, which round about
 Burns up his enemies on every side :
 The earth, illumined by his lightnings' blaze,
 Beholds and trembles at the coming God.
- 5, 6. The mountains melt like wax before the Lord,
 Before the Lord, the Ruler of the world :
 The conscious heavens his righteousness proclaim,
 And all earth's habitants his glory see.
7. Confounded be all they, whose worship vain
 Before a graven image bends the knee :
 Cursed, who in idols make their frantic boast ;
 O all ye gods, before your Sov'reign fall !
- 8, 9. With gladness Judah's daughters heard, and joy
 Through Sion rang at thy dread judgments, Lord :
 For high o'er all the earth thy standard waves,
 And far above all gods Thou reign'st supreme.

10. O all that love the Lord, see well that ye
Detest that evil which your God abhors !
The soul God sanctifies, He will preserve,
And from the wicked rescue whom He loves.
- 11, 12. Lo, light is sown for righteous hands to reap,
And seeds of gladness for the true in heart :
Rejoice in God, ye just, then ; and give thanks
At the remembrance of his holiness.

PSALM C.

Jubilate Deo.

- 1, 2. IN God be joyful, all ye lands,
 With gladness serve the Lord :
 Come ye before Him with a song,
 With hymns his presence hail.
3. O be ye sure the Lord is God,
 He made us, and we're his² :
 His people are we, and the sheep
 In his sweet pastures fed.
4. Come with thanksgiving to his gates,
 And to his courts with praise ;
 With grateful hearts before Him bow,
 And bless his holy name.
5. For God is good ; his mercies flow
 In everlasting streams :
 His truth from generation shall
 To generation stand.

² See Annotations of Bishop Horne.

PSALM CIII.

Benedic, anima mea.

- 1, 2. PRAISE God, my soul ; by heart, by tongue,
 By all within me God be praised :
 Praise thou, my soul, God's holy name,
 Nor all his benefits forget.
- 3, 4. Praise Him, who all thy sins forgives,
 Who every pain and sickness heals ;
 Who from destruction saves thy life,
 And crowns thee with his tender love.
- 5, 6. God fills thy mouth with good : thy youth,
 Fresh as an eagle's, He restores.
 God hears the appeal of the oppress'd,
 And renders justice to their cause.
- 7, 8. His ways to Moses were display'd,
 His works by Israel's children seen :
 Gracious and merciful is God,
 To anger slow, in goodness rich.
- 9, 10. Not always will the Lord rebuke,
 And not for aye his wrath retain :
 He hath not recompensed our sins,
 Nor dealt us our transgressions' meed.

- 11, 12. As high as heaven above us stands,
Such is the height God's mercies rise :
As far as east is from the west,
So far He parts us from our sins.
- 13, 14. A father's pity for his child,
Such pity God his servants shows ;
Knowing the weakness of our frame,
Remembering that we are but dust.
- 15, 16. The days of man are as the grass,
His glory as the wayside flower :
Withering beneath the passing blast,
Its place is gone, its memory lost.
- 17, 18. But they that fear th' eternal God
Eternal mercy shall obtain :
His everlasting righteousness
To children's children shall endure
Of those that keep his covenant,
Such as are mindful of his laws.
- 19, 20. The Lord in heaven has fix'd his throne,
The universe his kingdom is :
Praise Him, Angels of might, that stand
Obedient, hearkening to his word :
- 21, 22. Praise ye the Lord, all ye his hosts,
Ye ministers, that do his will :
O all his works, your Sov'reign praise,
O thou, my soul, praise thou the Lord !

PSALM CXXXIX.

Domine, probasti.

- 1, 2. LORD, Thou hast search'd me, and Thou know'st me
 well ;
 Thou mark'st my sitting down, and rising up :
 My dawning thoughts, imperfect and remote,
 Before thy prescience revealed lie.
- 3, 4. Thou art about my path ; about my bed
 Thou stand'st, and art acquainted with my ways :
 Though to my words my tongue no utterance gives,
 Voiceless, their sound is plainly heard by Thee.
- 5, 6. Behind, before, I'm compass'd by thy power ;
 Above me, and around, I feel thy hand :
 Such knowledge is too wonderful for me,
 Its height, excelling, towers above my reach.
- 7, 8. O whither from thy Spirit shall I go ?
 Or whither from thy presence shall I flee ?
 If up to heaven I ascend, Thou 'rt there ;
 If I go down to hell,—behold, Thou 'rt there.
- 9, 10. If on the morning's wings I take my flight,
 And past the furthest bounds of ocean dwell,
 There also shall I find thy guiding hand,
 The strength of thy right hand shall hold me there.

- 11, 12. If darkness I invoke to be my screen,
The night itself shall round me glow with light ;
For night hides not from Thee, but shines like day,
Darkness and light to Thee are both alike.
- 13, 14. 'Tis Thou hast form'd my reins : by Thee my frame
Was covered within my mother's womb :
I'll praise Thee, for I'm wonderfully made ;
The sight my soul inflames, yet fills with awe.
- 15, 16. Not hid from Thee my substance was, when first
In the dark loom its lineaments were wrought :
The matter, yet unshaped, thine eyes beheld,
Each limb, ere form'd, was written in thy book.
- 17, 18. How precious are thy thoughts toward me, O God,
How rich in love, how great their mercies' sum !
To count them, they're more numerous than the sand ;
With them I sleep, they fill my waking hours.
- 19, 20. Wilt Thou not slay the wicked, O my God ?
Depart then from me, ye blood-thirsty men !
For lo, thine enemies blaspheme thy name,
And, with their perjuries, thy vengeance mock.
- 21, 22. Do not I hate them that hate Thee, O Lord ?
And do not those that grieve Thee vex my soul ?
Behold I hate them with a perfect hatred,
And all thine enemies as mine I count.
- 23, 24. Search me, O God, and thoroughly sift my heart,
Try me, and penetrate my inmost thoughts :
See that no wickedness defile my soul,
And lead me in the everlasting way.

PSALM CXLV.

Exaltabo te, Deus.

- 1, 2. THEE I'll extol, O God my King,
 For ev'r and ev'r I'll bless thy name :
 I'll bless Thee each returning day,
 And praise thy name for ev'r and ev'r.
- 3, 4. God's great, and greatly to be praised ;
 His greatness is unsearchable :
 Age unto age shall praise his works,
 And shall declare his mighty acts.
- 5, 6. For me, I'll speak of thy renown,
 Thy majesty, and wondrous works :
 Whilst men around proclaim the might
 And terrors of thy vengeful arm.
- 6, 7. Thy greatness still shall be my theme,
 Whilst they, with songs on songs of praise,
 Cherish the grateful memory
 Of thy abundant kindnesses.
- 8, 9. Gracious is God, and merciful,
 Compassionate, and slow to wrath :
 The Lord is good to ev'ry man,
 His mercy is o'er all his works.

10, 11. Thy works shall all praise Thee, O Lord,
And all thy saints shall bless thy name :
Thy power they shall declare, and still
Thy kingdom's glory celebrate,—

12, 13. Until, to all the sons of men,
Thy mighty acts have been made known ;
And every nation has confess'd
Thy kingdom's glorious majesty.

13, 14. Thy kingdom everlasting is,
And thro' all ages stands thy rule :
Thy loving hand the falling stays,
And lifts the prostrate from the ground.

15, 16. The eyes of all wait on Thee, Lord,
Who giv'st to each his hour's demand :
Thou openest thine hand, and fill'st
All living things with plenteousness !

17, 18. Righteous is God in all his ways ;
Holy the Lord in all his works :
He's nigh to all that call on Him,
Yea, all that in Him put their trust.

19, 20. The yearning of the faithful heart
He satisfies, and hears its cry :
Those, whose love rests on Him, He saves ;
But all the wicked He destroys.

21. My mouth shall speak the praise of God ;
His love shall be my constant song :
And let all flesh his holy name
For ever and for ever bless !

LONDON :
GILBERT AND RIVINGTON, PRINTERS,
ST. JOHN'S SQUARE.

A

METRICAL VERSION

OF THE

BOOK OF PSALMS.

BY

THOMAS TURNER, ESQ.

FORMERLY FELLOW OF TRINITY COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE.

Dedicated

TO THE

RIGHT REV. CHARLES, LORD BISHOP OF MELBOURNE.

LONDON:

RIVINGTONS, WATERLOO PLACE.

1859.

WILKINSON'S

WILKINSON'S

LONDON:
GILBERT AND RIVINGTON, PRINTERS,
ST. JOHN'S SQUARE.

WILKINSON'S

WILKINSON'S

WILKINSON'S

TO THE RIGHT REV. THE LORD BISHOP OF MELBOURNE.

MY DEAR BISHOP,

To avoid the delay which would be occasioned by my sending an application to you at your distant diocese, and waiting for your reply, I venture to assume the permission which, I doubt not, would be accorded to me, and to dedicate to you, at once, the accompanying pages.

It is a great pleasure to me to do so, because it affords me the means of paying a tribute to a prelate whose name, I feel assured, will not only be long revered in the diocese over which he has presided, and for which he has effected so much, but will be also remembered with gratitude by the Colonial Churches in general, as having given them the first example of a regularly organized and legally established ecclesiastical constitution.

Nor is it less gratifying to me to have an opportunity of recording the uninterrupted friendship which I have myself enjoyed with you from our first introduction at Trinity College to the present hour, and at the same time of acknowledging my obligations to yourself and other like-minded friends for the sympathy and encouragement afforded me during the prosecution of the present work.

I remain,

My DEAR BISHOP,

Ever yours most sincerely,

THOMAS TURNER.

PREFACE.

IN laying before the Public a new metrical version of the Book of Psalms, the Author thinks it proper, in consequence of the dissatisfaction expressed by some of his friends, and not unlikely to be entertained by others of his readers, at the absence of rhyme, to state briefly his reasons for the course which he has adopted.

Though fully alive to the attractiveness of this popular finish to verses, and not forgetting that from long habit it is looked for almost as a matter of course in a metrical version of the Psalms, the Author has been induced to disregard these considerations for two reasons: first, because, notwithstanding the beauty of rhyme in itself, it has appeared to him that a rhyming version is not so suitable to the character of the sacred compositions before him as one which is merely rhythmical; and, secondly, because the introduction of rhyme would in his case (it might be different with a person of greater skill) have involved a wider departure from the literal meaning of the text, and prevented him from making use, to the extent that he has done, of the familiar and beautiful language of our authorized prose versions.

Here, however, an objection of a different kind arises on the part of other persons, who think that the versions just mentioned should be exclusively used, and all metrical versions whatever abandoned. Although, however, this opinion is supported by some weighty suffrages, the writer ventures to dissent from its justice, and to express his belief—notwithstanding the numerous instances of failure on the part both of himself and others—that the Psalms admit of being rendered with advantage in a metrical form, and that the effect of these compositions cannot, indeed, otherwise be fully appreciated by the English reader. In other words, the Author believes that the principle, which has been established by the practice of mankind in the case of profane writings, of rendering verse into verse, is applicable likewise to the poetry of the Holy Scriptures themselves. The objection, sometimes heard, against “putting David into fetters” will not be urged by those who know how artificial (if the expression be allowable) is the structure of the Psalms in their original form.

As regards the present production, no reader can be more sensible of its imperfections than the Author himself. And with respect even to those passages in which he imagines himself to have been most successful, he knows that the words of the writer, like the touches of the artist, frequently fail to awaken in other minds the thoughts which accompanied their production, and that lines, which to the penman himself were full of impressive meaning, often appear to the reader flat and insipid. Notwithstanding this, however, he trusts that his labours will be so far blessed by Him, whose favour he has sought, that some portions of his version will be read with pleasure by the devout student of the book upon which it has been his own happiness to be engaged. The metres of the majority of the Psalms will be found adapted to the common tunes, in case they should be thought suitable for the purposes of congregational or family worship.

In conclusion the Author has to observe that, in going over the Psalms, he has carefully examined the Hebrew text, and that he has ventured in some instances, (but in none without the sanction of authority,) to adopt a rendering at variance with our Bible translation. This licence he has, indeed, been compelled to assume in the case of those obscure passages, (happily not numerous,) in which the Bible version can hardly be said to present to the reader any distinct idea. With respect to a part, at least, of these, he hopes that the aid of subsequent criticism may have enabled him to give the real meaning of the original.

Guy's Hospital,
January, 1859.

THE
BOOK OF PSALMS.

PSALM I.

- 1, 2. BLESSED is he who hath not walk'd
With godless men in paths profane ;
Who hath not stood in sinners' ways,
Nor on the scoffer's seat sat down ;
But in the law of God delights,
And ponders, day and night, his law.
3. Like some fair tree, which, planted there
Where quickening streams their waters pour,
Her fruit in its due season yields,
And shines with bright unfading leaves,
The righteous man, by God beloved,
Shall prosper in whate'er he does.
- 4, 5, 6. Not so the wicked : like the chaff
Which by the wind is swept away,
They shall not in the judgment stand,
Nor in the assembly of the just :
For God doth note the just man's path,
But sinners' ways come all to nought.

PSALM II.

1, 2, 3. WHAT means this heathen gath'ring wild?
 What frenzy stirs the people's breasts?
 Earth's kings stand up, her chiefs combine
 'Gainst God and his Anointed One :
 Come, let us burst their bonds, they say,
 And cast away from us their cords.

4, 5, 6. He that in heaven sits shall laugh ;
 The Lord their counsels shall deride :
 Then shall He chide them in his wrath,
 And in his fury trouble them—
 " Behold, on Zion's holy hill,
 I have established my King ! "

7, 8. I will proclaim the Lord's decree :
 Thus saith my God—Thou art my Son,
 This day have I begotten Thee :
 Desire of Me, and I will give
 The heathen for thy heritage,
 For thy domain the ends of earth.

9, 10. With rod of iron Thou shalt rule
 Their turbulent and stubborn tribes,
 And like a potter's vessel break
 In pieces each rebellious band.
 Now therefore, O ye kings, be wise,
 And ye that judge the earth, be taught.

- 11, 12. Serve God with fear : in his free grace
Rejoice, but tremble at his power :
Pay the Son homage, lest his wrath,
O'ertake you with its sudden blaze,
And so ye perish from the way :
Blessed are all that trust in Him !
-

PSALM III.

A psalm of David, when fleeing from his son Absalom.

- 1, 2. LORD, how my foemen are increased,
How many 'gainst me rise !
How many tell my soul, there is
No help for him in God.
- 3, 4. But Thou my shield and glory art,
Thou liftest up my head :
God from his holy hill replies,
When unto Him I cry.
- 5, 6. I laid me down and slept ; I waked—
For God sustaineth me :
Though foes ten thousand hem me round,
I will not be afraid.
7. Arise, Lord ; save me, O my God ;
Thou that upon the cheek
Hast smitten all mine enemies,
And break'st the sinner's teeth !

8. Salvation to the Lord belongs,
He gives his servants strength :
Thy blessing, O our God, for aye,
Shall on thy people rest.
-

PSALM IV.

To the chief musician, for the stringed instruments. A psalm of David.

1. GOD of my righteousness, give ear,
Attend unto my cry :
Thou hast released me from distress,
In mercy hear my prayer !
2. How long will ye, ye sons of men,
Mine honour turn to shame ?
How long delight in vanity,
And follow after lies ?
3. Know that the Lord hath set apart
The godly for Himself :
The Lord will listen to my voice,
When on his name I call.
- 5, 6. Fear, and sin not : retired and still,
Hold converse with your hearts :
Make righteousness your sacrifice,
And trust upon the Lord.

6. Many there be that say, What man
Will show us any good?
O Lord, on us lift up the light
Of thy loved countenance !
7. Thou'st put within my heart a fount
Of joy surpassing theirs,
Whose teeming harvests bend with corn,
And overflow with wine.
8. In peace then I will lay me down,
And I will sleep in peace :
For Thou, O Lord, and Thou alone
In safety mak'st me dwell.
-

PSALM V.

To the chief musician, for the wind instruments. A psalm of David.

- 1, 2. GIVE ear, Lord, to my words,
Consider my desire :
Unto the voice of my complaint
Attend, my King and God !
- 2, 3. For unto Thee I pray :
Thou, Lord, my voice at morn
Shalt hear : on Thee at morn I'll wait,
And unto Thee look up.

- 4, 5. For Thou, the holy God,
 No pleasure hast in wrong :
No evil e'er shall dwell with Thee,
 Nor fools stand in thy sight.
- 5, 6. All who work wickedness
 Thou hatest ; who speak lies
Thou wilt destroy : the Lord abhors
 The man of blood and guile.
7. But I, in thy rich love,
 Will come into thy house ;
And in thy fear will bow myself
 Before thy sanctuary.
8. Watch'd by insidious foes,
 Lead me, thy servant, Lord,
In thy uprightness ; and make plain
 Thy way before my face.
9. Truth is not in their mouth,
 Their heart is very sin :
Their throat's an open sepulchre,
 They flatter with their tongue.
10. Pass sentence on them, Lord,
 Be their own plots their fall ;
With many a black rebellion stain'd,
 Cast out the apostate crew.
11. But let each trustful heart,
 And all who love thy name,
Rejoice, and ever with glad shouts
 Exult in thy defence.

12. For Thou, O Lord, wilt pour
Thy blessings on the just ;
With favour Thou, as with a shield,
Wilt compass him about.
-

PSALM VI.

To the chief musician, for the instrument of eight strings. A psalm of David.

- 1, 2. LORD, in thy wrath rebuke me not,
Nor smite me when thine anger burns ;
Have pity on me, for I'm weak ;
Lord, heal me, for my bones are vex'd.
- 3, 4. Behold, my soul is vexed sore :
But Thou, Lord—how long tarriest Thou ?
Return, O Lord, my soul set free ;
O save me for thy mercy's sake !
5. For no remembrances of Thee
Are heard from the closed lips of death :
And who thy praises shall recount
In the still chambers of the tomb ?
- 6, 7. I'm worn with groaning ; all night long
I steep my flooded couch with tears :
Mine eye with sorrow is consumed,
It waxeth old thro' all my foes.

- 8, 9. Workers of wickedness, begone :
The Lord has heard my voice of woe,
The Lord has heard my suppliant cry,
The Lord will listen to my prayer.
10. My foes shall all be put to shame,
And be confounded utterly :
Back to their place they shall return,
With fear and shame struck suddenly.
-

PSALM VII.

A song of David, which he sung unto the Lord concerning the words of Cush the Benjamite.

- 1, 2. My God, in Thee I've placed my trust ;
From all my persecutors, Lord,
Save and deliver me :
Lest the foe, like a lion, seize
And rend my soul, and none be by
To rescue or to save !
- 3, 4. My God, if I have done this wrong,
If wickedness be in my hand,
If evil I've return'd
To him that was at peace with me,
Yea, if I have despoil'd my foe,
Or harm'd him unprovoked—

5. Then let mine enemy have leave
To persecute and take my soul,
Abandon'd to his will :
Yea, let him tread my forfeit life
Down on the ground, and let him lay
Mine honour in the dust.
- 6, 7. Rise, Lord, in wrath : lift up Thyself
Against mine adversaries' rage ;
Thy promised judgment haste :
So shall the people round Thee throng ;
For their sakes, then, return, O Lord,
And be exalted high !
- 8, 9. Judge of the people ! judge me, Lord,
According to my righteousness,
And my heart's innocence :
Oh, let the bad works of bad men
Come to an end : but, righteous Lord,
Establish Thou the just.
- 10, 11. For the Lord tries the hearts and reins :
On God, who saves the true of heart,
I trust for my defence :
On God, who dealeth every day
His righteous judgments ; yea, on God,
Whose vengeance doth not sleep.
- 12, 13. Who will not turn, against that man
The Lord his sword will whet ; his bow
Already He hath bent,
And on the fitted cord hath laid
The destined instruments of death,
And tipp'd his shafts with fire !

- 14, 15. Behold, he travaileth with sin,
He hath conceivèd vanity,
And he will bring forth lies :
He digs and hollows out a pit,
But he shall fall into the ditch
For others made so deep.
- 16, 17. On his own head his wickedness
Shall be return'd, and on himself
His violence recoil ;
But I will sing the praise of God,
And for his righteousness extol
The name of God Most High.
-

PSALM VIII.

To the chief musician at wine-press tide. A psalm of David.

1. JEHOVAH, Lord, through all the earth
How glorious is thy name :
Thou, who upon the heavens hast spread
Thy radiant majesty !
2. To still the fury of thy foes,
And stay the avenger's hand,
Thou'st planted strength in sucklings' lips,
And in the mouth of babes.

3. When on the expanded heavens I gaze,
Thy fingers' workmanship :
The moon, and the unnumber'd stars,
Array'd by thy word—
4. What is a mortal, Lord, I cry,
That Thou regardest him ?
And what the son of earth-born man,
That him Thou visitest ?
- 5, 6. Made little lower than divine,
With glory crown'd and power,
Thou giv'st him mastery o'er thy works,
The creatures of thy hand.
- 6, 7. All things beneath his feet Thou'st placed,
Submitted to his will :
All sheep and oxen, and each beast
That o'er the desert roams ;
- 8, 9. The fowls of air, and every fish
That wends thro' ocean's paths.
Jehovah, Lord, through all the earth,
How glorious is thy name !

PSALM IX.

To the chief musician. A psalm of David.

1, 2. WITH my whole heart I'll praise Thee, Lord,
And grateful speak of all thy marvellous works ;
In Thee I will rejoice, in Thee
Exult, O Thou Most High, and sing thy glorious name.

3, 4. For, lo ! my foes are turned back,
Before thy countenance they fall and die :
For Thou hast judged and done me right,
Thou'rt seated on the throne, a judge of righteousness.

5, 6. Thou, Lord, the heathen hast rebuked,
Destroy'd the wicked, and put out their name :
Eternal ruin whelms the foe ;
His cities Thou hast razed ; their memory's with them lost.

7, 8. But God for ever shall abide ;
His throne in judgment He has firmly fix'd :
In justice He will judge the world,
And all the nations try with perfect equity.

9, 10. The Lord a refuge shall be found,
In troublous times a refuge for the oppress'd :
They'll trust in Thee who know thy name,
For, them that trust Thee, Lord, thy help has never fail'd.

- 11, 12. To God who dwells in Zion sing ;
Among the people of his doings tell :
Them He remembers, when for blood
Inquiring, nor forgets the cry of the distress'd.
13. Have mercy on me, O my God,
Consider the affliction which of them
That hate me I long time have borne,
Thou that dost lift me up, e'en from the gates of death.
- 14, 15. So will I make thy praises heard
Within the gates where Zion's daughter sits :
In thy salvation I'll rejoice,
Whilst into their own pit the heathen are sunk down.
- 15, 16. In the same net which privily
They laid in ambush is their own foot caught :
The Lord is by his judgments known,
By his own hands' device the wicked is ensnared.
- 17, 18. The wicked shall go down to hell,
And all the nations which forget the Lord :
But not for ever shall be lost
The poor man's memory nor the sufferer's patient hope.
- 19, 20. Up, Lord, and let not man prevail ;
Before thy presence be the heathen judged :
Strike terror into them, O Lord,
And let the heathen know that they themselves are men.

PSALM X.

- 1, 2. WHY standest Thou afar off, Lord?
 In time of trouble why hidest Thou thy face?
 See with what pride the wicked swells,
 And persecutes the poor and helpless sufferer.
- 2, 3. Let him be taken in the wiles
 He has himself devised—the impious, who
 Glories in his vain heart's desire,
 And blessed calls base gain, abhorred of the Lord.
- 4, 5. The impious in disdainful pride
 Seeks not for God, and dreams that God is not!
 His ways are full of violence,
 Whilst far above him rest unread thy judgments high.
- 5, 6. Scornful his enemies he mocks,
 For in his heart he says, From age to age
 Unshaken still shall I abide,
 No dark misfortune e'er my prosperous state shall change.
- 7, 8. Deceit and cunning fill his mouth;
 Beneath his tongue are vanity and sin:
 Crouching, about the folds he prowls,
 Watches with greedy eye, and subtly slays the poor.

- 9, 10. As lurks the lion in his lair,
So in his ambush lurks the ravisher,
To catch the helpless in his toils,
Whom, drawn into his net, he ruthlessly devours.
- 11, 12. In feign'd humility he stoops
In his strong toils the helpless troop to seize :
Whilst in his heart he says, The Lord
Forgets, He turns away his face, He will not see.
- 13, 14. Rise, Lord ; lift up thine hand, O God ;
Forget not Thou the poor afflicted soul :
Why should the impious man blaspheme,
And say within his heart, Thou never wilt inquire ?
- 15, 16. But Thou hast seen ; for Thou behold'st,
Thy hand avenges wickedness and wrong :
The poor commits himself to Thee,
Thou Saviour of the oppress'd—Friend of the fatherless !
- 17, 18. Break Thou the sinner's impious arm ;
Let his bad deeds be sought and no where found :
The Lord is King for evermore ;
The heathen from his land are perished and gone.
- 19, 20. Lord, Thou hast heard the mourners' sigh :
Their hearts Thou'lt comfort, and wilt bend thine ear
To judge the orphan and the oppress'd,
That the proud child of earth no more may tyrannize.

PSALM XI.

To the chief musician. A psalm of David.

- 1, 2. IN God I put my trust :
 How say ye to my soul,
 Poor sparrow, fly, and hie thee to thy hill ?
 For lo ! the ungodly bend their bow
 And fit the arrow to the string,
 To shoot from ambush dark the men of upright heart.
- 3, 4. Each prop and stay o'erthrown,
 What shall the righteous do ?
 The Lord within his holy temple dwells,
 The throne of God in heaven is set :
 His eyes behold the works of men,
 His watchful eyelids try the children of mankind.
- 5, 6. The Lord the righteous tries,
 But the ungodly man
 And whoso violence loves, his soul abhors :
 Upon the ungodly He shall rain
 Fire, brimstone, thunderbolts, wild storms,
 And suffocating blasts—the portion of their cup.
7. For God the righteous loveth righteousness,
 And turns his countenance upon the just.

PSALM XII.

To the chief musician, for the instrument of eight strings. A psalm of David.

- 1, 2. HELP, Lord, the godly are no more,
 The faithful ones have perish'd from mankind :
 Each to his fellow speaketh lies,
 With treacherous lips they speak, and from a double
 heart.
- 3, 4. Cut off, O Lord, all treacherous lips,
 And tongues that speak proud things ; yea, those who say,
 By force of tongue we will prevail,
 Are not our lips our own—who shall be lord o'er us ?
5. Now for the helpless sufferer's sigh,
 And for the sake of the despoiled poor,
 Thus saith the Lord, I will arise,
 In safety from his grasp I'll place the proud one's prey.
6. The words of God are words most pure,
 As silver which, in earthen furnace laid,
 Has, molten, from its dross been purged,
 And by the cleansing fire been seven times purified.
- 7, 8. Thy words, O Lord, Thou wilt maintain,
 And save us ever from this race accursed :
 Though on all sides the wicked throng,
 And 'mongst the sons of men the vilest bear the sway.

PSALM XIII.

To the chief musician. A psalm of David.

- 1, 2. How long wilt Thou forget me quite, O Lord?
 How long wilt Thou avert from me thy face?
 How long shall cares each day distract my soul,
 And grief my heart? How long shall o'er me vaunt my foe?
- 3, 4. Look down and answer me, O Lord my God;
 Lighten mine eyes, that I sleep not in death:
 Let not my foe say, I have conquer'd him,
 Nor my beleaguerer rejoice at my o'erthrow.
- 5, 6. For in thy mercy I have put my trust;
 In thy salvation shall my heart rejoice:
 I'll sing to God, who hath requited me,
 Yea, I will celebrate the name of God Most High.

PSALM XIV.

To the chief musician. A psalm of David.

1. THE fool within his heart
 Hath said, There is no God!
 Corrupt, in deeds detestable,
 There's none that doeth good.

2. The Lord from heaven look'd down
Upon the sons of men,
To see if any understood,
If any sought for God.
3. They all have gone astray,
They're rotten altogether :
There is not any that doth good,
• There is not even one.
4. Have all this vicious race
No knowledge, which eat up
My people as they'd eat up bread,
And call not on the Lord ?
5. But they shall be afraid
With an exceeding fear,
For 'midst the sons of righteousness
The Lord Himself is found.
6. Thwarting, ye turn to scorn
The counsels of the poor :
In vain, for their defence is strong,
Their refuge is the Lord.
7. Who will from Zion give Freedom to Israel ?
When the Lord brings his people back,
From captive state redeem'd,
Then Jacob shall rejoice,
And Israel be glad.

PSALM XV.

A psalm of David.

- 1, 2. LORD, who shall in thy tabernacle rest ?
 Or who shall dwell upon thy holy hill ?
 E'en he whose walk is pure, whose deeds are just,
 Who speaketh from his heart the words of truthfulness.
- 3, 4. Whose tongue no slander bears, who never wrongs,
 Nor scoffing wounds his neighbour or his friend ;
 Whose eyes severe the reprobate contemn,
 But who with honour loads the servants of the Lord.
- 4, 5. Who sweareth to his hurt and changes not ;
 Who without usury ungrudging lends ;
 Who 'gainst the guiltless never takes a bribe :
 The man that doth these things shall not be moved for ever.
-

PSALM XVI.

A golden ode of David.

- 1, 2. KEEP me, O God, for Thou'rt my hope :
 I've said unto the Lord,
 My Lord, Thou only art my good,
 Besides Thee there is none !

3. Among the holy ones of earth,
And men of noted worth ;
Among the sons of righteousness,
Alone I find delight.
4. Their sorrows shall be multiplied
That elsewhere homage pay :
I will not their blood-off'rings share,
Nor name them with my lips.
- 5, 6. Lord, Thou my cup's rich portion art,
And dost maintain my lot :
My lines have dropp'd on pleasant grounds,
My heritage is fair.
- 7, 8. I'll bless the Lord, who cares for me ;
My reins, too, every night
Shall chasten me : I'll always set
The Lord before my face.
- 8, 9. Because at my right hand He stands,
I shall not be disturb'd.
Therefore my heart and tongue rejoice,
My flesh shall rest in hope—
10. For Thou wilt not abandon me,
Nor leave my soul in hell ;
Nor wilt permit thy Holy One
To feel corruption's power.
11. Thou'lt show to me the path of life :
Before thy presence stands
Fulness of joy : at thy right hand
Eternal pleasures wait.

PSALM XVII.

A prayer of David.

- 1, 2. LORD, hear the right ; attend unto my cry ;
List to my prayer, which falls not from false lips :
From thine own presence let my sentence come,
And let thine eyes be fix'd on equity.
3. Thou'st tried my heart, yea, searched it by night ;
Thou hast assay'd me, but hast found no blame :
For I resolved my mouth should not offend,
Nor be conformed to the works of men.
- 4, 5. Taught by the words which issue from thy lips,
I've kept myself from the transgressor's ways :
O hold Thou up my goings in thy paths,
Guard still my footsteps, that they may not slide.
- 6, 7. On Thee I've call'd, for Thou wilt answer me ;
Incline thine ear, O Lord, and hear my words :
Show forth thy goodness, Thou, whose right hand saves
Thy trustful servants from uprising foes.
- 8, 9. O keep me as the apple of an eye,
Hide me beneath the shadow of thy wings,
Safe from the sight of wicked ravagers,
From deadly foes which compass me about.

- 10, 11. Vain-glorious men, encaséd in their fat,
 From whose mouths issue pride and arrogance,
 Already have they prowld about our steps ;
 They fix upon the ground their lowering eyes—
- 12, 13. Like to a lion thirsting for his prey,
 Or lion's whelp in secret covert crouch'd.
 O rise, prevent them, Lord, and cast them down,
 Let thy sword save me from the wicked one.
14. From mortal men let thy hand keep me, Lord ;
 From mortal men of earth, whose portion lies
 In this their life, where Thou their bellies fill'st,
 And feed'st them thankless from thy treasure-house.
15. These men with children are replenished,
 And wealth abundant to their offspring leave :
 But let me see thy face in righteousness,
 And on th' effulgence of thy presence feast !

 PSALM XVIII.

To the chief musician. A psalm of David, the servant of the Lord, who spake unto the Lord the words of this song in the day that the Lord delivered him from the hand of all his enemies, and from the hand of Saul. And he said,

- 1, 2, 3. THEE I will love, O Lord my strength :
 The Lord my hold and fortress is,
 And my deliverer :

He is my God, my rock of trust,
My buckler, my salvation's horn,
My refuge, and my tower.
Upon the Lord, the ever-bless'd,
I'll call, and so shall I be saved
From all my enemies.

4, 5, 6. The pangs of death about me clung,
The floods of sin dismayed me,
Hell's torments round me rose,
The snares of death before me lay :
In my distress I call'd on God,
Yea, cried unto the Lord :
He from his temple heard my voice,
My cry before his presence came,
It entered his ear.

7, 8, 9. Then quailing shook the solid earth,
The strong foundations of the hills
Quiver'd beneath his wrath :
Smoke from his streaming nostrils rose,
Out of his mouth devouring flames
Kindled the lightning's fires !
He bow'd the heavens and came down ;
Beneath his feet the massy dark
Its cloudy billows roll'd.

10, 11, 12. On cherub's wings upborne he flew,
On cherub winged with the wind
His rushing flight he sped :
In darkness deep his chamber lay,
Around, dark waters and thick clouds
His tabernacle made.

Thick clouds before his glory pass'd,
Before his dazzling presence flew
Hailstones and coals of fire !

13, 14, 15. The Lord from heaven thundered,
The Highest uttered his voice—
Hailstones and coals of fire !
Around his thunderbolts He threw,
His flashing lightnings He shot forth,
And scattered my foes :
Then were the ocean's depths reveal'd,
The world's foundations were laid bare
At thy rebuke, O Lord,
Before thy nostrils' breath.

16, 17, 18. From high He stretched forth his hand,
Took hold of me, and drew me forth
From whelming hosts of waves :
He snatch'd me from the violence
And hatred of my enemies,
Who were too strong for me :
They came against me in the day
Of my affliction, but the Lord
Was my support and stay.

19, 20, 21. He brought me forth, and set me free ;
Because He took delight in me,
He placéd me at large :
According to my righteousness
And to the cleanness of my hands
The Lord rewarded me :
Because I kept the ways of God,
And never wickedly transgress'd,
Nor swervéd from the Lord.

22, 23, 24. For all his ordinances stood
Before me, nor did I remove
His statutes from my sight :
But I walk'd with Him blamelessly,
And from offence I kept my steps :
So for my righteousness
And for the cleanness of my hands
Before his eyes display'd, the Lord
Hath giv'n me recompense.

25, 26, 27. Mercy to him that's merciful
Thou show'st, and to the perfect man
Reveal'st thy perfectness :
The pure thy purity beholds,
And whosoe'er perversely walks
Thy judgments adverse finds :
For Thou thy people wilt release
From their affliction, but bring down
The proud man's lofty eye.

28, 29, 30. 'Tis Thou hast lighted up my lamp,
The Lord my God illuminates
The darkness of my path :
For by thy aid I have assail'd
A troop of men ; yea, thro' my God
I've leaped o'er a wall.
Lo ! perfect is God's way ; his words
As gold refined : a buckler He
To all that trust in Him.

31, 32, } For who is God except the Lord ?

33, 34. } Or who a rock except our God ?

God girdeth me with strength,

And gives perfection to my way :
He makes my feet like feet of hinds,
And sets me up on high :
By Him my hands are taught to war,
And my invigorated arms
A bow of iron break.

35, 36, 37. Thou gav'st me thy salvation's shield,
And thy right hand did hold me up,
Thy kindness made me great :
Thou laid'st for me a pathway broad,
And didst not let my footsteps slip :
So I pursued my foes ;
Their flying hosts I overtook,
Nor did I backward turn my steps
Until they were consumed.

38, 39, 40. With deadly wounds I pierced them through,
Beneath my feet they prostrate fell
No more to rise again :
For Thou didst gird me round with strength
For battle, and beneath me cast
Those who against me rose.
Yea, my foes' necks Thou gavest me,
And yielded to my vengeful hand
All those who hated me.

41, 42. They cried, but no deliverer came,
Upon the Lord of Hosts they call'd,
But He no answer gave :
Then did I grind them small as dust
Toss'd by the wind ; I trod them down
As mire upon the streets.

43, 44, 45. Thou'st saved me from the people's strife,
And made me head of heathen tribes,
Lord o'er a race unknown :
The ear that hears me shall attend,
The stranger's sons shall hide their hate,
And feign'd allegiance swear :
With panic struck the stranger's sons
Shall tremble in their fastnesses,
And with'ring fade away.

46, 47, 48. Jehovah lives : bless'd be my rock ;
The God of my salvation be
Exalted upon high :
'Tis God who shall avenge my cause,
It is the Lord who will subdue
The people to my rule.
He saves me from my enemies ;
Yea, Thou, O God, dost lift me up
Above each threatening foe.

48, 49, 50. Because Thou hast deliver'd me
From the rude sons of violence,
Therefore to Thee, O Lord,
Among the heathen I'll give thanks,
And sing the praises of thy name.
The Lord will on his king
Salvation heap, yea, mercy show
To David, his anointed one,
And to his seed for ever.

PSALM XIX.

To the chief musician. A psalm of David.

- 1, 2. THE heavens proclaim the glory of God,
And the firmament speaks of his handy-work :
Day pours forth to day her flood of song,
And her lessons night unto night unfolds.
- 3, 4. No audible song : no sound of words :
From the heavens no voice by the ear is heard :
Yet their accents have vibrated through the earth,
And their speech has gone out to the ends of the world.
- 4, 5. A pavilion in them hath He set for the sun,
Which, clothed with light, like a bridegroom comes
From his chamber forth, and along his course
Like a racer of strength rejoicing runs.
6. From the borders of heaven he issueth forth,
And, circuiting over the arch'd expanse,
To the borders of heaven again comes down,
And nothing is hid from his searching heat.
7. The law of the Lord is a perfect law,
And the soul with life inspires :
The testimonies of the Lord are sure,
And make the simple wise.

8. The statutes of the Lord are right,
And fill the heart with joy :
Pure the commandments of the Lord,
Enlightening the eyes.
9. The fear of God is undefiled,
And standeth fast for ever :
The judgments of the Lord are truth,
And perfect righteousness.
10. More precious far are they than gold,
Yea, more than much fine gold :
Sweeter than honey, yea, more sweet
Than droppings of the comb.
11. Moreover, by their warning voice
Thy servant is preserved :
And whoso keepeth them is bless'd
With largest recompense.
12. Lord, who his errors understands,
Or wanderings can trace ?
Cleanse me, Thou God, who know'st my heart,
From every hidden fault.
13. And let not o'er thy servant's soul
Proud recklessness bear sway :
So shall I 'scape the stain and guilt
Of many a grievous sin.
14. Let every word my mouth shall speak,
Each thought my heart conceives,
Be pleasing in thy sight, O Lord,
My Saviour and my Rock !

PSALM XX.

To the chief musician. A psalm of David.

- 1, 2. THE Lord in day of trouble hear thee !
 The name of Jacob's God defend thee !
 Help from his sanctuary send thee !
 And out of Zion give thee strength !
- 3, 4. The Lord thine offerings remember,
 Accept thy burning sacrifices,
 Grant thee whate'er thine heart desireth,
 And all thy purposes fulfil.
- 5, 6. We will rejoice in thy salvation,
 And in God's name set up our banners :
 The Lord accomplish thy petitions,
 The Lord, who his anointed saves !
- 6, 7. I know that from his holy heaven
 He'll hear, and with his right hand save him ;
 Let others trust in horse or chariot,
 Our name of strength is God the Lord.
- 8, 9. Down are they brought and low are fallen,
 But in God's strength we're upright risen :
 Help, Lord : may God, our King, be with us ;
 And may He hear us, when we call !

PSALM XXI.

To the chief musician. A psalm of David.

- 1, 2. THE king shall rejoice in thy strength, O Lord,
And greatly exult in thy saving help :
The desire of his heart Thou hast granted him ;
The request of his lips Thou hast not denied.
- 3, 4. Thou hast met him with blessings of choicest good,
And set on his head a pure crown of gold :
He asked for life, and Thou gav'st it him,
Yea, length of days for ever and ever !
- 5, 6. His glory is great in thy salvation,
Thou hast clothed him with honour and majesty :
Thou hast given him blessings for ever and ever,
And with joy from thy countenance gladden'd his heart.
- 7, 8. For the king on the goodness of God shall rely ;
And through the Most High he shall not be moved :
Thy hand shall discover thy secret foes,
Thy right hand find out those that hate thy name.
9. When Thou showest thy face, they shall shrivel and fall,
Like straw at the touch of the furnace's fire ;
The Lord in his anger shall swallow them up,
The fire of destruction shall make them its prey.

- 10, 11. Their fruit Thou shalt smite, and take off from the earth,
And their seed from among the children of men :
For on mischief against Thee their minds were intent,
They contrived a device they could not perform.
- 12, 13. For soon dost Thou make them to turn their backs,
When against them thine arrows Thou levellest ;
O Lord, in thy might be exalted high ;
Thy name be our praise, and thy glory our song !
-

PSALM XXII.

To the chief musician. On the harp, at break of day. A psalm of David.

- 1, 2, 3. My God, my God, why hast Thou left me thus Forsaken, from thy help so far removed :
Unheard my loud lament, my bitter cry ?
My God, all day I call, but no reply
From Thee returns ; all night I vent my groans :
Yet Thou art holy, Thou, midst Israel's praises throned !
- 4, 5. Our fathers trusted in Thee : they reposed
Their trust in Thee, and Thou delivered'st them :
They call'd upon Thee, and by Thee were saved ;
On Thee they set their trust, and were not put to shame.

6, 7, 8. But I'm a wretched worm, and not a man,
 The rabble's jest, by all the people scorn'd ;
 All who behold, deride my abject state,
 They curl their lips, and shake their heads at me—
 "He trusted in the Lord to be his help ;
 Let Him deliver him now, since He delights in him."

9, 10, 11. Yet Thou art He that took me from the womb,
 And wast my hope, when on my mother's breast :
 E'en from my birth, on Thee I have been thrown,
 Yea, from my mother's womb, Thou art my God !
 Let not thy strength be far from me, O Lord,
 For trouble is at hand, and there is none to help !

12, 13, } Behold, what herds of bulls about me close ;
 14. } How Bashan's mighty ones beset me round !
 They gape upon me with wide-open'd mouths,
 As ravening lions roaring for their prey.
 Like water I dissolve : my bones unhinged
 Fall loose : my heart like wax within my bowels melts.

15, 16, } My strength is dried up like baked clay ; my tongue
 17, 18. } Cleaves to my jaws : Thou'st brought me down to dust !

Lo, dogs prowl round me : bands of evil men
 About me hang : they pierce my hands and feet !
 I count my bones ; they gaze, they stare upon me ;
 They part my garments, for my vesture they cast lots.

19, 20, } But Thou, O Lord, be Thou not far from me :
 21. } Haste Thee to help me, O my God, my strength !
 Save my soul from the sword ; from the sharp claw
 Of dog, and from the lion's mouth preserve

My precious one : O Thou, who heard'st my cry,
As on me rushing drove the unicorn's dread horns !

- 22, 23, } Amongst my brethren I'll declare thy name,
24. } And midst the assembled people chaunt thy praise ;
 O all ye seed of Jacob, ye that fear
 The Lord, his praises chaunt ; Him glorify,
 And reverence Him, ye seed of Israel !
For He hath not despised the mourner's misery,
- 24, 25, } Nor hath abhorr'd ; He hath not hid from him
26. } His face, but to his groans hath lent his ear.
 My praise of Thee the assembled tribes shall hear,
 And they that fear Thee, see me pay my vows.
 The meek shall eat and have enough : who seek
The Lord shall praise his name : their heart shall live for ever.
- 27, 28, } The ends of earth shall all remember God,
29. } And turn unto the Lord : the kindred tribes
 Of all the nations shall adore his name :
 For power and empire are the Lord's alone ;
 Among the nations He is Governor :
The fat ones of the earth shall eat, and worship Him.
- 29, 30, } They too shall worship, who go down to dust,
31. } He, whose strength fails to keep his soul alive :
 A seed shall serve the Lord, a chosen race
 Which shall be counted to Him for his own :
 Lo, they shall come, to people yet unborn
To show his righteousness, and tell what God has done.

PSALM XXIII.

A psalm of David.

- 1, 2. THE Lord is my Shepherd ; I shall not want :
On the soft tender grass He shall lay me down,
There, where the fresh herbage my pasture provides,
And lead me beside the still waters of peace.
3. The Lord, for the sake of his holy name,
My soul shall redeem, and to health restore,
And shall teach my wandering feet to tread
Secure in the paths of righteousness.
4. Yea, though through the valley I walk, where hang
The dark shadows of death, I will fear no ill :
For Thou art with me—thy rod and thy staff,
Lo, they are my comfort, my trust, and my stay.
5. In the presence of deadliest foes Thou hast spread
A table of plenty before my face :
My head Thou’st anointed with richest oil ;
With fulness of blessings my cup overflows.
6. Lo, goodness and tenderest mercies shall meet,
And follow my steps all the days of my life :
Yea, as long as my days shall endure I will make
My abode in the house of the Lord my God.

PSALM XXIV.

A psalm of David.

- 1, 2. THE earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof,
The world, and all they that dwell therein :
In strength He hath based it against the seas,
And against the floods He hath made it firm.
- 3, 4. But who shall ascend to the mount of God ?
And who shall stand up where his Holiness dwells ?
The man of clean hands and pure heart, whose soul
Hath ne'er framed a lie, nor in guile hath sworn.
- 5, 6. With blessings shall he from the Lord be crown'd,
And from God, his salvation, with righteousness :
For this is the race that regards the Lord,
And that seeks thy face, O Jacob's God !
- 7, 8. Lift up, O ye gates, your heads on high !
And be ye uplifted, eternal doors !
And the King of glory shall enter in.
But who is this King of glory, who ?
'Tis the Lord, the Strong and the Mighty One,
The Lord, in the battle mighty.
- 9, 10. Lift up, O ye gates, your heads on high !
Yea, lift up yourselves, ye eternal doors !
And the King of glory shall enter in.
But who is this King of glory, who ?
It is the Lord, the Lord of Hosts :
He is the King of glory !

PSALM XXV.

By David.

- 1, 2, 3. To Thee, O Lord, I lift my soul : my God,
 In Thee I've trusted, put me not to shame,
 Nor o'er me let mine enemies exult.
 Yea, let not one who waits on Thee, O Lord,
 Be brought to shame ; be shame reserved for those
 Who without cause transgress, and fall away from God !
- 4, 5, 6. Show me thy ways, and let me learn thy paths,
 Yea, lead me in thy truth, and teach it me :
 For Thou, O Lord, art my salvation's God,
 For Thee I've waited all the live-long day :
 O think upon thy tender-mercies, Lord,
 And loving-kindnesses which have been e'er of old !
- 7, 8, 9. My youth's offences and backslidings, Lord,
 Remember not, but in thy tender love,
 And for thy goodness' sake, remember me !
 The Lord is good and upright ; He will teach
 The way to sinners : He the meek will guide
 In paths of righteousness : the meek He'll learn his way.
- 10, 11, } The ways of God are goodness all, and truth,
 12. } To those that keep his covenant and his laws :
 Yea, for thy name's sake, Lord, Thou wilt forgive
 My oft transgressions, and my grievous sins.
 What man is this that reverences the Lord ?
 Lo, him his God shall teach the way which He approves.

- 13, 14, } His soul shall in felicity repose,
 15. } And o'er the land his numerous seed be spread.
 To those that fear the Lord, He will impart
 His secret counsels, and make known his laws.
 Mine eyes are ever looking to the Lord,
 For He shall draw my feet in safety from the net.
- 16, 17, } O look on me, and let me feel thy love,
 18. } For I'm forlorn, and in great misery :
 More and more wide my heart's afflictions spread,
 O draw me out and save me from my woes.
 Behold my wretchedness, and my distress,
 Then, Lord, in mercy come, and take away my sins !
- 19, 20, } Behold my foes, how numerous their host,
 21, 22, } And what fell hatred they against me bear :
 Oh keep my soul, save and deliver me ;
 In Thee I've trusted, put me not to shame.
 Let Right defend me, for on Thee I wait :
 From all her troubles, Lord, O rescue Israel !

 PSALM XXVI.

By David.

- 1, 2, 3. LORD, judge me, for I've walk'd in uprightness ;
 In God I've trusted, let me stumble not :
 Try me, O Lord, and put me to the proof,
 Explore my reins, and search into my heart :
 For I have e'er thy loving-kindness kept
 Before mine eyes, and walked in thy truth.

- 4, 5. With men of falsehood I have not sat down,
Nor enter'd where the sons of darkness dwell :
The troops of evil-doers I abhor,
Nor with the wicked will I take my rest.
- 6, 7. My hands I will in innocency wash,
And so approach unto thine altar, Lord,
To make the voice of my thanksgiving heard,
And all the wonders of thy hand proclaim.
- 8, 9, 10. Lord, I have loved thine house ; with joy I've sought
The place where rests thy glory's tabernacle :
O then, with sinners gather not my soul,
Nor take my life away, with men of blood,
Whose hands in deeds of mischief are imbrued,
And whose right hands are filled full with bribes.
- 11, 12. But as for me, I'll walk in uprightness ;
O save me, and in mercy keep me, Lord :
Firm let my foot on even ground be placed,
And in the assembly I will bless the Lord !
-

PSALM XXVII.

By David.

1. THE Lord is my light, and my saving help ;
Whom then have I to fear ?
The Lord is the strength of my life, of whom
Have I to be afraid ?

2. When against me, in haste to devour my flesh,
 The wicked band advanced
Of my haters and persecuting foes,
 They stumbled and they fell !
3. Though against me encamp a camped host,
 My heart shall know no fear :
Though against me arise the battle's swell,
 Here, too, will I trust in God !
4. One thing I have ask'd, and will seek from the Lord—
 In the house of the Lord to dwell
All the days of my life, the Lord's beauty to see,
 And thereon in his temple muse.
5. In his tent he shall hide me in evil days ;
 Yea, in the secret place
Of his house He shall screen me, and keep me safe,
 Then lift me upon a rock.
6. And now shall my head be exalted above
 Mine enemies round about :
Then to the pavilion of God I will bring
 A sacrifice of joy ;
I will sing, and with music lift up to the Lord
 A jubilee of praise.
- 7, 8. Hearken, O Lord, to my voice : I cry—
 Have mercy, and answer me :
When Thou saidst, Seek my face ; my heart replied,
 Thy face will I seek, O Lord !
9. Hide not thy countenance from me, nor turn
 In wrath from thy servant, Lord :

My help Thou hast been ; O abandon me not,
Nor forsake me, O Lord, my strength !

10, 11. When my father and mother forsake me, the Lord
His kindly shelter gives :
O teach me thy way, and, because of my foes,
In a plain path lead me, Lord.

12. To the cruel will of mine enemies
Deliver me not, O Lord ;
For against me arise false witnesses
And breathers of violence.

13, 14. Oh, if I had not believed I should look
On the goodness of the Lord
And his love in the land of the living feel—
But wait upon the Lord ;
Have courage, and He shall establish your heart ;
O wait upon the Lord !

PSALM XXVIII.

By David.

1. To Thee I cry, O Lord, my rock !
Turn not in silence from my prayer ;
Lest, while Thou'rt silent, I become
Like those that sink into the pit.
2. The voice of my petitions hear,
When unto Thee I humbly cry :
When, towards thy holy oracle,
I lift my supplicating hands.

3. Drag me not off with wicked men
And workers of iniquity,
Who to their neighbours speak of peace,
While mischief rankles in their hearts.
4. Give them according to their deeds,
And to their acts of wickedness :
Give them the wages of their hands,
Requite them after their desert.
5. Because they have not understood
God's works, nor what his hands have wrought,
The Lord shall therefore in his wrath
Destroy them, and ne'er build them up.
- 6, 7. Blessed be God, for He hath heard
The earnest voice of my desires :
The Lord my strength is, and my shield,
In Him my heart hath placed its trust.
- 7, 8. From Him I have received help,
My heart shall therefore leap for joy :
With songs I'll magnify the Lord,
Who is his people's strength and might.
- 8, 9. God saveth his Anointed One,
O save thy people then, and bless
Thine heritage ; yea, feed them, Lord,
And lift them up for evermore.

PSALM XXIX.

A psalm of David.

- 1, 2. ASCRIBE to the Lord, ye sons of the mighty,
 Ascribe to the Lord all glory and strength :
 To the Lord give the glory due to his name,
 In the beauty of holiness worship the Lord !
- 3, 4. 'Tis the voice of the Lord which commands the waves ;
 'Tis the glorious God who in thunder is heard :
 'Tis the Lord who commands the watery hosts ;
 The voice of the Lord is majestic in strength.
- 5, 6. The voice of the Lord the stout cedars breaks ;
 Yea, Lebanon's cedars before Him fall :
 As a frolicksome calf He makes Lebanon skip,
 And Sirion leap like an Unicorn's foal.
- 7, 8, 9. The voice of the Lord cleaves the flames of fire ;
 The voice of the Lord makes the wilderness heave :
 The Lord makes the desert of Kadesh shake ;
 The voice of the Lord makes the hinds to wail,
 And the forest lays bare : in his temple's courts
 All his people aloud of his glory speak.
- 10, 11. The Lord o'er the water-floods sits enthroned ;
 Yea, the Lord sits enthronèd a king for ever :
 The Lord of his love gives his people strength ;
 The Lord gives his people the blessing of peace !

PSALM XXX.

A psalm of David. A song at the dedication of his house.

1. THEE I will magnify, O Lord,
 For Thou hast raised me up ;
 And hast not made mine enemies
 To triumph over me.

- 2, 3. O Lord my God, I cried to Thee,
 And Thou hast healed me :
 Thou'st brought my soul up from the grave,
 Thou'st kept me, Lord, alive.

- 3, 4. Thou'st saved me from the pit : O sing,
 Ye saints, unto the Lord :
 In memory keep, with thanksgiving,
 His holiness and truth.

5. His wrath for but a moment bides,
 Life in his favour lives ;
 The night in weeping may be spent,
 But joy the morning greets.

- 6, 7. In my prosperity I said,
 I never shall be moved ;
 Thou, of thy goodness, Lord, hadst made
 My mountain stand so strong.

7, 8. But Thou didst turn away thy face,
And then I was disturb'd ;
I cried to Thee, O Lord ; I made
My prayer unto my God—

9, 10. What profit is there in my blood,
When in the pit I sink ?
Shall praises reach Thee from the dust ?
Shall it declare thy truth ?
Hear, and have mercy on me, Lord,
O Lord, be Thou my help !

11. Thou'st dried my tears : my mourning Thou
Hast into dancing turn'd :
Thou'st stripp'd the sackcloth from my loins,
And girded me with joy.

12. My glory then shall sing thy praise ;
It shall not silent be ;
O Lord, to Thee I will give thanks,
To Thee, my God, for ever !

PSALM XXXI.

To the chief musician. A psalm of David.

1, 2. LORD, I have put my trust in Thee,
O put me not to shame for ever :
But, rid me in thy righteousness,
Bow down thine ear to me, and hear !

2. Deliver me, and that right soon,
And be, O Lord, my rock of strength ;
Be Thou the house of my defence,
The asylum of my safety Thou !
- 3, 4. Thou my stronghold and fortress art,
For thy name's sake be Thou my guide :
Out of the net they've laid for me
Draw me, O Lord, for Thou'rt my strength.
- 5, 6. To Thee, Lord God of truth, which hast
Redeem'd me, I commend my soul !
The followers of delusions vain
I hate ; my trust is in the Lord.
7. Thy kindness, Lord, shall be my boast,
And in thy love I will exult ;
For Thou my misery hast seen,
And known the anguish of my soul.
8. Thou hast not left me in the grasp
Of foes, imprison'd and forlorn ;
But on a wide and open plain
Hast set my free unshackled feet.
9. Be gracious unto me, O Lord,
For trouble heavy on me lies ;
With gnawing cares mine eye is worn,
My soul and body are consumed.
10. My life for very grief hath fail'd,
My years with groaning pass away ;
Through my offence my strength is gone,
And rottenness consumes my bones.

11. From all mine enemies I hear
The voice of scoffing and reproach ;
I am become my neighbours' scorn,
The fear of my acquaintances.
12. Whene'er abroad I venture forth,
Whoever sees me flees my sight :
I'm clean forgotten as the dead,
Unminded as a broken sherd.
13. I hear the murmurs of the crowd,
And fears encompass me about,
The while, in crafty counsel join'd,
They lay their plots against my life.
- 14, 15. But I repose my trust on Thee ;
Thou, Lord, I say, Thou art my God !
My times are in thy hand, do Thou
Free me from persecuting foes.
- 16, 17. O let thy face upon me shine,
And save me for thy mercies' sake :
Lord, let not me be put to shame,
Who unto Thee have raised my voice ;
Let shame upon the wicked fall,
Let him be silenced in the grave !
18. Dumb let the lying lips be struck,
Which, in contempt and proud disdain,
Malicious calumnies put forth
Against the righteous and the just.
19. What store of goodness, Lord, hast Thou
For them that fear Thee, treasured up,

For them that trust in Thee, prepared
In presence of the sons of men !

20. Within thy hidden sanctuary
 Thou'lt hide them from the pride of men ;
 Beneath thy tabernacle's shade
 Thou'lt keep them from the strife of tongues.

21, 22. Bless'd be the Lord, whose signal love
 Was shown me in the fenced town :
 When in my haste I fondly said,
 I'm cut off from thy quickening sight !
 Yet Thou didst hear my suppliant voice,
 When, helpless, for thy aid I cried.

23, 24. O love the Lord, all ye his saints :
 For God will guard his faithful ones,
 And with full measure recompense
 The man of pride. Have courage then,
 For He shall steel your hearts with strength,
 All ye that trust upon the Lord.

PSALM XXXII.

By David. A psalm of instruction.

1, 2. BLESSED is he whose fault has been forgiven,
 And whose transgression mercy covereth :
 Bless'd he to whom the Lord imputes no sin,
 And whose clear spirit is devoid of guile.

- 3, 4. While speechless I remain'd, my bones wax'd old ;
They pined away, as all day long I groan'd :
For day and night thy hand upon me lay,
And like the summer's drought my moisture fled.
5. Then unto Thee I freely own'd my faults,
And mine iniquity I did not hide :
I said, I will confess my sins to God,
And Thou forgavest all my wickedness !
6. For this shall every godly man address
His prayer unto Thee when Thou may'st be found :
So, when the floods their heaped waters roll,
Their curbed billows shall not nigh him come.
7. My shelter Thou and hiding-place hast been,
And hast preserved me in my hour of need :
Thou hast encompass'd me about with songs
And with glad shouts of safe deliverance.
- 8, 9. I will instruct thee in the way thou goest,
Yea, I will teach and guide thee with mine eye :
Be not as horse or mule of reason void,
Whose mouths with bit and bridle are subdued.
- 10, 11. Much sorrow on the wicked falls, but those
That trust in God, are compass'd round with love.
Be glad, ye righteous, and rejoice in God,
And shout for joy, all ye of upright heart !

PSALM XXXIII.

- 1, 2. SING aloud to the Lord, O ye righteous ones,
For praise becometh the upright well :
Extol the Lord on the harp, and chaunt
To the ten-string'd lyre his endless praise.
- 3, 4. Sing a new song to his holy name,
Strike up a well tuned jubilee :
For the words of the Lord are just and right,
And all his works are wrought in truth.
- 5, 6, 7. Judgment He loveth and righteousness,
Of his goodness and mercy the earth is full :
By the word of the Lord were the heavens made,
And all their host by the breath of his mouth ;
He gathers the floods of the sea in heaps,
In the vaults of the deep He stores them up.
- 8, 9. Let all the world stand in awe of the Lord,
Yea, tremble before Him, ye tenants of earth :
For lo, He spake, and creation was,
He gave command, and, behold, it stood.
- 10, 11. The Lord brings to nought the heathen's plots,
And the people's devices He frustrateth ;
But the Lord's decrees stand fast for ever,
And the thoughts of his heart from age to age.

12, 13. That nation is blest whose God is the Lord,
That people, whom He for his own selects.
The Lord from the height of heaven looks down,
His eye beholds all the sons of men :

14, 15. From the place of his dwelling the Lord looks forth
Upon all the earth's inhabitants :
'Tis He who has fashion'd the hearts of them all,
And by Him is their every work observed.

16, 17. No king is preserved by his large array,
Nor warrior saved by his greatness of strength :
The rider in vain on his horse relies,
The power of his limbs no deliverance brings.

18, 19. The eye of the Lord upon them shall rest
That fear Him, and in his mercy trust—
To deliver their soul from the snares of death,
And to keep them alive in the day of dearth.

20, 21, 22. Our soul for the Lord expectant waits ;
He is our shield and our saving help :
Our hearts shall rejoice and be glad in Him,
For in his holy name we have placed our trust.
O Lord, let thy goodness upon us rest,
E'en as upon Thee we have fix'd our hope !

PSALM XXXIV.

By David, when he changed his behaviour before Abimelech, who drove him away, and he departed.

- 1, 2. I WILL at all times bless the Lord,
His praise shall e'er be in my mouth :
My soul shall make her boast in God,
The meek shall hear it, and be glad.
- 3, 4. Come, magnify the Lord with me,
With me exalt his name on high :
I sought Him, and He heard my cry,
And rescued me from all my fears.
- 5, 6. They who look up to Him, grow bright ;
And clear of shame their faces shine :
This poor man cried, and lo, the Lord
Heard and released Him from his woes.
- 7, 8. God's angel round his saints encamps,
And keepeth them from every harm :
O taste and see how good is God ;
Blest is the man that in Him trusts.
- 9, 10. O fear the Lord, all ye his saints,
For they that fear Him know no want :
The lion may for hunger faint,
And roam in vain in quest of prey ;

But they that seek the Lord of hosts,
Shall be replenished with good.

11, 12. Come, children, hearken unto me,
And learn from me to fear the Lord :
What man is he that longs for life,
And fain would look on prosperous days ?

13, 14. Do thou thy tongue from evil keep,
From guile and falsehood guard thy lips :
Depart from evil, and do good,
Seek peace, and after her pursue.

15, 16. The eyes of God rest on the just,
His ears are open to their cry ;
But from the bad his face He turns,
And roots their memory from the earth.

17, 18. God hears the righteous when they cry,
And from their troubles sets them free :
The Lord is nigh the broken heart,
He loves to save the contrite spirit.

19, 20. The righteous many sorrows knows,
But God delivers him from all :
The Lord preserveth all his bones,
Not one is broken, no, not one.

21, 22. Destruction shall the wicked seize,
And judgment those that hate the just :
But God his servants' souls redeems,
And none that trust Him are condemn'd.

PSALM XXXV.

By David.

- 1, 2. O LORD, do Thou my suers sue,
Fight Thou with them that fight with me :
The buckler take, and grasp the shield,
And stand Thou up, and be my help.
3. Bring forth the spear, and draw the sword,
And stop my persecutors' rage :
Say to my soul, I am thy rock,
The strength of thy salvation, I.
4. Confusion and disgrace be theirs,
Who ravenously seek my life :
Back be they turn'd, and put to shame,
That cunningly devise my hurt.
- 5, 6. As chaff before the wind is driven,
So let them from God's angel fly :
Dark be their way, and slippery,
And let God's angel trouble them !
7. For, unprovoked, with cover'd pit
And net conceal'd, they sought my life :
Yea, unprovoked, the hole they dug,
And snare prepared to catch my soul.

8. On them shall their destruction come
When they reckon not ; for, in the net
Laid by themselves shall they be caught,
And there destruction find, yea there !
- 9, 10. But my soul shall rejoice in God,
And in the Lord's salvation boast :
My every limb and bone shall say,—
Who, Lord, to Thee can be compared,
That sav'st the helpless from the strong,
The poor man from the spoiler sav'st ?
- 11, 12. False witnesses arose, and charged
Against me things I knew not of :
They paid me evil for my good,
My life's destruction was their quest.
13. But as for me, when they were sick,
Of sackcloth I my clothing made :
My soul with fasting I brought low,
And o'er my bosom pour'd my prayer.
14. So I behaved myself, as though
A friend or brother were in pain :
Bow'd down with heavy grief, I mourn'd
As one who mourns a mother's loss.
- 15, 16. But when on me my sorrow fell,
They met together, and rejoiced :
Vile abjects, whom I knew not, came,
And wounded me with ceaseless jibes ;
With hypocrites and parasites
They gnash'd upon me with their teeth.

17. How long wilt Thou look on, O Lord ?
From their destructions save my soul :
The precious treasure of my life
Deliver from the lion's mouth.
18. So will I thank Thee in the place
Where meet the congregated tribes :
Before the might of Israel
I will declare thy lofty praise.
19. Let not my false ungodly foes
Triumphant over me rejoice :
Nor those that hate me without cause
Wink at me with derisive eye.
- 20, 21. They speak not peace, but words of war
Against the quiet in the land :
Their mouths at me they open wide,
And say, Ha, ha, our eyes have seen !
- 22, 23. Thou, Lord, hast seen—Oh, be not dumb,
Be not far off from me, O Lord :
Awake, and up, to judgment rise,
My God, my Lord, my cause decide !
- 24, 25. My God, by thine own righteous law
Judge me, and save me from their scorn :
Let them not say within their hearts,
Ha, this is what our souls desired ;
Let them not say with braggart tongue,
Behold, we have devoured him !
26. Confounded and ashamed together
Be those that at my hurt rejoice :

Clothed with disgrace and shame be those
That 'gainst me set themselves on high.

- 27, 28. But in glad triumph let them shout
Who to my righteousness wish well ;
And ever say, The Lord is great,
Who loves his servant's happiness.
And let my tongue dwell all day long
Upon thy righteousness and praise.
-

PSALM XXXVI.

To the chief musician, by David the servant of the Lord.

- 1, 2. REBELLION mutters in the sinner's heart ;
No fear of God is present to his eyes :
For to himself he glosses o'er his deeds,
Until his sin is found out, and abhorr'd.
- 3, 4. His mouth is full of wickedness and fraud,
Wisdom and goodness he hath put away :
Upon his bed he ponders plots of ill,
In ways perverse he walks ; he hates not wrong.
- 5, 6. The heavens, Lord, thy loving-kindness know,
Thy faithfulness extendeth to the clouds :
As mighty mountains thy uprightness stands,
As the great deep thy judgments are profound !

- 6, 7. Thou, God, the Saviour art of man and beast !
How precious is thy loving-kindness, Lord !
To Thee the sons of men for refuge flee,
And seek the shelter of thy shadowing wings.
- 8, 9. With sweetness from thy house they shall be fill'd,
And from the river of thy pleasures drink :
For in thy presence is the well of life,
And light we see in thy pure light alone !
- 10, 11. On those that know Thee let thy mercy shine,
And on the true of heart thy righteousness :
Let not the foot of pride against me come,
Nor wicked hand remove me from my place.
12. Lo, there the wicked-doers prostrate lie ;
Cast down and fallen, ne'er to rise again !
-

PSALM XXXVII.

By David.

- 1, 2. FRET not thyself because the wicked rise,
Nor be thou envious of a sinner's state ;
For like the grass, they soon shall be cut down,
And, like the herb's frail verdure, fade away.
- 3, 4. Put thou thy trust in God ; be doing good ;
Bide in the land, and feed, in faith secure.
Make thou the Lord thy treasure of delight,
And He shall give thee all thine heart's desire.

- 5, 6. Commit to God the guidance of thy path,
Yea, trust in Him; He'll bring thee to the goal:
He'll make thy righteousness burst forth like light,
And thy just dealing like the blaze of noon.
7. Be still, and rest upon the Lord: yea, wait
For Him in patience. Do not fret thyself
Because of him that prospers in his way,
The man that brings his wicked schemes to pass.
- 8, 9. Leave off from wrath, and bid displeasure go;
Let not thine anger move thee to do wrong:
For men of wrong shall be cut off, but those
That wait on God, they shall possess the land.
- 10, 11. A moment—and the wicked shall not be;
Yea, thou shalt seek their place, and find it not.
Then shall the meek the promised land possess,
And gladden'd revel in abounding peace.
- 12, 13. The wicked spreads his plots against the just,
And gnashes on him with malignant tooth:
The Lord looks down in scorn, for He beholds
How swift his day comes on, his doom is seal'd!
- 14, 15. The wicked draw their sword, and bend their bow,
To overthrow the weak, the just to slay:
Their swords shall into their own hearts be driven,
And their strong bows fall shatter'd to the ground.
- 16, 17. A little that the righteous hath, excels
The wealth that hosts of sinners can command:
For God shall break the sinner's haughty arm,
But keep in safety, and uphold the just.

- 18, 19, 20. The days of upright men are mark'd by God,
And their inheritance shall be for ever :
In evil times they shall not be ashamed,
In days of famine they shall have enough.
But impious men shall perish ; and God's foes
Fade as the grass ; yea, fade, as smoke, away.
- 21, 22. The wicked borrow, and pay not again,
But the good man is pitiful, and gives :
In acts of mercy every day he spends,
He ever lendeth, and his seed is bless'd.
- 23, 24. The just man's steps are order'd by the Lord,
And He delighteth in his servant's path :
Though falling, he shall never be cast down,
For, lo, the Lord upholds him with his hand.
- 25, 26. Young I have been, and I have known old age ;
Yet never have I seen a righteous man
Forsaken by his God ; nor e'er beheld
His seed abandon'd, begging for their bread.
For God loves justice : He his holy ones
Will ne'er forsake, but hold them up for ever.
- 27, 28. Turn then aside from evil, and do good ;
So shalt thou dwell for ever in the land :
For, whom God blesses, their's the land shall be,
But, whom He curses, they shall be cut off.
29. The wicked shall be utterly destroy'd,
And the base seed of sinners be cut off :
But righteous men for their inheritance
Shall have the land, and dwell therein for ever

- 30, 31. The righteous mouth of wisdom holds discourse,
And justice speaketh from a good man's tongue :
The statutes of his God are in his heart,
And guide his path : his footsteps shall not slide.
- 32, 33. The wicked for the godly lies in wait,
And seeks occasion how he may destroy :
The Lord will never leave him in his hand,
Nor, in the judgment, let him be condemn'd.
34. Wait on the Lord, and firmly keep his way ;
So shalt thou be exalted, and the land
Of bliss inherit. When destruction falls
Upon the wicked, thou their doom shalt see.
- 35, 36. I've seen the ungodly in his pride of power,
With pomp outspreading like a lordly tree :
I passed by, and lo, he was not there :
I sought him, but his place could not be found.
- 37, 38. Mark well the perfect, and behold the just :
The end of that man is eternal peace.
But hopeless death shall be the sinner's lot,
And his dark end—to be cut off for ever.
- 39, 40. But in the Lord the just salvation find ;
In troublous times He is their hope and strength :
The Lord shall help, and shall deliver them,
Yea, He shall save them, for in Him they trust !

PSALM XXXVIII.

A psalm of David, to put in remembrance.

- 1, 2. REBUKE me not in thy displeasure, Lord,
Nor smite me then, when hot thine anger burns :
For deep within me are thine arrows sunk,
And heavily thy hand upon me falls.
- 3, 4. Because Thou'rt vex'd, my flesh no soundness knows ;
Through my offence, rest comes not nigh my bones :
For o'er my head my flood of sins has risen,
A heavy weight, too heavy to be borne.
- 5, 6. By reason of my foolishness my wounds
Stink, and with rank corruption festering run :
I'm bent, yea I am utterly borne down,
And with sad steps go mourning all day long.
- 7, 8. For my whole loins are fill'd with loathsomeness,
And in my flesh no soundness can be found :
I'm all-enfeebled ; yea, I'm sorely crush'd,
I roar aloud for very grief of heart.
- 9, 10. Lord, unto Thee all my desire is known,
Nor does one groan escape thy conscious ear.
See, my heart pants, my strength hath failed me,
And light departeth from my drooping eyes.

- 11, 12. Shock'd by my wounds my lovers stand aghast ;
And far off stand my neighbours and my friends :
Whilst they that hate me for my life lay snares,
And mischief speak, and plot deceit all day.
- 13, 14. But I am without hearing like the deaf,
And as one dumb that opens not his mouth :
Yea, I am like a man that heareth not,
And whose mute tongue returns not a reply.
- 15, 16. For I have placed my hope in Thee, O Lord,
Thou wilt my answer make, O Lord my God :
For I have ask'd that they may mock me not,
Nor boast insulting o'er my faltering feet.
- 17, 18. For I am faint, and on the point to fall,
And constant sorrow waits upon my steps :
For I acknowledge my iniquities,
And my transgressions I repentant mourn.
- 19, 20. But lo, my foes are vigorous and strong,
And they increase, that hate me without cause :
E'en they that pay me evil for my good,
Yea, still assail me when their good I've sought.
- 21, 22. O Lord, in my distress forsake me not,
Nor be far off from me, O Lord my God :
But come to me, yea, haste Thee to my help,
Thou God of my salvation, and my hope.

PSALM XXXIX.

To Jeduthun, the chief musician. A psalm of David.

1. I SAID, I will take heed unto my ways,
And mind that I offend not with my tongue :
My mouth as with a bridle I'll restrain,
When in the presence of ungodly men.
- 2, 3. In silence mute, I utter'd not a word ;
'Twas meant for good, but more inflamed my grief ;
My heart within me burn'd, and, as I mused,
The fire burst out : then spake I with my tongue.
- 4, 5. Lord, let me know the measure of my days,
How frail I am, how soon to pass away :
Behold my days are as a hand-breadth's span ;
Yea, before Thee, O God, mine age is naught.
- 5, 6. Surely, each man is born to vanity ;
And, as a shadow, flitteth through the world :
With vain disquietude his soul he racks,
He heapeth up, but knows not who'll devour.
- 7, 8. Where then, O Lord, shall I my hope repose ?
Surely, on Thee my expectation waits :
Do Thou deliver me from all my sins,
Nor make me the reproach and scorn of fools.

- 9, 10. Speechless I stood : I open'd not my mouth
As I were dumb ; for 'twas thy doing, Lord.
Have mercy on me, and remove thy plagues,
For by thy hand's keen strokes I'm worn away.
11. When with rebukes Thou chastenest man for sin,
Thou mak'st his beauty to consume away
As 'twere a garment fretted by a moth :
For, truly, all men are but vanity.
12. Lord, hear my prayer, give ear unto my cry ;
Be not regardless of my bitter tears :
For I am, as my fathers all have been,
A stranger with Thee, and a sojourner.
13. Oh spare me, that my soul may be refresh'd,
Before I go away, and am no more !
-

PSALM XL.

To the chief musician. A psalm of David.

- 1, 2. I STAY'D and waited for the Lord,
And He, inclining, heard my cry :
He drew me from the pit
Of horror, and the miry clay,
And set my feet upon a rock,
And made my goings firm.

- 3, 4, 5. Now hath He put within my mouth
A joyful song of praises new
And thanks unto our God :
Many shall my deliverance see,
And meditate thereon with fear,
And trust upon the Lord.
Bless'd is the man that sets his hope
On God, and turneth not to pride,
Nor falsehood's crooked paths.
6. How many are the wond'rous works
Which Thou, O Lord my God, hast wrought,
Thy thoughts towards us how deep :
No wisdom can their order trace,
Would I declare and speak of them,
They're more than I can count.
- 7, 8. With sacrifice or offering
Thou art not pleased, but openest
Mine ears to hear thy word :
No offering for sin Thou seek'st,
Nor askest for burnt sacrifice ;
Then said I, Lo, I come ;
Of me 'tis in thy volume writ,
'Tis my delight to do thy will,
Thy law is in my heart.
- 9, 10. Before the congregated tribes
Thy righteousness I've preach'd; my lips,
Thou know'st, I've not refrain'd :
I have not hid thy righteousness
Within my heart, but have declared
Thy faithfulness and truth.

I have not from the assembled tribes
Thy loving-kindnesses conceal'd,
Nor thy salvation's power.

11, 12. Withhold not from me, Lord, thy love ;
But let thy tenderness and truth
Preserve me evermore :
For ills unnumber'd hem me round,
My sins have got such hold of me,
That I cannot look up :
More numerous are they than the hairs
Upon my head ; my heart appall'd
Shrinks, and my spirits flee.

13, 14. O let it be thy pleasure, Lord,
To save me ; haste Thee to my help ;
O Lord, deliver me.
Let those, who seek to take my life,
Be brought to shame ; yea, let them be
Confounded altogether :
Let those, who in my hurt delight,
Be backward driven in disgrace,
And to confusion put.

15, 16, 17. Be shame and desolation theirs,
That say to me, Aha ! Aha !
But let all those be glad,
That seek Thee ; yea, let them rejoice ;
And those that love Thee, ever say,
The Lord be magnified !
Though poor, the Lord upon me thinks ;
Thou my deliverer art and help,
O tarry not, my God.

PSALM XLI.

To the chief musician. A psalm of David.

1. BLESSED is he that careth for the poor ;
The Lord will save him in his hour of need,
The Lord will help him, and his life preserve,
And blessed shall he be upon the earth.
- 2, 3. Thou wilt not yield him up unto his foes
To be their prey. The Lord will strengthen him
When on the bed of languishing he lies ;
In sickness Thou wilt all his bed transform.
- 4, 5. I said : Be merciful to me, O Lord,
O heal my soul, for I have greatly sinn'd :
My foes assail me with malignant cry—
When will he perish, and his name be lost ?
6. Should any come to look on my distress,
With hollow words and vain, my woes he mocks ;
Within his heart he stores up wickedness,
He goes abroad, and speaks iniquity.
- 7, 8. My foes against me whispering combine,
And plot together to contrive my hurt :
A plague of Belial cleaves to him, they say,
Now that he lieth, let him rise no more.

9. Yea, mine own friend, the sharer of my joys,
Whom my soul trusted, and on whom reposed,
Who at my table sat, and ate my bread,
E'en he against me hath lift up his heel.
- 10, 11. But be Thou merciful to me, O Lord,
By Thee upraised, I shall requite my foes :
By this I know that Thou dost favour me,
Because no foe triumphant o'er me boasts.
- 12, 13. Yea, as for me, in righteousness upheld
Thou settest me before thy face for ever.
From time eternal to eternal time
Let Israel's God be bless'd : Amen, Amen !
-

PSALM XLII.

To the chief musician. A psalm of instruction, by the sons of Korah.

- 1, 2. As for the fountain brays the panting hart,
So doth my soul cry out for Thee, O God :
For God, the living God, my soul doth thirst,
When shall I come, and see the face of God !
3. By day and night my tears have been my food,
Whilst every day they ask me—Where's thy God ?
Then, as past scenes to recollection rise,
I pour out to myself my burden'd heart.

4. For with the crowd of worshippers I go,
With them go up unto the house of God,
Amid the sound of joy and thanksgiving,
With multitudes that keep high holyday !
5. Why, O my soul, art thou cast down ? and why
Art thou within me so disquieted ?
Hope thou in God ; for Him I yet will praise
For the salvation of his countenance.
6. My God, my soul within me is cast down :
Therefore to Thee my troubled thoughts shall turn
From Jordan's plains and Hermon's craggy peaks,
And where I wander over Mizar's hill.
7. Deep calls to deep, responsive to the voice
Of thy loud torrents rushing from the sky :
Thy stormy surges all around me roar,
And all thy billows burst upon my head.
8. Yet will the Lord his loving-kindness send
To be my solace through the hours of day ;
And, in the night, of Him shall be my song,
My prayer to the Protector of my life.
9. I say unto the Lord—Why, O my rock,
From thy remembrance hast Thou cast me out ?
Why go I mourning whilst the foe exults,
Triumphant in oppression and in wrong ?
10. As though a sword were entering my bones,
My foes with scoffings pierce my inmost soul ;
Whilst every day they mock at my distress,
And daily ask me—Where is now thy God ?

11. Why, O my soul, art thou cast down? and why
Art thou within me so disquieted?
Hope thou in God: for Him I yet will praise
Who makes my face to shine, my health, my God!
-

PSALM XLIII.

1. JUDGE me, O God: do Thou defend my cause
Against a nation hard and pitiless:
From treacherous men and men of wickedness
Save and deliver me, O Lord my God.
2. For Thou'rt my God, the fountain of my strength;
Why from thy presence dost Thou cast me off?
Why go I mourning, whilst the foe exults,
Triumphant in oppression and in wrong?
3. Send out thy light, and let thy truth go forth,
And let them lead me in the path of life:
Let them conduct me to thy holy hill,
And lodge me in thy lovèd tabernacle.
4. Then to the altar of my God I'll go;
Unto the Lord, the fulness of my joy:
Yea, on the harp, I will praise Thee, O Lord,
And magnify thy name, O God, my God!

5. Why, O my soul, art thou cast down? and why
Art thou within me so disquieted?
Hope thou in God: for Him I yet will praise
Who makes my face to shine, my health, my God!
-

PSALM XLIV.

To the chief musician, by the sons of Korah. A psalm of instruction.

1. WE have heard with our ears, O God;
Our fathers the story have told
Of the works that Thou didst in the days they knew,
In the times that were of yore.
2. How the heathen Thou dravest out,
And plantedst thy people in:
How the nations Thou didst with thy plagues destroy,
And spread out thy chosen seed.
3. For not by their spear or sword,
Or their own uplifted arm,
Did our fathers the land of promise gain,
And safe through the battle pass.
- But 'twas thy right hand and arm,
And the light of thy countenance—
Because with thy love Thou regarded'st them,
Which gat them the victory.

4, 5. O Jehovah, Thou art my King,
Thy salvation to Jacob send :
Through Thee will we thrust down our foes ; in thy name
Will we tread our assailants down.

6, 7. For not in my bow will I trust,
Nor my sword for my safeguard take :
But Thou shalt preserve us from all our foes,
And put those that hate us to shame.

8, 9. In God do we boast all day,
And extol thy name for ever :
But Thou hast cast off, and put us to shame,
With our armies Thou goest not forth.

10, 11. Thou hast turned us back from our foes,
And our enemies make us their spoil :
Thou hast given us up to be eaten like sheep,
And dispersed us o'er heathen lands.

12, 13. Thou sellest thy people for nought ;
Their price yields Thee no increase :
A reproach to our neighbours Thou mak'st us, a scorn
And derision to all around.

14, 15. We're the byeword of heathen tribes,
And at us men shake their heads :
My confusion is ever before my face,
With shame I am covered o'er :

16. Because of reproachful words,
And the voice of him that blasphemes ;
On account of the scoffs of the enemy,
And the slanderer's vengeful lips.

- 17, 18. All this is upon us come ;
Yet we've not forgotten Thee :
We have not with thy covenant falsely dealt,
Our hearts are not turned back.
- 18, 19. Our steps have not stray'd from thy way,
Although Thou hast smitten us sore
In the desert wild where dragons dwell,
Cover'd o'er with the shadows of death.
- 20, 21. If the name of our God we forget,
Or to strange gods stretch out our hands,
Shall the Lord not search it out, unto whom
The depths of the heart are known ?
22. But lo ! for thy sake we die,
For Thee are we slain all day :
As sheep for the slaughter prepared, so we Await the destroyer's hand.
- 23, 24. Awake, Lord, why dost Thou sleep ?
Arise, leave us not for ever !
O why dost Thou hide thy face, and forget
Our oppression and misery ?
- 25, 26. For our soul is bow'd down to the ground,
To the earth our belly cleaves :
Arise to our help, for thy mercies' sake,
And redeem us, O Lord our God !

PSALM XLV.

To the chief musician. On lilies, by the sons of Korah. A song of the beloved.
A psalm of instruction.

1. My heart boils o'er with a goodly theme :
I will to the King recite
What I have conceived ; my tongue shall be
The pen of a ready scribe.
2. In beauty thou shinest, excelling far
The fairest sons of men :
The fulness of grace on thy lips is pour'd ;
Thou art blessed of God for ever !
3. Thy sword on thy thigh, O Warrior, gird ;
With thy glory and majesty :
In thy majesty ride, and the conquest win
For truth, and for righteousness.
- 4, 5. Let thy right hand teach Thee deeds of dread ;
Let thine arrows sharpen'd be
To subdue the people beneath Thee, and pierce
The heart of thine enemies.
- 6, 7. Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever ;
Thy sceptre, a sceptre of right :
Thou hast lovèd justice, and hated wrong ;
For this cause hath thy God
With the oil of gladness anointed Thee,
Above all thy fellows, O God !

8. Thy garments are all with fragrance fill'd,
Of cassia, aloes, and myrrh :
They are brought from the ivory palaces,
From the chambers of thy joy.
9. Amongst thy gorgeous nuptial train
The daughters of kings are found :
Whilst at thy right hand the consort stands,
In gold of Ophir clad.
- 10, 11. Hear, daughter, and see ; incline thine ear ;
Thine home and thy people forget ;
That the King with delight on thy beauty may gaze ;
And adore Him ; for He is thy Lord.
12. The daughter of Tyre shall then lay down
Her offerings at thy feet :
And the rich of the people with gifts implore
The grace of thy countenance.
13. All glorious, see, the king's daughter shines
Within the royal hall :
Her raiment is bright with sparkling gems,
And studded o'er with gold.
- 14, 15. She is brought to the King in embroider'd vests ;
Behind is her virgin troop :
In gladness and joy are they borne on their way ;
They enter the house of the King.
16. In the room of thy fathers shall now be born
A race of princely sons, ,
Whom Thou shalt set upon royal thrones
Over all the earth to rule.

17. To every age, yea, age by age,
Will I thy name make known :
And so shall the people thy praises sing
For ever and evermore.
-

PSALM XLVI.

To the chief musician, by the sons of Korah. A song after the virgin-manner.

- 1, 2, 3. God is our refuge and our strength ;
A mighty help in trouble found :
Then we'll not fear, though earth should change,
And sea engulf the quivering hills ;
Though roar, though boil her stormy waves,
And shake the mountains in their pride !
- 4, 5. Behold the river, whose soft streams
Make glad the city of our God,
The High One's holy dwelling-place :
God midst her dwells ; she shall not fall :
His succour God shall bring to her
With the first dawning of the morn.
- 6, 7. The heathen raged ; the disturb'd states
With fury heaved ; the voice of God
Was utter'd, and the earth dissolved.
Our strong foundation is the Lord,
The Lord of Hosts beside us stands,
The God of Jacob is our rock !

- 8, 9. O come, behold the works of God ;
 What desolations on the earth
 His hand hath wrought. Unto earth's ends
 He maketh wars to cease : the bow
 He breaks, and snaps the spear in twain,
 He burns the chariots with fire.
- 10, 11. "Be still ; and know that I am God :
 My glory shall the heathen own,
 My glory all the earth shall see."
 Our strong foundation is the Lord,
 The Lord of Hosts beside us stands,
 The God of Jacob is our rock !
-

PSALM XLVII.

To the chief musician. A psalm by the sons of Korah.

- 1, 2. O ALL ye peoples, clap your hands ;
 Unto God with the voice of triumph shout :
 For the Lord, the Most High, is terrible,
 Over all the earth a mighty King.
- 3, 4. The peoples beneath us He subdues,
 And the heathen beneath our feet lays low :
 He chooses for us our inheritance,
 The glory of Jacob, his lovèd son !

- 5, 6. Lo, God is gone up with a shout of joy ;
The Lord with the sound of a trumpet gone :
Sing praises to God ; yea, praises sing ;
To the King sing praises ; yea, praises sing.
- 7, 8. For God is King over all the earth ;
His praises abroad through the world make known :
God over the heathen reigns supreme ;
God sits on the throne of his holiness.
9. Together are gather'd the peoples' chiefs ;
To the people of Abraham's God they come :
For to God e'en the shields of the earth belong ;
Unto God, the great, the exalted One.
-

PSALM XLVIII.

A song of praise, by the sons of Korah.

- 1, 2, 3. THE Lord is great, and greatly to be praised
In God's own city, on his holy mount :
Noble in height that mount ; the whole earth's joy ;
Where, in the north, the great King's city stands.
Within her palaces the Lord is known
To be a refuge in the hour of need.

- 4, 5, 6. For lo, the kings their banded forces join'd ;
 Together came ; together pass'd away :
 They look'd : but startled at the sight fell back ;
 With horror struck, in sudden haste they fled ;
 Fear then gat hold of them, and anguish sharp,
 As of a woman in her travail pains.
- 7, 8. So dost Thou, by the blast of thine east-wind,
 The ships of Tarshish shatter and destroy :
 Thy might we heard of, and have seen it now,
 Here, in the City of the Lord of Hosts :
 The City which our God hath made his own ;
 Which God will keep established for ever !
- 9, 10, } When in thy temple worshipping, O God,
 11. } Oft have we on thy loving-kindness thought :
 For, as thy name, thy praise through earth resounds,
 And thy right hand is full of righteousness.
 Yea, let Mount Zion of thy judgments boast,
 And Judah's daughters shout aloud for joy,
- 12, 13, } About Mount Zion walk, yea, round her go ;
 14. } Mark well her bulwarks ; count her lofty towers ;
 Consider well her beauteous palaces,
 That to your children you may tell her praise.
 For this God is our God for evermore ;
 He will our guide be, even unto death !

PSALM XLIX.

To the chief musician. A psalm by the sons of Korah.

- 1, 2. HEAR this, all people ; and give ear,
All ye that dwell upon the earth :
Together list, ye sons of men ;
Both mean and great, both rich and poor.
- 3, 4. My mouth of wisdom shall discourse ;
My heart on understanding brood ;
Mine ear to parables I'll bend,
And open secrets on the harp.
- 5, 6. Why should I fear in evil days,
When crafty foes my steps beset,
Who in their store of riches trust,
And boast the greatness of their wealth ?
- 7, 8. There's none his brother can redeem,
Or pay his ransom unto God :
For dear their souls' redemption price,
And never can he hope to buy
A life that shall endure for ever,
An endless freedom from the grave.
9. For he beholds the wise man die,
And with him brutish men and fools :
They perish, and to others leave
The hoards they heap'd, the wealth they loved.

- 10, 11. And yet they think within their hearts
Their houses shall for ever last,
Their dwellings to all ages stand,
And, with their own names, name their lands.
- 12, 13. But man in honour bideth not,
But like the beasts he perisheth :
This is their course ; their folly this ;
And yet their sons their maxims praise !
14. They're cast into the pit of hell
Like sheep, and death upon them feeds :
The righteous, when the morning dawns,
Shall have dominion over them.
- 14, 15. Their strength shall come to nothingness
In hell, from their lost dwellings far :
But God shall from hell's grasp my soul
Redeem, and choose me for his own !
- 16, 17. Fear not, because a man grows rich,
Though spreads the glory of his house :
He carries nothing to the grave,
His glory follows him not there.
18. Though, while he live, he vainly deem
His soul to be supremely bless'd :
And ready praise, O man, thou get'st,
When with thee every thing goes well.
- 19, 20. Where lie his fathers, he shall go ;
They all shall see the light no more :
For man in honour, but unwise,
Is like the brutes : they come to naught !

PSALM L.

A psalm of Asaph.

- 1 2. THE Most High God, Jehovah speaks, and calls
The earth from where the sun his rising takes Unto his setting. Out of Zion's mount,
Of beauty the perfection, God shines forth.
- 3, 4. Our God doth come ; He will not silence keep :
Before Him fire devours ; storms round Him rage :
The heavens above He summons and the earth,
To hear his judgment on his people pass'd.
- 5, 6. Before me gather all my saints, whose vows
Have o'er the altar to their God been pledged .
And let the heavens his righteousness proclaim,
For God, the mighty God, Himself is judge !
- 7, 8. Hear, O my people, whilst I speak ; whilst thee
I charge, O Israel : God, thy God am I.
Not of thine offerings will I now complain ;
Thy sacrifices are before Me ever.
- 9, 10. I will not take a bullock from thine house,
Nor of a he-goat will I rob thy folds :
For all the beasts the forest holds are mine,
And all the cattle on a thousand hills.

- 11, 12. I know each fowl that on the mountain rests,
And look upon each creature of the field :
If I were hungry, I would not tell thee,
For mine the world is, and its fulness mine.
- 13, 14, } Shall I devour the flesh of bulls, or drink
15. } The blood of goats? Thanksgiving God requires.
Offer to Him the sacrifice of praise,
And unto the Most High thy vows perform ;
Then call upon Me in thy day of need,
And I will save thee, and by thee be praised.
- 16, 17. Then to the godless :—Why dost thou repeat
My law, why take my covenant in thy mouth ?
Thou, that hast hated all my discipline,
And cast behind thee every warning word.
- 18, 19. When thou dost see a thief, thou welcom'st him ;
And with adulterers thy portion lies :
Thy mouth to mischief thou hast yielded up,
And with thy tongue thou framest treachery.
- 20, 21. Thou sittest, and against thy brother speak'st ;
Yea, thou dost slander thine own mother's son :
This thou hast done : and, for I held my peace,
Thou didst conceive that I was e'en as thou :
But, lo, I will reprove thee for thy faults,
And set them out, for thine own eyes to see.
- 22, 23. Mark this, all ye that have forgotten God,
Lest in my wrath I rend ye, succourless :
Who praises, honours Me : who rules his path,
To him I will his God's salvation shew.

PSALM LI.

To the chief musician. A psalm of David, when Nathan the prophet came unto him, according as he came unto Bathsheba.

1. HAVE mercy on me, O my God ;
And for thy goodness' sake forgive :
Of thy exceeding tenderness
And boundless love, blot out my sins.
- 2, 3. O wash me throughly from my guilt,
And from transgression make me clean :
For I do see my wickedness,
My crime is always in my sight.
4. 'Gainst Thee I've sinn'd, 'gainst Thee alone,
And done this wrong before thine eyes,
That, sentencing, Thou might'st be just,
And, when Thou judgest, clear of blame.
- 5, 6. Lo, I was born in wickedness,
And, in the womb, with sin conceived :
Lo, Thou desirest truth within,
And wisdom to my heart reveal'st.
- 7, 8. With hyssop purge me, make me clean ;
Wash me, and make me white as snow :
Let sounds of gladness greet mine ears,
And joy repair my crushed bones.

- 9, 10. O turn thy face from my misdeeds,
And mine iniquities blot out :
Make in me a clean heart, O Lord ;
And a renewed spirit pure.
- 11, 12, } Cast me not from thy presence, Lord,
13. } Nor take from me thy Holy Spirit :
Restore me thy salvation's joy,
And thy free Spirit be my stay :
Then sinners will I teach thy paths,
And lead transgressors to thy feet.
- 14, 15. From blood absolve me, Lord of life,
And of thy grace my tongue shall sing :
Salvation's God, ope Thou my lips,
So shall my mouth shew forth thy praise.
- 16, 17. No burning sacrifice, nor blood
Of slaughter'd victims Thee delights,
Or can appease ; else these I'd give.
God's offering is a broken spirit ;
A broken and a contrite heart
Never, O God, wilt Thou despise.
- 18, 19. O set thy joy on Zion's weal ;
And high build up fair Salem's walls :
Well pleasèd, then, shalt Thou behold
The sacrifice of righteousness ;
Whole victims for burnt-offerings brought,
And bullocks at thine altar slain.

PSALM LII.

To the chief musician. A psalm by David, when Doeg the Edomite came and told Saul, and said unto him, David is come to the house of Ahimelech.

- 1, 2, 3. WHY boastest thou, thou man of might, in wrong?
 God's goodness still for evermore endures.
 Sharp as a razor, thy malignant tongue
 Deviseth mischief, practiseth deceit.
 Evil thou hast preferred before good,
 And, before righteous words, thou choosest lies !
- 4, 5, 6. Thou treacherous tongue, thou lovest words of death ;
 Be thou then, too, destroy'd of God for ever :
 Pluck'd from thy dwelling, as a brand thrown off,
 And rooted from the land of living men !
 Thy day of judgment shall the righteous see,
 And, fearing God, his foe they shall deride.
- 7, 8. " Behold the man who makes not God his strength, Whose trust is wealth, whose might is wickedness."
 But I, like those green olive trees which live
 And spread their branches in the house of God,
 Will, in God's mercy rooted, bide secure,
 And trust in Him for ever and for ever.
9. Thee will I praise for evermore, O God,
 For Thou hast shewn me thy deliverance :
 Yea, I will rest my hope upon thy name,
 Thy name so precious in thy servant's sight.

PSALM LIII.

To the chief musician, for wind instruments. A psalm of David.

1. THE fool within his heart
Hath said ; There is no God.
Corrupt, by foulest sins defiled,
There's none that doeth good.
2. The Lord from heaven look'd down
Upon the sons of men,
To see if any one were wise,
If any sought for God.
3. They all have turn'd aside ;
They're rotten altogether :
There is not any that doth good,
There is not even one.
4. Have they no knowledge then,
These doers of misdeeds,
That they my people eat as bread,
And call not on the Lord ?
5. But they were struck with fear,
Where fear they reck'd not of ;
For God did scatter wide the bones
Of thy encamped foes.

- 5, 6. Thou covered'st them with shame,
 For God had scorned them.
 O who, from Sion's hill of strength,
 Will Israel's freedom bring?

7. When from their captive state
 God leads his people back,
 The sons of Jacob shall rejoice,
 And Israel be glad.

PSALM LIV.

To the chief musician, for stringed instruments. A psalm of David.
 When the Zephites came and said to Saul, Is not David hiding himself amongst us?

- 1, 2. SAVE me, O God, through thy great name,
 And by thy might defend my cause:
 Give ear, O God, unto my prayer,
 And hear the entreaty of my mouth.
3. For strangers are against me risen,
 And lawless men my life desire:
 Who set not God before their eyes,
 And have not learn'd to fear his name!
- 4, 5. Lo, God my helper is; the Lord
 Is with the upholders of my soul:
 He will my foes with ill requite—
 Destroy them in thy truth, O Lord!
- 6, 7. To Thee free offerings I will bring,
 And praise thy name, for it is good:
 For Thou hast saved me from my straits,
 Mine eyes have on my foes look'd down.

PSALM LV.

To the chief musician, for stringed instruments. A psalm of David.

- 1, 2, 3. GIVE ear unto my prayer, O Lord,
 Nor hide thyself from my desires ;
 Attend to me, and hear me cry,
 'Midst sadden'd thoughts perplex'd and tost,
 By shout of enemies o'erborne,
 Oppress'd by men of wickedness.
- 3, 4, 5. For, lo, they load me with reproach,
 And persecute me in their rage :
 My heart within me writhes with pain ;
 And on my soul death's terrors fall :
 Upon me fear and trembling come ;
 And wrapp'd with horror round, I cry—
- 6, 7, 8. O were I winged like the dove,
 Then would I flee and be at rest :
 Then would I wander off, afar,
 And in the wilderness abide :
 Then would I hasten my escape
 From windy storm and tempest wild !
- 9, 10, } Consume them, Lord, their tongues divide ;
 11. } For strife and wrong the city fill,
 And day and night go round her walls :
 Mischief and sorrow with her dwell ;
 Amidst her, wickedness abides ;
 Deceit and guile ne'er quit her streets.

- 12, 13, } 'Tis not an enemy reviles,
14. } For then his scoffings I could bear ;
 'Tis not my foe against me swells,
 Or I would hide me from his hate :
 But thou, the man I prized, my known,
 My trusted friend, with whom I oft
 Sweet counsel took, and loved to walk
 Amidst the crowded courts of God.
- 15, 16, } Destruction seize them : to the grave
17. } Let them be hurried down alive :
 For wickedness amidst them walks,
 And with them in their houses dwells :
 But I upon my God will call,
 And He, the Lord, shall rescue me ;
 At even, morn, and noon I'll cry,
 Yea roar, and He my voice shall hear.
- 18, 19. My soul, in battle overpower'd,
 He hath redeem'd, and placed in peace ;
 For with me are his mighty hosts.
 God, who is throned of old ! shall hear,
 And answer them that fear not Him,
 The men, who have no changes known.
- 20, 21. The wicked lays his treacherous hand
 On them who dwell with him in peace ;
 He breaks his solemn covenant :
 Smoother than butter is his mouth,
 But all his heart is war : his words
 Are soft as oil, yet are they swords.
- 22, 23. Cast thy provision on the Lord,
 And He shall be thy life's support ;

He will not, whilst the world endures,
Permit the righteous to be moved :
But men of blood and of deceit
Thou, God, shalt to the pit send down.
Not half their days shall they live out,
But I will still confide in Thee !

PSALM LVI.

To the chief musician. From the dove dumb amongst strangers. A secret hymn of David, when the Philistines were upon him at Gath.

- 1, 2. BE gracious unto me, O God,
For man pants after me all day,
Hard pressing me with murderous hate :
All day my foes pant after me,
For they that to devour me seek,
Are many, and inflamed with pride.
- 3, 4. But in the day that I'm afraid,
I place my confidence in Thee :
My boast is in the word of God,
In God I place my confidence,
And so I lay my cares to rest,
Nor fear what flesh can do to me.
- 5, 6. They wrest my words continually ;
Their thoughts are set upon my hurt :
They meet, they gather them together,
And, in their secret coverts hid,
With stealthy eye they mark my steps,
And hope my soul shall fall their prey.

- 7, 8. They think that through their wickedness
They shall escape : but, in thy wrath,
Thou, Lord, wilt cast the people down.
My flights and wanderings Thou hast mark'd ;
My tears Thou'lt in thy bottle store,
Are they not written in thy book ?
- 9, 10, 11. I know that when on Thee I call
My foes shall turn ; for God is mine.
My boast is in the word of God ;
My boast is in Jehovah's word ;
In God I trust ; I will not fear
What mortal man can do to me.
- 12, 13. Thy vows, O God, upon me lie ;
And my thank-offerings I will pay :
For Thou hast saved my soul from death ;
And wilt Thou not my feet uphold ?
That I may walk before my God,
And see the light of living men.
-

PSALM LVII.

To the chief musician. Destroy not. A secret song of David, when he fled from before Saul into the cave.

1. BEFRIEND me, O befriend me, Lord ;
Because on Thee my soul relies :
And to the shadow of thy wings
I flee, until these troubles pass.

- 2, 3. On God the Highest I will call ;
On God, who my desire fulfils :
From heaven He'll send, and rescue me,
And put my murderer to shame !
- 3, 4. God will his goodness send and truth,
Although my soul midst lions fall ;
Although I lie midst sons of men
With fury fill'd and all on fire :
- 4, 5. Whose teeth as arrows are and spears ;
Whose tongues are keen as sharpest swords.
Set up Thyself above the heavens,
Thy glory, Lord, o'er all the earth.
6. They spread a net before my steps ;
My soul was bowed down with dread :
They dug a pit before my path ;
They fell into the midst of it !
- 7, 8. My heart is strong ; my heart is strong ;
In song I will break forth and praise :
Wake up, my glory ; harp and lute,
Wake up : I'll waken up the morn.
- 9, 10. Thee midst the people, Lord, I'll praise ;
And midst the nations sing to Thee :
For thy great goodness to the heavens
Extends ; thy truth unto the skies.
11. Set up Thyself above the heavens,
Thy glory, Lord, o'er all the earth.

PSALM LVIII.

To the chief musician. Destroy not. A secret psalm of David.

1. AND is it dumbness, then,
 Which ails ye, sons of men,
 When righteousness ye ought to speak,
 And upright judgment deal?
2. Nay, rather, in your hearts
 You plot iniquities :
 With hands oppressive through the land
 You weigh out violence.
3. E'en from their mother's breast
 The wicked go astray ;
 The utterers of lies transgress
 E'en from their mother's womb.
4. No deadlier venom lies
 Than their's, in serpent's fang :
 Nor stops more rigidly than they
 Her ears the adder deaf—
5. On which unheeded falls
 The charmer's soothing voice :
 Which hears not the most artful strains
 By cunning charmer drawn.

6. Break Thou the sinners' teeth
Within their mouths, O God ;
The jaw-bones of the lions' whelps
In pieces break, O Lord.
7. Like the swift-passing stream,
So let them melt away :
And let their arrows, when they shoot,
Drop shiver'd from their bows.
8. Let them be like the snail,
Which, trailing, melts away :
And, like the womb's untimely fruit,
Not look upon the sun.
9. Be they like thorns which, ere
Your pots have felt their power,
Or green be they, or in a blaze,
The whirlwind sweeps away.
10. The righteous shall rejoice
The vengeance to behold :
And, in the blood of wicked men,
His footsteps he shall wash.
11. And man shall say : In truth
His fruit the righteous reaps :
In verity, there is a God,
That judgeth in the earth.

PSALM LIX.

To the chief musician. Destroy not. A secret psalm of David, when Saul sent and caused his house to be watched, that he might kill him.

- 1, 2. FROM all my foes deliver me, my God ;
And lift me up o'er them that 'gainst me rise :
From evil-doers, and from men of blood
Save and deliver me, O Lord my God.
- 3, 4. For, lo, against my soul they lie in wait ;
Without my guilt or sin, the strong ones join :
Without my fault, they hasten their array :
Awake and help me, and look down, O Lord.
5. O Lord, Thou God of Hosts, O Israel's God,
Awake, and visit all the heathen hordes :
Yea, punish them for all their perfidies,
Nor let thy mercy the transgressors spare !
- 6, 7. At even-tide they come, they growl like dogs,
And round about the city prowling stalk :
Lo, from their mouths they belch forth wickedness ;
Upon their lips are swords ; for " who doth hear ?"
- 8, 9. But Thou, O Lord, shalt laugh them all to scorn ;
The heathen in derision Thou shalt hold :
For thine own hand their strength I will reserve,
For God my rock is, and my fortress sure.

- 10, 11. The God of mercy shall before me go,
My God shall make me on my foes look down :
Slay them not, lest my people should forget ;
Scatter, and lay them low, O Lord, our shield !
- 12, 13. Their lips but open for their mouths to sin,
And they are caught in their own haughtiness,
Amidst their cursings and amidst their lies.
Consume, consume them, bring them to an end ;
And let men know that God in Jacob rules,
And sends his power out to the ends of earth !
- 14, 15. Then let them come at even, growl like dogs,
And let them round about the city prowl :
Yea, let them wander up and down for meat,
And stray all night, nor yet be satisfied.
- 16, 17. But I with shouts thy might will celebrate,
And, with the dawn, of all thy mercies sing :
For, in my day of need, Thou, Lord, hast been
My rock of refuge and my safe retreat :
To Thee, then, O my strength, my song I'll raise,
To God my helper, and my mercy's God !

PSALM LX.

To the chief musician. On the lily of testimony, a secret psalm of David, when he had conquered Aram of the floods and Aram Zobah, and Joab had returned and slain Edom, even twelve thousand men of them, in the Valley of Salt.

- 1, 2, 3, 4. LORD, Thou hast cast us off, and scatter'd us ;
 Thou'st been displeased ; O turn to us again :
 Thou'st made the earth to tremble and to gape ;
 O heal her breaches : prop her tottering state.
 Thou'st shewn thy people sights of bitterness,
 And made us reel with drink of deadly wine :
 Yet to thy servants Thou'st a standard given,
 To be uplifted in the front of truth !
- 5, 6, 7, 8. Lord, that thy loved ones may deliverance find,
 Save with thy right hand ; hearken to our prayer !
 God in his holiness his word hath pledged ;
 And I will in his promises exult :
 Shechem I will divide, and Succoth's vale
 I will mete out : for mine is Gilead,
 And mine Manasseh : Ephraim too is mine,
 My head's defence : lawgiving Judah mine.
 Moab my washpot is : I cast my shoe
 O'er Edom : swell my pomp, Philistia !
- 9, 10, } But who will lead me into Edom's gates ?
 11, 12. } Or who will lodge me in her towers of strength ?
 Lord, wilt not Thou ? though Thou didst cast us off,
 Though with our armies Thou would'st not go forth ?
 O give to us thy help from trouble, Lord,
 For false the hope of man's deliverance.
 But we through God will valiant deeds perform,
 For He it is shall tread our foemen down !

PSALM LXI.

To the chief musician, for instrumental music. By David.

- 1, 2. LORD, hear my groans ; attend unto my prayer ;
 From the far ends of earth to Thee I cry :
 With heart oppress'd and sad I crave thy aid ;
 O lift me on the rock, above my reach so high.
- 3, 4. For Thou my refuge and my strength hast been,
 A tower of strength before my foemen's face :
 Within thy tabernacle I will dwell,
 And in thy sheltering wings my refuge make for ever !
- 5, 6. For Thou, O God, hast hearken'd to my vows,
 And given me thy saints' inheritance :
 Unto the king's days more days Thou shalt add,
 And make his lengthen'd years from age to age endure.
- 7, 8. Before his God let him abide for ever ;
 And truth and mercy to preserve him send :
 So will I celebrate thy name for ever,
 And day by day my vows with grateful joy perform.

PSALM LXII.

To the chief musician of the choir of Jeduthun. A psalm of David.

- 1, 2. MY soul in silence waits on God ;
 From Him shall my salvation come :
 He only my salvation is,
 My rock, and high defence : I shall not be cast down.
3. How long, with rage infuriate,
 Will ye a righteous man assail ?
 All set to slay him, sorely press'd,
 And like a bending fence, or batter'd tottering wall.
4. Because God hath exalted him,
 They therefore plot to thrust him down ;
 'Tis their delight to utter lies ;
 They bless men with their mouths, but curse them with their hearts !
- 5, 6. My soul, in silence wait on God,
 On Him my expectation rests ;
 He only my salvation is,
 My rock, and high defence : I shall not be disturb'd.
- 7, 8. God is my glory and my rock ;
 My strength, my refuge is in God :
 In Him, ye people, alway trust ;
 To Him pour out your hearts : God will our refuge be !

9. Truly the sons of men are naught,
 Empty or false, both mean and great :
 When in the impartial balance laid,
 Together all mount up, outweigh'd by vanity.
10. Put not, O man, thy trust in wrong ;
 In robbery make not thy boast :
 If increased wealth around thee shine,
 Set not on that thine heart, let it not swell thy pride.
- 11, 12. Once hath God spoken ; twice I've heard
 This word—that power belongs to God !
 Thine also goodness is, O Lord,
 For, after his own work, Thou wilt each man reward.
-

PSALM LXIII.

A psalm of David when he was in the wilderness of Judah.

- 1, 2. O GOD, Thou art my God, thy face
 From early dawn I seek :
 Amidst a desert, weary land
 By no sweet waters bless'd,
 My flesh, desponding, longs for Thee,
 My soul thirsts for her God ;
 To see, as in thy temple shewn,
 Thy glory and thy power.

3, 4, 5. For all thy loving-kindness, Lord,
More dear to me than life,
My lips shall praise Thee while I live,
My lifted hands adore :
As with rich marrow fed, my soul
Shall feast upon thy love ;
And with exulting lips my mouth
Thy grateful praises sing.

6, 7, 8. I'll think of Thee upon my bed,
And in the still night-watch,
On Thee my heart shall meditate.
Because Thou'st been my help,
Therefore I will rejoice beneath
The shadow of thy wings ;
My soul shall cleave unto thy steps ;
Thy hand shall hold me fast.

9, 10, } But they that seek my life shall fall,
11. } And to earth's depths go down :
The sword shall o'er them stretch her hand,
The foxes on them feed :
So shall the king in God rejoice,
And all that swear by him
Shall glory, because now is stopp'd
Each liar's slanderous tongue.

PSALM LXIV.

To the chief musician. A psalm of David.

- 1, 2. LORD, hear the voice of my complaint ;
From fear of foes my life preserve ;
Hide me from sinners' secret wiles,
From evil-doers' lawless force :
- 3, 4. Who like a sword their tongues have whet,
And bitter words like arrows aim'd,
To shoot, from ambush, at the just :
Lo, fearless flies their sudden bolt.
5. In wrong and in iniquity
His fellow each encourages :
They commune how their snares to hide,
And ask, who will their doings see ?
6. Their minds are bent on wickedness ;
A studied scheme they have prepared :
So deep is the designing heart,
And inward craftiness of man.
- 7, 8. But God shall strike them with his bolt,
And they with sudden wounds shall smart ;
Their tongues shall bring them to the dust,
And all their followers shall flee.
- 9, 10. All men shall fear, and own the act
Of God, and understand his work :
The just with joy in God shall trust,
And all the upright shall exult !

PSALM LXV.

To the chief musician. A psalm of David.

- 1, 2, 3. PRAISE rests on Thee in Sion, Lord,
 And there to Thee the grateful vow is paid :
 O Thou that hearest prayer,
 To Thee all flesh shall come :
 See, my misdeeds prevail against my soul,
 Wipe Thou away our sins.
4. Blest is the servant of thy choice,
 The man whom in thy courts Thou tak'st to dwell :
 With pleasures of thy house
 Let us be filled full,
 And from thy holy temple's living wells
 Refreshed, quench our thirst.
- 5, 6. O God of our salvation, Thou
 In fearful judgments answerest our prayers :
 Thou hope of earth's wide bounds,
 And sea-wash'd isles remote,
 Who by thy strength the mountains dost set fast,
 Girded about with power.
- 7, 8. Who stillest ocean's stormy roar,
 The waves' wild tumult, and the people's rage :
 Earth's utmost habitants
 Afraid, thy tokens see,
 O Thou that mak'st the outgoings of the morn
 And evening's sons rejoice.

- 9, 10. Thou visitest the earth, and pour'st
Thy quickening floods : Thou mak'st it very rich,
As full of water flows
God's plenty-giving stream :
Thy providence the corn prepares ; for thus
Thou dost dispose the earth.
- 11, 12. The ridges feel thy softening showers,
And rain abundant through the furrows runs :
With kindly moisture fed,
The bless'd increase up-springs :
Thy goodness crowns the rich o'erflowing year,
Thy steps with fatness drop.
- 13, 14. They drop, and make the desert smile,
And clothe with verdure the exulting hills :
Around, with browsing flocks
The pasturages teem :
The valleys, also, cover'd o'er with corn,
Shout out, and sing for joy.
-

PSALM LXVI.

To the chief musician. A song of praise.

- 1, 2. LET all the wide-spreading earth
To God raise a shout of joy :
Let it sing of the glory which circles his name,
And with glory his praises exalt.

3. Say ye to the Lord your God—
How fearful thy doings are :
Thy foes, by the strength of thy power appall'd,
With lies at thy footstool cringe.
- 4, 5. Unto Thee all the earth bows down ;
Thee, Lord, and thy name they sing !
Come and see God's works ; what deeds of dread
He hath done to the sons of men.
6. The sea to dry land He changed ;
On foot through the flood they march :
In the midst of the waters his praise we chaunt,
Yea, there we rejoice in Him.
7. He rules by his might for ever ;
His eyes on the nations look :
Let not the rebellious against Him strive,
Nor his foes exalt themselves !
- 8, 9. Ye peoples, bless ye our God :
Let the voice of his praise be heard ;
Who planteth our souls in the land of life,
Nor letteth our feet be moved.
- 10, 11. For lo, Thou didst prove us, O God ;
Thou didst try us, as silver is tried :
Thou broughtest us into the net, and didst lay
Thine afflictions upon our loins.
12. Thou didst make men ride on our heads,
And didst lead us through fire and flood :
But Thou broughtest us out to a pleasant land,
To a land of o'er-running wealth.

- 13, 14. With burnt offerings, then, to thine house
I will go, and will pay my vows ;
The vows unto which my lips gave vent,
And my mouth in my trouble spake.
15. Yea, I will to thine altar bring
Choice fatlings for sacrifice :
The incense of rams shall before Thee rise,
I will offer fat bullocks and goats.
16. O come, to my voice give ear,
All ye that do fear the Lord :
And I will recount what the Lord hath wrought,
What God for my soul hath done. •
- 17, 18. Upon Him with my mouth I call'd,
And Him did my tongue extol :
Had I in my heart upon evil look'd,
The Lord would not have heard.
- 19, 20. But verily God hath heard ;
He hath heeded the voice of my prayer :
Bless'd be God, who my prayer hath not put aside,
Nor his mercy away from me turn'd !

PSALM LXVII.

To the chief musician, for instrumental music. A song of praise.

- 1, 2. GOD shed his love and blessing o'er us,
And midst us cause his face to shine !
So shall thy way through earth be known,
And nations own thy saving power.

- 3, 4. The people shall praise Thee, O God,
Yea, Thee shall all the people praise :
The nations shall thy presence hail
With gladness, and shall shout for joy.
- 4, 5. For Thou in righteousness shalt judge
And rule the nations of the earth :
The people shall praise Thee, O God,
Yea, Thee shall all the people praise !
- 6, 7. The earth shall yield us her increase,
And God, our own God, bless our store :
Our God shall bless us, and his fear
Shall fall on all the ends of earth.
-

PSALM LXVIII.

To the chief musician, by David. A song of praise

1. THE Lord of might arise,
And scatter'd be his foes :
Let those that hate Him be ashamed,
And flee before his face.
2. As smoke before the wind,
So drive Thou them away :
Before God's face let sinners melt,
As wax before the fire.
3. But let the righteous sing,
And shout aloud for joy :
Yea, with exceeding joyfulness
Before their God rejoice.

4. Praise God, and chaunt his name :
Triumphing, build the way
For Him who through the desert rides,
His name, the Mighty Jah !
5. Unto the fatherless
The Lord a father is :
God, from his holy dwelling-place,
Judges the widow's cause.
6. God seats in cheerful homes
The lonely wanderers :
The chain'd He frees, but rebels leaves
In barren lands to pine.
7. O God, when Thou didst go
Before thy people forth ;
When, through the dismal wilderness,
In glory Thou didst march—
8. Before God's presence, then,
Earth trembled, heaven dropp'd :
Yea, Sinai trembled before God,
The God of Israel !
9. With bounteous hand, O God,
Thou scatteredst thy showers ;
And wakenedst to refreshed life
Thy weary heritage.
10. Their rest, in that bless'd land,
Thy congregation found :
So dost Thou, of thy goodness, Lord,
Provide for the distress'd.

11. The Lord the signal gives,
 The singers catch the sound ;
And a vast choral company
 The tidings glad proclaim.
12. Behold, they flee, they flee,
 The kings of mighty hosts :
Whilst Israel, sitting in her homes,
 Casts lots upon the spoil.
13. At rest within your bounds,
 Ye shall be bright as doves,
Whose wings with silver gleam, and gold
 Upon their feathers shines.
14. When, at the Almighty's word,
 Invading kings disperse,
A radiance like the glistening snow
 Lights up dark Salmon's head.
15. Mount Bashan's hill is high,
 A hill of God it is :
Mount Bashan's hill conspicuous stands,
 A hill of lofty crests.
16. Why, O ye crested hills,
 On THIS hill will ye frown ?
This hath God chosen for his rest,
 Here shall He dwell for ever.
17. The chariots of God
 Ten thousand thousands are ;
Midst them the Lord, on Sinai known,
 Illumes the sanctuary.

18. Thou hast gone up on high,
 With captives captive led,
 With gifts from men, yea rebels ta'en,
 There, O Lord God, to dwell.
19. Bless'd be our God each day :
 Though trouble on us fall,
 The Lord will lighten our distress,
 And our salvation be !
20. The Lord our God the God
 Of our salvation is :
 The Lord Jehovah holds the keys
 Which ope the gates of death.
21. But God will surely crush
 His adversaries' heads ;
 The hairy crests of such as still
 In wickedness walk on.
22. The Lord our God hath said—
 From Bashan I will bring,
 I will from ocean's depths bring back
 Each lurking plunderer.
23. So that in triumph Thou
 Shalt dash thy foot in blood :
 And from thy foemen's gore thy dogs
 Shall wet their thirsty tongues.
24. The congregation saw,
 O God, thy solemn march :
 Thy solemn march, my God, my King,
 Within thy holy courts.

25. The singers went before ;
 Behind a band which touch'd
The sounding strings : the virgins struck
 Their timbrels in the midst.
26. Let all the assemblies bless
 And praise the Lord their God :
O ye from Israel's fountain sprung,
 Bless ye and praise the Lord.
27. There, little Benjamin
 Their lord, and Judah's chiefs
Their champions, see : Zabulon's chiefs,
 The chiefs of Naphtali.
28. 'Tis God, who hath ordain'd
 Thy strength, O Israel :
Strengthen, O God, the glorious work
 Which Thou hast wrought for us.
29. Drawn by thy temple's fame,
 Which crowns Jerusalem,
From far shall kings their choicest gifts
 Unto thine altar bring.
30. The reed-king chide ; the bulls ;
 And populace of calves ;
Till, prostrate, at thy feet they lay
 Their silver tribute down.
31. Lo, each war-loving tribe
 Is scatter'd ; princes now
Shall come from Egypt, and her hands
 Shall Cush stretch out to God.

32. Ye kingdoms of the earth,
 Sing praises unto God :
 O sing ye praises to the Lord ;
 To Him that rides on high—
33. Upon the heaven of heavens
 Which are and were of old :
 Behold, He sendeth out his voice,
 That voice, a voice of power !
34. Ascribe ye strength to God,
 Who over Israel
 His high excelling glory spreads,
 Whose strength is in the clouds.
35. Lord, from thy holy place
 Thy terrors Thou display'st :
 'Tis Israel's God who gives us strength
 And power : let God be bless'd.
-

PSALM LXIX.

To the chief musician. By David. On the lilies.

- 1, 2, 3. SAVE me, O God ; for lo, the rising floods
 Have broken in, and to my life lay siege :
 In miry depths I sink, nor standing find ;
 In watery deeps, 'neath whelming floods I drown :
 I'm faint with crying out, my throat is dried ;
 Mine eyes have fail'd, whilst waiting for my God.

4. The men that hate me without cause are more
Than are the hairs which grow upon my head :
My lying foes that, unprovoked, assail
And would destroy me, mighty are and strong :
Of me defenceless they their booty make,
And I restore them what I never took.

5, 6, 7. O God, Thou knowest all my foolishness ;
Nor are my trespasses from Thee conceal'd :
O let not them that wait on Thee, O Lord,
Thou God of Hosts, for my sake be ashamed ;
Nor, through my fall, let them confounded be
That Thee have sought, Thou God of Israel.

8, 9. For lo, for thy sake I have borne reproach,
And shame hath coverèd my downcast face :
A stranger to my brethren I'm become,
An alien unto my own mother's sons :
For I'm with zeal for thy loved house consumed,
And all thy scorers turn on me their scorn.

10, 11, } With tears and fasting when my soul was low,
12. } My very grief was turn'd to my reproach :
Yea, when of sackcloth I my garments made,
Their by-word and their proverb I became :
The sitters in the gates against me spake,
And vilest drunkards chose me for their song.

13, 14. But as for me, to Thee, O Lord, I pray ;
O let me find Thee in thine hour of grace :
Of thy great mercy hear me, O my God,
Yea, by the truth of thy salvation, hear.
Deliver me, lest in the mire I sink ;
From haters save me, and from waters deep.

- 15, 16. Let not the water-floods o'erflow me, Lord,
And let me not be swallow'd by the deep :
Let not the pit upon me close her mouth,
But hear me, O my God : for excellent
Thy loving-kindness is : yea, turn to me,
Of thy great mercy and thy tenderness.
- 17, 18, } Let not thy face be from thy servant hid,
19. } For I'm in trouble ; hear me speedily :
Draw nigh unto me, and redeem my soul,
Avenge me, for mine adversaries' sake :
Thou know'st my shame, dishonour, and reproach,
And all my foes are to thy sight exposed.
- 20, 21. Behold, reproach hath broken down my heart,
And I am sore distress'd : I look'd for some
Who might take pity, but there was not one :
For comforters I look'd, but none I found :
But, in my woe, they gave me gall for meat,
And, when I thirsted, vinegar to drink.
- 22, 23, } Then let their table be their deadly snare,
24. } And what they deem their weal, be that their trap.
Be their eyes darken'd that they may not see,
And let their loins continually shake :
Thine indignation out upon them pour,
And let thine hot displeasure hold them fast.
- 25, 26, } Forsaken be their wasted palaces,
27. } And let no dweller in their tents be seen :
For him they persecute whom Thou hast bruised,
And mocking tell the pains thy wounds have caused :
With evil then their evil recompense,
Nor let them come where thine uprightness dwells.

- 28, 29, } Let them be blotted from the book of life,
 30. } Nor with the righteous let their names be writ :
 But as for me, with pain and grief oppress'd,
 Let thy salvation lift me up, O God :
 So shall I sing the praises of the Lord,
 And with thanksgiving magnify thy name.
- 31, 32, } For this shall please thee better far than ox,
 33. } Or horned bullock with divided hoof :
 The meek have seen : let them that seek the Lord
 Be full of joy : yea, let your hearts be strong.
 For the Lord hears the cry of the distress'd,
 Nor e'er forgets his helpless prisoners.
- 34, 35, } Him let the earth, and Him the heavens praise :
 36. } The seas, and all their swarming habitants :
 For God shall Zion save, and Judah's towns
 For her build up, to dwell in and possess :
 His servants' seed that heritage shall have,
 Yea, they shall dwell there that have loved his name.

 PSALM LXX.

To the chief musician, by David. To call to remembrance.

- 1, 2. HASTE to my rescue, O my God,
 Make haste and help me, Lord :
 Confused and put to shame be they
 That seek after my life ;
 Turn'd back, and smitten with disgrace,
 Who in my hurt delight.

- 3, 4. Let them to endless shame be driven,
That say, Aha ! Aha !
But let all those that seek thy face
In Thee with joy exult ;
And those, who thy salvation love,
Say alway, God is great.
5. And as for me, who needy am,
And laden with distress,
Make haste and come to me, O Lord ;
For Thou hast been my help,
Yea, my deliverer Thou art,
O tarry not, my God.
-

PSALM LXXI.

- 1, 2. IN Thee, Lord, have I placed my trust ;
O give me not to scorn for ever :
But, for thine own uprightness' sake
Deliver me, and set me free :
Incline thine ear unto my prayer,
Yea, hear and save me, O my God.
- 3, 4. Be Thou my dwelling in the rock,
Where I may ever entrance find :
Thou, Lord, my safety hast decreed,
For Thou my hold and fortress art :
Save me, my God, from wicked hands,
From grasp of cruelty and wrong.

- 5, 6. For Thou my hope art ; from my youth
The Lord Jehovah is my trust :
By Thee have I been holden up
Since I was born : Thou, Lord, art He
That took me from my mother's womb ;
Of Thee shall be my praise for ever.
- 7, 8, 9. I am a wonder to the crowd,
But Thou, Lord, art my refuge strong :
My mouth is filled with thy praise
And with thy glory all day long :
Cast me not off when I am old,
Nor leave me, when my strength is gone.
- 10, 11, } For lo, my foes against me speak .
12. } And they that watch my soul conspire :
"God hath forsaken him," they say,
"Chase him and seize ; there's none to save."
O God, be not far off from me ;
Make haste, my God, to succour me.
- 13, 14. Confounded utterly be they
That set themselves against my soul :
Let them, that seek to do me hurt,
Be cover'd with reproach and shame ;
But let me always hope in Thee,
And add yet more to all thy praise.
- 15, 16. My mouth shall all day long recount
Thy righteousness and saving power ;
For never can the tale be told :
The Lord Jehovah's might to praise
I will go on : I will declare
Thy righteousness, and thine alone.

- 17, 18. My God, Thou'st taught me from my youth,
And, thus far, I thy marvels tell :
When come old age and grey hairs, Lord,
Forsake me not ; until thine arm
To other ages I make known,
Thy might to all to come declare.
- 19, 20. On high thy righteousness extends,
Thou God, who mighty works hast done :
Who can with Thee, O God, compare !
Thou, who hast shewn me troubles great
And sore, shalt turn and quicken me,
Yea, turn and lift me from the deep.
- 21, 22. My greatness Thou shalt magnify,
And comfort me on every side :
And, as for me, with psaltery
Thee and thy truth I'll celebrate :
Of Thee unto the harp I'll sing,
Thou Holy One of Israel !
- 23, 24. With thrilling lips to Thee I'll sing
The praises of my ransomed soul :
Yea all day long my lingering tongue
Upon thy righteousness shall dwell :
For they are put to shame, yea, they
That sought to hurt me, are abash'd.

PSALM LXXII

By Solomon.

- 1, 2. THY judgments, Lord, unto the king impart,
And to the king's son shew thy righteousness :
Let him in righteousness thy people rule,
And to thy poor ones justice minister.
- 3, 4. Peace to the people, let the hills bring forth,
And crown'd with righteousness the mountains
smile :
The children of the needy let him save,
And right the poor, but tread the oppressor down.
- 5, 6. Thee let them fear as long as shines the sun,
Or shews the moon her face, from age to age :
Like rain upon the grass let him come down,
Like streaming showers on the thirsty ground.
- 7, 8. Let justice flourish in his righteous days,
And peace abound till moons shall be no more :
From sea to sea let his dominion spread,
And from the river to the bounds of earth.
- 9, 10. Before him let the desert-dwellers bow,
And let his enemies all lick the dust :
Let Tarshish and the Isles their tribute pay,
Sheba and Seba's kings their offerings bring.

- 11, 12. Yea, unto him shall every king bow down,
And every nation to his sway submit :
For he shall save the wretched when he cries,
The poor, and him to whom no helper comes.
- 13, 14. His care the wretched and forlorn shall raise ;
Yea, he shall save the souls of the distress'd :
From fraud and force their souls he shall redeem,
And precious shall their blood be in his sight.
15. Long shall he live, and subject nations still Shall gold of Sheba at his feet lay down :
For him to heaven shall prayers unceasing rise,
And blessings daily on his head be pour'd.
16. Abundant corn in his blest land shall clothe
The mountain-tops ; like Lebanon shall wave
Their golden fruit : the city's habitants
Shall teeming spread like grass upon the earth.
17. His name shall be for ever : yea, his name
Shall flourish in the presence of the sun :
In his name men their blessings shall invoke,
And all the nations shall pronounce him bless'd.
- 18, 19. Bless'd be the Lord our God ; let Israel's God,
Who only doeth wondrous things, be bless'd :
His glorious name be ever bless'd, and earth
Be with his glory fill'd : Amen, Amen.

PSALM LXXIII.

A psalm of Asaph.

- 1, 2, 3. TRULY the Lord is good to Israel,
 To such as are of upright heart and pure.
 But as for me, my feet were almost gone ;
 Yea, my unsteady steps had well-nigh slipp'd ;
 For I was envious at the sinner's state,
 And vexed saw the fool's prosperity.
- 4, 5, 6. For no sore sickness chains them to the grave ;
 Their strength is firm ; unbroken is their health ;
 They feel no touch of human miseries ;
 Nor nigh them come the plagues of other men.
 Hence are they circled round their necks with pride,
 And cover'd with disdain, as with a cloak.
- 7, 8, 9. Fed to the full, their eyes stand out with fat ;
 And unrestrain'd their haughty thoughts o'erflow :
 Corrupt they are, and wickedness they talk ;
 They speak oppression from their height of pride :
 To the high heavens their braggart mouth they lift,
 And o'er earth walks their ever-restless tongue.
- 10, 11. Lured by the specious shew, an eager crowd
 Of followers around each leader throngs :
 For them also rich streams of plenty flow,
 And waters of abundance are pour'd out.
 Perverse and blind, "how shall God know?" they say ;
 "Doth He, the High One, look on things below?"

12, 13, } Lo, these the ungodly are ; they grow in wealth,
14. } And their prosperity endures for ever :
Surely in vain have I my heart made clean,
In vain my hands in innocency wash'd ;
Whilst all day long I'm scourgèd with thy plagues,
And every morn renews my chastisement.

15, 16, } But if I said, I will my grief proclaim,
17. } I were a traitor to thy children's cause :
Then, musing long, I seek my doubts to solve,
But all is labour to my eyes and pain :
Until within God's sanctuary I come,
And there I learn to understand their end.

18, 19, } Surely, Thou settest them in slippery ways,
20. } And let'st them fall, in sudden ruin whelm'd :
How in a moment to an end they come,
Struck with dismay, consumed, and brought to nought.
As of his dream the aroused slumberer deems,
Thou, Lord, awakening, shalt their image scorn !

21, 22, } But my fond heart was steep'd in bitterness ;
23. } And I was pricked in my foolish reins :
So senseless was I, and so ignorant ;
Yea, I was even as a brute before Thee :
Yet Thou didst always keep me by thy side,
And hold my right hand in thy kindly grasp.

24, 25, } Thou with thy counsel shalt my footsteps guide,
26. } And lead me where a crown of glory waits :
Whom but Thyself have I in heaven, O Lord ?
And none, save Thee, on earth do I desire.
My flesh may waste away ; my heart may fail ;
God is my heart's firm rock, my lot for ever.

- 27, 28. For lo, all those that go astray from Thee,
And bide far off, shall perish : those who go
Against Thee whoring, Thou shalt surely slay :
But as for me, 'tis good nigh God to dwell ;
Upon Thee, Lord Jehovah, I will trust,
And, thro' my mouth, shall all thy works be known.
-

PSALM LXXIV.

A psalm of Asaph.

- 1, 2. O God, why hast Thou cast us off for ever ?
Why smokes thine anger 'gainst the cherish'd flock,
In thine own pasture fed ?
Remember, Lord, thy people, by Thee won
And bought of old ; thy chosen heritage,
Mount Zion, thine abode.
- 3, 4. Lift up thy footsteps o'er the ruin'd waste,
Laid desolate for ever : all is spoil'd
Within the sanctuary :
Where erst came worshipping the assembled tribes,
Thine adversaries roar ; where shone thy signs,
Their own signs they set up.
- 5, 6. Behold the spoiler : like to one who comes
With lifted axe to clear the entanglement
Of forest thick with trees :
Yea now, at once, with hatchet they hew down,
And shatter with the hammer's heavy stroke
The finely carvèd work.

- 7, 8. Thy holy sanctuary they've set on fire,
 And with profaning hands brought down to earth
 The place where dwelt thy name :
 They say within their hearts—Let us at once
 Destroy them all—each synagogue of God
 Within the land they've burnt:
- 9, 10. We see our signs no more ; no prophet now
 Amongst us stands ; none is there who can tell
 How long our woes shall last :
 How long shall this proud enemy revile ?
 Say, shall the hated adversary, Lord,
 BlaspHEME thy name for ever ?
- 11, 12. Thy hand, thy right hand, why dost Thou withdraw ?
 Out of thy bosom's depths the avenger bring,
 And send destruction down :
 For, from the times of old, God is my king ;
 'Tis He who his salvation worketh out
 Amidst the realms of earth.
- 13, 14. Thou by thy power didst once the sea divide,
 And in the waters break the dragons' heads :
 Thou didst to pieces dash
 The heads of Egypt's proud leviathans,
 And to the hungry desert-habitants
 Didst give them for their meat.
- 15, 16, } The flood, the fountain Thou didst cleave in twain,
 17. } And dried'st up mighty rivers. Thine the day,
 The night also is thine :
 The light Thou hast prepared and the sun ;
 Thou'st set the borders of the earth, and made
 Winter and summer-time.

- 18, 19. Remember this—The enemy hath reproach'd,
The foolish people also hath blasphemed
Thy holy name, O Lord :
Give not the soul of thine own turtle-dove
To her foes' lust : the lives of thy poor saints
Forget not, Lord, for ever.
- 20, 21. Think on thy covenant ; for each dark place
Of earth is with the habitations fill'd
Of cruelty and wrong :
Let not the oppress'd to grief and shame return,
But let the miserable and the poor
Still praise and bless thy name.
- 22, 23. Arise, O God, in thine own quarrel fight ;
Remember the reproaches all day long
By fools upon Thee thrown :
The cry forget not of thy haughty foes ;
Behold the uproar of thine enemies
Ascendeth up for ever.
-

PSALM LXXV.

To the chief musician. A psalm of Asaph. A song of praise.

1. To Thee will we give thanks, O God,
To Thee will we give thanks :
For nigh us now thy name we see,
In wondrous works reveal'd.

2. And as for me, when round my throne
The congregation come,
Then will I righteousness maintain,
And in uprightness judge.
3. The earth, and all that dwell therein,
Are utterly dissolved :
The pillars upon which it leans
I have explored and weigh'd !
4. Unto the boasters I have said—
Your empty boastings cease :
And to the wicked—Set not up
A too presumptuous horn.
- 5, 6. Yea, lift not up your horns on high,
Nor speak with haughty neck :
For help shall come not from the East,
Nor in the West be found :
- 6, 7. The desert mountains of the South
No succour shall afford,
But God is Judge: 'tis He puts down,
And He it is exalts.
8. For in God's hand there is a cup,
Which foams with sparkling wine :
Fill'd with a mingled draught, thereout
He poureth for the just ;
Whilst all the wicked of the earth
Suck out and drink the dregs.
9. But, as for me, I will proclaim
His praise for evermore ;

And to the God of Jacob sing
The glory of his name.

10. And I will cut off every horn
Which crowns the sinner's head :
But will in honour elevate
The horns of righteous men.
-

PSALM LXXVI.

To the chief musician, for stringed instruments. A psalm of Asaph. A song of praise.

- 1, 2. THE Lord is known through Judah's hosts,
His name is great in Israel :
At Salem also is his tent,
On Zion's mount his dwelling-place.
- 3, 4. The bow's dread lightnings there He brake,
The shield, the sword, the battle's might :
Thou, noble mount, art glorious
Above the robber-mountains far !
5. The stout of heart are made a prey,
Unarm'd, unnerved, they've slept their sleep ;
And all the men of martial might,
Now palsied miss their valiant hands.
- 6, 7. At thy rebuke, O Jacob's God,
Chariot and horse are steep'd in sleep :
Thou'rt dreadful, Thou—when glows thy wrath,
Who then before thy face shall stand ?

- 8, 9. From heaven Thou didst thy sentence give,
The awe-struck earth in silence heard ;
When God to utter judgment rose,
To save the meek ones of the earth !
- 10, 11. For man's wild rage but yields Thee praise,
His height of rage Thou girdest on.
Then to the Lord your God your vows
Vow ye, his servants, and perform.
- 11, 12. Your presents bring unto the Lord,
The fearful God : to Him who stops
The breath of princes, and whose name
Is dreadful to the kings of earth.
-

PSALM LXXVII.

To the chief musician of the choir of Jeduthun. A psalm of Asaph.

- 1, 2, 3. ON God I'll call, and cry aloud ;
On God I'll call, and He shall bend
His ear unto my prayer :
In sorrow's hour I sought the Lord ;
My hand was stretched out all night ;
My soul would not be soothed :
I thought upon my God, and mourn'd ;
I mused, but no relief I found ;
My spirit shrunk abash'd.

- 4, 5, 6. All night Thou mad'st my wearied eyes
The watches keep: with trouble sore
 Confused, I could not speak:
I thought upon the days of old,
The years of generations past:
 All through the sleepless night
My memory its songs recall'd;
I communed musing with my heart;
 Deep thought my spirit held.
- 7, 8, 9. For ever will the Lord cast off?
And will He never more bestow
 His favour and his love?
For ever is his mercy ceased?
And will his word henceforth from age
 To age be heard no more?
Hath God forgotten to be kind?
And hath He in his wrath shut up
 The fountains of his grace?
- 10, 11, 12. Then said I—This my burden is;
The right hand of the Highest brings
 These years of suffering.
I'll call to mind the works of God,
And to my memory recall
 Thy wonders of old time:
Upon thy doings I will dwell,
Yea, upon all thy deeds of might
 My heart shall meditate.
- 13, 14, 15. Thy march, O God, is in the ways
Of holiness: what God is there
 So great as is our God?
Thou art the God of wondrous deeds,

Before the congregation Thou
 Hast published thy strength :
 Thy people by thine hand of power
 Thou hast redeem'd ; e'en Jacob's sons,
 And Joseph's progeny.

16, 17, 18. The waters saw thy face, O God,
 The waters saw thy face, and fear'd ;
 The startled floods recoil'd :
 The clouds in streaming torrents pour'd,
 The skies gave out their solemn voice ;
 Thine arrows went abroad :
 In rolling sounds thy thunders spake ;
 Thy lightnings lighted up the world ;
 Wide gaped the trembling earth.

19, 20. Thy way across the ocean lay ;
 Thy paths amidst the watery waste ;
 Thy footsteps none could trace :
 Thy people Thou didst lead like sheep
 By Moses' and by Aaron's hand,
 Thy chosen ministers.

PSALM LXXVIII.

A psalm of instruction. By Asaph.

1, 2, 3. My people, hearken to my law,
 And bend your ear unto my words :
 My mouth shall utter parables,

And mysteries of old expound ;
 The tales which we have heard, and know ,
 And by our fathers have been told.

4, 5. We will not hide them from their sons,
 But let the latter ages know
 The praises of the Lord, his strength,
 And all the wonders He hath done.
 To Jacob He his witness gave,
 His law on Israel imposed :

5, 6. And to our fathers gave command
 That they should teach it to their sons :
 That generations yet to come
 And children to be born might learn
 His mighty works ; and, rising up,
 The story to their children tell.

7, 8. That they might place their trust in God,
 And not forget what God hath done ;
 But his commandments keep, and ne'er
 Be as their fathers were ; a race
 Perverse, of stubborn heart and false,
 And spirit faithless to their God.

9, 10, 11. The sons of Ephraim, arm'd with bows,
 In day of battle turn'd their backs :
 God's covenant they did not keep,
 And in his law they would not walk :
 Yea, they forgot his deeds, nor thought
 Of all the wonders they had seen.

12, 13, } In Egypt He, on Zoan's field,
 14. } Before their fathers wonders wrought :

He brought them through the parted sea,
And made the waters stand on heaps :
By day He led them with a cloud,
And with a light of fire all night.

- 15, 16. The rocks amidst the wilderness
He clave, and gave them drink thereout
As from a fountain's liquid depths :
Yea, torrents from the stony rock
He brought, and made the waters flow
Like rivers down its rugged steeps.
- 17, 18, } But in the wilderness they sinn'd
19. } Yet more, provoking the Most High :
And in their heart they tempted God,
Whilst asking meat to stay their souls :
Yea, 'gainst their God they spake—" Can God
A table in the desert spread ?"

20. " Behold, He smote the rock, and made
The waters gush, the streams o'erflow :
But can He likewise give us bread,
Or for his people flesh provide ?"

- 21, 22. God heard, and was displeased ; and, lo,
A kindling fire 'gainst Jacob blazed,
And wrath went up 'gainst Israel :
Because they did not God believe,
Nor trusted in his saving help.

- 23, 24, } Then to the clouds He gave command ;
25. } The doors of heaven He opened ;
And manna rain'd for them to eat,
Yea, fed them of the corn of heaven.

They all the bread of angels ate,
He sent them food unto the full.

26, 27, } Through heaven He made the East wind blow,
28. } And at his word the South wind came :
 He rain'd upon them flesh like dust,
 And fowls like sand upon the shore ;
 And let them fall amidst their camp,
 And round about each dwelling-place.

29, 30. So they did eat, and were well fill'd ;
 For He did give them their desire :
 They had not parted from their lust,
 The meat was still within their mouths,
 When on them fell the wrath of God !

31, 32, } The fat ones of their tribes He slew,
33. } And made the young of Israel bow :
 But for all this they sinned still,
 Nor, for his wondrous works, believed :
 Therefore their days in vanity,
 Their years in terror He consumed.

34, 35, } What time He slew them, then they turn'd,
36. } And sought, and asked after God ;
 Remembering God to be their rock,
 And their redeemer, the Most High.
 Yet they dissembled with their mouths,
 And lied unto Him with their tongues.

37, 38. For their heart was not right with Him ;
 Nor were they to his covenant firm.
 But He, of tender-mercy full,
 Forgave their sin, and slew them not :

Yea, many a time He turn'd away
His wrath, nor all his anger stirr'd.

39, 40. For He remember'd they were flesh ;
A fleeting breath that, passing by
Is gone, and comes not back again.
How often did their rebel race
His spirit in the desert vex,
And grieve Him in the wilderness !

41, 42. Yea, to their sin return'd, afresh
They tempted God, and did affront
The Holy One of Israel :
They thought not of his saving hand,
Nor did they call to mind the day
When from their foes He rescued them.

43, 44, } How He his signs in Egypt wrought,
45. } His wonders in the field of Zoan :
And turn'd their rivers into blood,
They could not of their waters drink :
He sent amongst them noisome flies,
And frogs by which they were consumed.

46, 47, } He gave their increase to the worm ;
48. } Their labour to the locust's bite :
Their vines with hailstones He destroy'd,
And all their sycamores with frost :
He gave their cattle to the hail,
Their flocks unto the scorching flame.

49, 50. Against them his fierce rage He sent,
Wrath, indignation, and despair,
His dread affliction-messengers :

A way He open'd for his wrath,
Nor spared their souls from death, but gave
Their lives unto the pestilence.

51, 52. All Egypt's first-born He did smite,
The strongest in the tents of Ham :
But, for the people of his love,
He made them to go forth like sheep :
Yea, like a flock He guided them
All through the barren wilderness.

53, 54. Fearless and safe He led them on,
Whilst o'er their foes the seas were pour'd ;
And brought them to the boundaries
Which hedged in his holy land ;
Unto the mountain of his choice,
Which his right hand had conquered.

55, 56. The heathen also He cast out,
And threw them to his people's lot ;
And made the tribes of Israel
To dwell within their vacant tents.
Yet tempted they the Lord their God ;
Yea, they provokèd the Most High.

57, 58. They did not keep his testimonies,
But like their fathers turned back,
And dealt unfaithfully ; they swerved
Like unto a deceitful bow :
With their high places they enraged,
And with their idols vexed Him.

59, 60, } God heard ; and lo, his anger rose,
61. } And He abhorred Israel :

Yea, Shiloh's dwelling He forsook,
The tent which He had pitch'd with men :
His strength He gave up to the yoke,
His glory to the foeman's hand.

62, 63, } He left his people to the sword,
64. } And smote in wrath his heritage :
The fire consumèd their young men,
Their maidens heard no bridal song :
Their priests were by the sword destroy'd,
And o'er them rose no widow's moan.

65, 66. Then waked the Lord, as out of sleep,
Or like a warrior cheer'd with wine :
And backward struck his enemies,
And made them a reproach for ever.

67, 68, } Yet He rejected Joseph's tents,
69. } Nor chose the tribe of Ephraim :
But He selected Judah's tribe ;
The Mount of Zion which He loved :
There high his sanctuary He built,
And fix'd it like the earth for ever.

70, 71, } And David He to serve Him chose,
72. } From sheep-folds taking him, and ewes
With young, on Jacob to attend,
And Israel his inheritance.
With upright heart he fed them then,
And guided them with skilful hands.

PSALM LXXIX.

A psalm of Asaph.

1. O GOD, the heathen have come up,
And ravaged thine inheritance :
Thy holy temple they've defiled,
And laid Jerusalem in heaps.
2. They've given to the fowls of heaven
Thy servants' flesh to be their meat :
The mangled bodies of thy saints
They've cast unto the beasts of earth.
3. Their blood about Jerusalem
Like water they have made to flow :
The ways are with their corpses strewn,
And none to bury them is found !
4. Unto our neighbours we're become
A standing by-word and reproach :
A mere derision and a scorn
To them that round about us dwell.
- 5, 6. How long, Lord ? Shall thy wrath ne'er cease ?
Thy jealousy burn on like fire ?
Thine anger on the heathen pour,
Who ne'er have trod thy temple's courts.

7. Thy fury on the nations pour
That have not known Thee ; on the realms
That have not call'd upon thy name :
For they've devourèd Israël,
And laid his habitations waste.
8. Remember not 'gainst us the ills
Of old by our forefathers done :
But haste, and bid thy mercies come
To meet us, for we're sunk in woe.
9. O God our Saviour, for the praise
Of thine own name, thy help afford :
For thy name's sake deliver us,
And o'er our sins thy pardon throw.
10. Why say the nations, where's their God ?
O teach the nations, while our eyes
Look on, what vengeance Thou requir'st
From those that shed thy servants' blood.
11. O let the sigh by captive heaved
In his lone cell before Thee rise :
By thy right arm's prevailing pow'r
Redeem the doomèd sons of death.
12. And to our neighbours, Lord, return
Into their bosom sevenfold
The blasphemy and foul reproach
Wherewith they have reproached Thee !
13. So we, thy people and the flock
Of thine own pasture, Thee will thank :
From age to age for evermore
Will we tell forth thy endless praise.

PSALM LXXX.

To the chief musician. On lilies. An ordinance of Asaph.

1. SHEPHERD of Israel, who of old
Led'st Joseph like a flock, give ear :
O Thou that dost enthronèd sit
Between the cherubim, shine forth.
2. Before the face of Ephraim,
Manasseh, and of Benjamin,
Arise, and waken up thy strength,
And greet us with thy saving help.
3. Come, lead us back again, O God,
And let thy face its light beam forth,
And then shall we be saved !
- 4, 5. Lord God of Hosts, how long shall smoke
Thy wrath against thy people's prayers ?
With bread of tears Thou feedest them,
Thou mak'st them drink deep draughts of tears.
6. Thou makest us a helpless prey,
The booty of our neighbours' strife :
By Thee abandon'd we're become
The corn and laughter of our foes.

7. Come, lead us back, O God of Hosts,
And let thy face its light beam forth,
And then shall we be saved !
8. 9. Thou brought'st a vine from Egypt, drav'st
The nations out, and planted'st it :
The ground before it Thou didst clear ;
Its roots it struck, and fill'd the land.
- 10, 11. The hills were cover'd with her shade,
God's cedars with her climbing boughs :
She stretch'd her branches to the sea,
Her suckers to the eastern stream.
- 12, 13. Why hast Thou broken down her hedge,
And bared her to the prowler's spoil ?
The forest boar doth ravage her,
The wild beast of the field devours.
- 14, 15. Turn, God of Hosts, from heaven look down,
Behold and visit, Lord, this vine :
The plant of thy right hand uphold,
The branch Thou strengthenedst for thyself.
16. Behold, thy vine is burn'd with fire,
The axe hath laid its branches waste :
By thy dread countenance rebuked,
Thy people, Lord, consume and die.
- 17, 18. Upon the man of thy right hand
Let thy sustaining hand be laid :
Upon the anointed son of man,
Whom Thou hast strengthen'd for thyself :
So will we ne'er go back from Thee,
Quicken us, and on Thee we'll call.

19. Come, lead us back, Lord God of Hosts,
And let thy face its light beam forth,
And then shall we be saved !
-

PSALM LXXXI.

To the chief musician. After the manner of Gath. By Asaph.

- 1, 2. CRY aloud unto God our Strength ;
Raise a shout unto Jacob's God :
A psalm strike up, and the timbrel bring,
The lute, and the pleasant harp.
3. Let the joyous trumpet blow
On the day when the moon is new :
Let its strains resound when the moon is full,
On the day of our festival.
4. For this was Israël's law,
The command of Jacob's God :
This ordinance was unto Joseph given,
When he march'd thro' the tyrant's land :
- 5, 6. When from Egypt he went, (where I heard
A tongue I did not understand :)
" His shoulders I eased from the basket's weight,
And his hands from the pots withdrew.

7. "Thou didst cry in thine hour of need,
 And I gave thee deliverance :
 From the veil of the thunder I heard thee, I proved
 Thy faith at the waters of strife.
- 8, 9. " My people, give ear to my words ;
 I adjure thee, O Israël, hear :
 Let no foreign god be amidst thee found,
 Nor to god of the stranger bow.
10. " Lo, I am the Lord thy God ;
 From Egypt I brought thee forth :
 In my love put thy trust, and thy mouth open wide,
 Behold, I will fill it with good.
- 11, 12. " But my people obey'd not my voice,
 And Israël lovèd Me not :
 So I gave them up to their own hearts' lusts,
 And they walk'd in their own conceits.
- 13, 14. " O would that my people had heard !
 And Israël walk'd in my ways !
 How soon had I humbled their adversaries,
 And my hand on their enemies turn'd.
- 15, 16. " God's foes at their feet should have cringed,
 And their days have endured for ever :
 He'd have fed them with prime of the wheat ; at thy call
 Streams of honey had flow'd from the rock."

PSALM LXXXII.

A psalm of Asaph.

- 1, 2. GOD stands amongst the assembled gods ;
Amidst the gods He judges still—
“ How long will ye unjustly judge,
And countenance the oppressor’s cause ?
- 3, 4. “ The poor man’s cause and orphan’s hear,
And right the wretched and the weak :
The afflicted and the poor set free,
And save them from the oppressor’s hand.
5. “ They know not, nor discern aright ;
In darkness they keep walking on :
The whole foundations of the earth
Are tottering, and out of course.
- 6, 7. “ Myself have said that ye were gods,
And all the sons of the Most High :
But ye the death of men shall die,
And like a common chieftain fall.”
8. Arise, O God : from thy high throne
Do Thou give judgment on the earth :
For Thou o’er all the nations rul’st,
And all the realms of earth are thine.

PSALM LXXXIII.

A song of praise. By Asaph.

- 1, 2. LORD, be not silent, be not dumb,
 No longer hold thy peace, O God :
 For lo, thine adversaries storm,
 Thy foes lift up their heads on high.
- 3, 4. Against thy people they have laid
 A cunning plot, and have conspired
 Against thy loved, thy treasured flock :
 Come, say they, let us cut them off,
 Their place be from the nations lost,
 And Israel's name be heard no more.
- 5, 6. In counsel deep and dark they've join'd ;
 'Gainst Thee a covenant they've struck—
 The Ishmaelites, with Edom's tents,
 The Moabites, and Hagarenes :
- 7, 8. Gebel and Ammon, Amalek,
 The Philistines, and men of Tyre :
 With them is Assur also join'd,
 The right arm of the sons of Lot.
- 9, 10. To them do as to Midian,
 To Sisera, and Jabin's hosts,
 In Kishon's vale, at Endor slain,
 Who lay like dung upon the earth.

- 11, 12. Their chiefs as Oreb make and Zeeb,
 With Zeba and Salmunna lay
 Their braggart princes, who aspire
 To seize upon the seats of God !
- 13, 14. Make them, my God, like whirling chaff,
 Or stubble, borne before the wind :
 As fire consumes the forest's pride,
 And flames upon the mountain spread—
- 15, 16. So lash them with thy tempest's scourge,
 And with thy storm-wind make them shake :
 Their faces cover o'er with shame,
 And make them seek thy name, O Lord.
- 17, 18. Be shame and trembling theirs for ever ;
 Yea, let them be ashamed and die :
 And Thou, whose name alone is Jah,
 Be known o'er earth to be Most High !
-

PSALM LXXXIV.

To the chief musician. After the manner of Gath. A psalm by the sons of Korah.

- 1, 2. How amiable are thy tabernacles,
 O Lord, Thou God of Hosts !
 My soul with eager longing pines,
 Yea, fainteth for thy courts :
 My throbbing heart and flesh cry out
 For Thee the living God.

3. Lo, where the trembling sparrow finds
A refuge and a home :
The swallow too a nest secure
Where she may lay her young :
'Tis by thine altars, Lord of Hosts,
My Sovereign, and my God !

4, 5. Blessed are they who ever dwell
Within thy hallow'd walls ;
Who ever Thee, adoring, sing,
Devoted to thy praise :
They're blest, who Thee their strength have made,
Whose hearts thy pathways scan.

6, 7. For them springs rise in Baca's vale,
Rain fills the exhausted pools :
And still from strength to strength they go,
Until, on Zion's mount,
Before the presence of the Lord,
The God of gods they bow.

8, 9. Lord God of Hosts, hear Thou my prayer,
Give ear, O Jacob's God !
O God our shield, upon the face
Of thine anointed look.

10. For one day in thy courts excels
A thousand idle years :
I'd rather, in the house of God,
Serve humbly at the door,
Than dwell supreme within the tents
Of wickedness and sin.

- 11, 12. For God a sun is and a shield ;
Glory and grace He gives :
No good thing God from those withholds
Who walk in uprightness.
Blest is the man, O Lord of hosts,
Who puts his trust in Thee !
-

PSALM LXXXV.

To the chief musician. A psalm by the sons of Korah.

- 1, 2. LORD, Thou of old wast gracious to thy land,
And unto captive Jacob didst return :
Thy people's wickedness Thou didst forgive,
And cast a veil o'er all their trespasses.
- 3, 4. All thy displeasure Thou didst put away,
And stay the fierceness of thine anger's glow :
O God our Saviour, now to us return,
And yet again thine indignation quench.
- 5, 6. Wilt Thou for ever let thine anger burn,
And still, from age to age, thy wrath prolong ?
Wilt Thou not yet return and quicken us,
And let thy people in thy name rejoice ?

- 7, 8. Show us, O Lord, the riches of thy love,
 And thy salvation to thy servants give :
 Yea, I will hear what God the Lord doth say—
 Peace to his people and his saints He speaks,
 But bids them not return to foolishness !
- 9, 10, } Salvation now nigh them that fear Him draws ;
 11. } And glory comes within our land to dwell :
 Lo, truth and mercy are together met,
 And peace and righteousness have kiss'd each other :
 Truth upwards shoots exulting from the earth,
 And from the heavens fair righteousness looks down.
- 12, 13. Yea, now the Lord his goodness shall bestow,
 And her increase our teeming land shall yield :
 Before God's presence righteousness shall march
 And teach our footsteps in his ways to walk.
-

PSALM LXXXVI.

A prayer of David.

- 1, 2. Bow down thine ear, and hear me, Lord,
 For I am poor and destitute :
 Preserve my soul, for I am pure,
 Do Thou thy servant save, who trusts in Thee, my God.

- 3, 4. Be gracious unto me, O Lord,
For all day long on Thee I call :
With joy thy servant's soul refresh,
For unto Thee, O Lord, do I lift up my soul.
- 5, 6. For Thou art good and merciful ;
To all that seek Thee, rich in love :
O Lord, give ear unto my prayer,
And hearken to the voice of my imploring cry.
- 7, 8. On Thee, in my affliction's hour
I call, for Thou dost answer me :
There's none like Thee among the gods,
Nor any where are works like unto thine, O Lord.
- 9, 10. All nations whom Thou'st made, shall come,
And bow before thy presence, Lord :
Yea, they shall glorify thy name,
Who'rt great and wonders dost : Thou, Thou alone
art God.
- 11, 12. Teach me, O Lord, the way Thou lov'st,
And in thy truth my feet shall walk :
O knit in one my loose desires,
And let me fear thy name with undivided heart.
- 13, 14. I'll praise Thee, Lord, with all my heart,
And glorify thy name for ever :
For great thy love to me has been,
Yea, Thou hast snatch'd my soul e'en from the depths of hell.
- 14, 15. O God, the proud against me rise,
And lawless bands my life pursue,

And set not Thee before their eyes :
Yet Thou, Lord, art a God of love,
Compassionate, and very kind,
To anger slow, and full of goodness and of truth.

16. Turn, and be gracious to me, Lord,
Thy strength unto thy servant give,
Yea, on thine handmaid's son, thy saving health bestow.

17. Some token of thy favouring grace
Upon me work, that all my foes
May see, and with confusion learn
That Thou, Lord, helpst me, and comfortest my soul.

PSALM LXXXVII.

A song of praise, by the sons of Korah.

1, 2, 3. JERUSALEM's foundations firm
Are on the holy mountains laid :
The Lord the gates of Zion loves
Above the rest of Jacob's homes :
Lo, glorious things are utterèd
Of thee, thou City of our God !

4. "Rahab amongst my worshippers,
And Babylon I will record."
Behold Philistia and Tyre,
And look upon the sons of Cush ;
All these of Salem's glory boast,
And claim her for their place of birth.

5, 6. Now shall it be of Zion said—
"Saint after saint in her is born,
And He the Highest planteth her."
The Lord, when He his people's roll
Inscribes, shall of each one declare—
"This man within her gates was born."

7. The joyous troop with dance and song
Her praises now shall celebrate :
"In thee are all my pleasant springs,
In thee each fountain of delight."

PSALM LXXXVIII.

A song by the sons of Korah. To the chief musician. In the extremity of bitterness. A lesson of Heman the Ezrahite.

1, 2, 3. O LORD, O my salvation's God,
By day, by night, to Thee I cry ;
O let my prayer before Thee come,
And to my wailings lend thine ear :
For sorrow fills my inmost soul,
My life is verging to the grave.

- 4, 5. With men descending to the tomb
I'm rank'd—as one whose strength is gone :
Death's freeman—I am like the slain,
Whose home is in the sepulchre,
Whom Thou rememberest no more,
Who're cut off from thy hand for ever.
- 6, 7. Thou'st laid me in the lowest pit,
Midst darkness, in abysses dire :
Thy heavy wrath upon me weighs,
Thou plaguest me with all thy waves !
- 8, 9. Thou'st put my friends away from me,
And to abhorrence changed their love :
I'm caged, and no escape I find,
Mine eye consumes with misery :
O Lord, on Thee all day I call,
To Thee I stretch my suppliant hands.
- 10, 11, } Wilt Thou shew wonders to the dead ?
12. } Shall shades rise up and praise thy name ?
Thy mercy in the tomb be told ?
Destruction hear thy faithfulness ?
Shall darkness all thy wonders learn ?
Oblivion's land thy righteousness ?
- 13, 14, } But I, Lord, unto Thee have cried,
15. } My prayer hath met Thee with the dawn :
Why dost Thou cast away my soul ?
Why hide from me thy face, O Lord ?
Weak from my youth, and nigh to death,
Thy fear distracts my labouring soul.

- 16, 17, } Thy surging wrath hath o'er me roll'd,
 18. } And by thy terrors I'm destroy'd :
 Round me all day like streams they rush,
 On every side they compass me :
 Lover and friend Thou'st from me put,
 And darkness made my company.
-

PSALM LXXXIX.

A lesson of Ethan the Ezrahite.

1. THE mercies of the Lord
 For ever will I sing :
 Thy faithfulness from age to age
 My mouth shall celebrate.
2. For mercy, I have said,
 Is now built up for ever :
 Upon the heavens thy faithfulness
 Thou hast establishèd.
3. With my adopted son
 A covenant I've made ;
 And to my servant David sworn
 An everlasting oath.

4. For ever and for ever
Thy seed will I set up ;
And build thy throne, unmoved to stand
From age to furthest age.
5. Behold, the heavens, O Lord,
Thy wonders celebrate :
The assembly of the holy ones
Thy faithfulness extols.
6. For who, throughout the skies,
Can with the Lord compare ?
And who, amongst the sons of gods,
Is like unto the Lord ?
7. The holy band on high
God's awful terrors own ;
The reverence of his holy name
On all around Him falls.
8. O Lord, Thou God of Hosts,
Whose might is like to thine ?
Whose truth, O Jah, with that can vie
Which Thee encompasseth ?
9. Thy mighty hand controls
The swelling of the sea :
When lift her waves their crests on high,
Thou dost their pride subdue.
10. As with a mortal wound
Thou crushedst Rahab's might :
And by the power of thine arm
Dispersedst all thy foes.

11. Thine are the heavens, O Lord,
Thine also is the earth :
The world's foundations Thou hast laid,
And all its wealth is thine.

12, 13. North Thou hast made and south ;
Tabor and Hermon shout,
Exulting in thy name :
Thine is an arm of might, thy hand
Is strong, thy right hand high.

14. Judgment and righteousness
Thy throne's foundations are :
Mercy and truth, attendants pure,
Before thy presence march.

15. That people blessed is
That knows the shout of joy :
That walketh in the light which beams
From thy bright face, O Lord.

16. They all day long with joy
Shall in thy name exult,
And in thy righteousness and truth
Shall they be raised on high.

17. For Thou their glory art,
The beauty of their strength :
Thou, by the power of thy grace,
Dost elevate our horn.

18. For to the Lord belongs
Our shield and our defence :
'Tis Israel's Holy One who gives
His chosen for our king.

19. Of old in vision to thy saints
Thou spakest, and didst say—
“ Upon a warrior help I’ve laid,
Out of the people I have raised
A chief of youthful prime.
- 20, 21. “ David, my servant, I have found,
And with my holy oil
I have anointed him. With him
My firmly planted hand shall rest,
My arm shall strengthen him.
- 22, 23. “ Him shall no foe distress, nor son
Of wickedness molest :
His adversaries I will crush
Before his face, and all who hate
His sway, with scourges lash.
- 24, 25. “ My truth and mercy shall with him
Abide, and through my name
His horn shall be exalted high :
His hand upon the sea I’ll place,
His right hand on the streams.
- 26, 27. “ Then he shall call Me, Father, God,
And his salvation’s rock :
And I will him my firstborn make,
And raise him to the highest throne,
Above the kings of earth.
- 28, 29. “ For him my mercies I will keep
For ever, and with him
I will maintain my covenant :
His seed for aye shall stand, his throne
Be lasting as the heavens.

- 30, 31. "But if his sons my law forsake,
And walk not in my ways :
If they my ordinance profane,
And if, to wickedness inclined,
They keep not my commands—
- 32, 33. "Their sins I'll visit with the rod,
With stripes their trespasses :
But will not from them take away
My mercy, nor be found untrue
Unto my plighted word.
- 34, 35. "My covenant I'll not profane,
Nor will I change the word
Which from my lips hath pass'd. Of old
I by my holiness have sworn,
Nor will to David lie —
- 36, 37. "His seed shall be for aye, his throne
Before Me like the sun :
For ever shall he firmly stand
Like to the moon, which in the skies
Her constant witness bears."
- 38, 39. But Thou hast angry been, and loath'd
Thine own anointed one :
Him hast Thou spurn'd ; Thou hast abhorr'd
Thy servant's covenant, and cast
To earth his crown profaned.
- 40, 41. Thou'st broken all his fences down,
And of his fastnesses
A horror made : each passer by
Despoileth him, the people round
O'erload him with reproach.

- 42, 43. The right hand of his foes Thou'st raised,
And filled with delight
The hearts of all his enemies :
Thou'st turn'd the power of his sword,
Nor help'd him in the fight.
- 44, 45. The light which round about him shone
In darkness Thou hast quench'd :
Down to the earth his throne Thou'st dash'd,
His prime of days Thou hast cut off,
And heap'd him o'er with shame.
- 46, 47. How long wilt Thou withdraw Thyself?
For ever wilt Thou, Lord?
Shall thy displeasure burn like fire?
Think what I am, how fleet my days :
Why hast Thou made in vain
Each child of humankind?
- 48, 49. What man hath lived, and not seen death?
Who from the hand of hell
His soul can save? Where, Lord, are fled
Thy former kindnesses, which erst
Thou didst to David swear
Upon thy faithfulness?
50. Remember the reproaches, Lord,
Upon thy people thrown :
Think how within my breast I bear
The scorn of all the heathen throngs
Which round about me swarm.

- 51, 52. For lo, thine enemies blaspheme,
Yea, they blaspheme, O Lord,
The steps of thine Anointed One.
Bless'd be the Lord for evermore :
Amen, again, Amen !
-

PSALM XC.

A prayer of Moses, the man of God.

- 1, 2. LORD, Thou our home hast been from age to age.
Of old, before the mountains were brought forth,
Or earth and living world were form'd, Thou art—
Through all eternity, eternal God !
- 3, 4. Thou turnest mortals back again to dust,
And sayst, " Return, ye children of mankind ! "
For in thy sight a thousand years pass by Like yesterday's short flight, like night's swift hours.
- 5, 6. Thou sweepest them away ; they're like a sleep
Which fades at morn, or like the changing grass :
At morn it blooms, but quickly fades away,
At eve it is cut down, dried up, and witherèd.

- 7, 8. So perish we, consumèd in thy wrath,
And by thy fearful indignation troubled :
For Thou our sins before Thee hast arraign'd,
And draggest forth our hidden trespasses
Into the light of thy dread countenance.
- 9, 10. Before thine anger all our days retire ;
Our years are spent, and vanish like a thought :
As for our days, to seventy years they run,
Yea, with the strong, to fourscore years endure :
But all their pride is weariness and woe,
So soon our strength is gone, our life is fled.
- 11, 12. Lord, who the power of thine anger knows ?
Or weighs aright the terrors of thy wrath ?
Teach us to scan the number of our days,
And yield to wisdom our obdurate hearts.
- 13, 14. Return, O Lord—How long dost Thou delay ?
And look, relenting, on thy servants' woes :
Each morn with mercies satisfy our souls,
And all our days with joy and gladness cheer.
- 15, 16. With gladness compensate our days of pain,
And years wherein thy chastisements we've borne :
Upon thy servants let thy works be shewn,
And on their sons thy glory be display'd.
17. The grace and favour of the Lord our God
Upon us beam, and shine about our path !
O prosper Thou the labour of our hands,
The labour of our hands that prosper Thou !

PSALM XCI.

- 1, 2. Who dwells within the High One's secret place,
Who underneath the Almighty's shadow rests ;
Who saith unto the Lord, " My refuge Thou
And fortress art, my God, in whom I trust—"
- 3, 4. Lo, He shall loose thee from the fowler's snare,
And keep thee from the noisome pestilence :
His feathers for thy cover He shall spread,
And underneath his wings shall shelter thee :
His truth shall be thy buckler and thy shield.
- 5, 6. Thou shalt not tremble at the night's alarm,
Nor at the shaft that in the day-time flies :
Nor fear the sickness which in darkness walks,
Nor wasting plague that at mid-day devours.
- 7, 8. A thousand at thy side—at thy right hand
Shall myriads fall : thyself it shall not touch.
But with thine eyes the judgment thou shalt see,
And look upon the sinner's recompense.
- 9, 10. Because thou sayst, " Thou, Lord, my refuge art,"
And with the Highest makest thine abode,
No evil chance shall meet thee by the way,
And no misfortune nigh thy dwelling come.

- 11, 12. His angels He shall charge thy steps to watch,
And bid them guard thee throughout all thy ways :
Upon their pinions they shall bear thee up,
Nor let thee strike thy foot against a stone.
13. Upon the lion thou shalt set thy foot,
And o'er the serpent walk : the lion's whelp
In fiercest strength of youth shalt thou tread down,
And trample on the fiery basilisk.
- 14, 15. "Because he loves Me, I will rescue him,
And set him up, because he knows my name :
Yea, he shall call, and I his voice will hear,
And in his trouble he shall find Me nigh.
- 15, 16. "From all his woes I will deliver him,
And on his head a crown of glory set :
With length of days I'll satisfy his soul,
And my salvation to his sight unfold."
-

PSALM XCII.

A hymn of praise for the Sabbath day.

- 1, 2, 3. 'Tis good to thank the Lord ; to sing
And praise thy name, O Thou Most High :
At dawn thy mercies to rehearse,
And every night thy faithfulness,
Upon the lute, and ten-string'd lyre,
And on the sweetly sounding harp.

- 4, 5. For through thy glorious works, O Lord,
Thou mak'st my heart o'erflow with joy :
And I will loudly celebrate
The operations of thy hands :
How great, how very great thy works,
How deep thy counsels are, O Lord.
- 6, 7. This is not to the brutish known,
Nor comprehended by the fool,
That when ungodly men like grass
Sprout out, and each ill-doer shews
His proudest blossoms, 'tis for this—
That they may be destroy'd for ever.
- 8, 9. But Thou, O Lord, enthroned on high,
Shalt reign through all eternity :
For lo, thine enemies, O Lord,
Thine enemies have perishèd ;
And all the doers of misdeeds
Are utterly dispersed and gone.
- 10, 11. But Thou shalt raise my horn on high
Like to the unicorn's, and pour
Thy freshest oil upon my head :
Mine eyes upon my foes shall look,
Mine ear shall hear her lust of them,
The wicked, that against me rose.
- 12, 13, } The righteous like the palm shall sprout,
14. } And like Lebānon's cedars grow.
They're planted in Jehovah's house,
They sprout out in the courts of God :
Still in old age their fruit they bear,
And lusty they remain, and green.

15. That through the earth it may be known
That He, the Lord, my rock, is just ;
And that with Him there dwelleth not
Or error or unrighteousness.
-

PSALM XCIII.

1. THE Lord is King : with majesty
He hath array'd Himself :
The Lord with glory is array'd,
And girt about with strength.
2. And now the world is fixed firm,
It trembles not nor heaves :
Thy throne, O God, of old is fix'd,
From everlasting Thou !
3. The floods, O Lord, have lifted up,
The floods have lifted up
Their loud resounding voice on high,
The floods lift up their roar.
4. But mightier than the clashing cries,
When many waters meet ;
Than Ocean's mighty surges far,
The mighty Lord on high.

5. Thy word is very faithful, Lord,
Thy promises are true ·
Thine house shall holiness adorn
Through all eternity.
-

PSALM XCIV.

- 1, 2. O LORD, Thou God of vengeance,
Thou God of vengeance, shine forth :
Lift up Thyself, Thou Judge of earth,
Return their doings to the proud.
- 3, 4. How long shall wicked men, O Lord,
How long shall wicked men exult ?
See, how the evil-doers boast,
And spout their proud, disdainful words.
- 5, 6, 7. Thy people, Lord, they trample down,
And thine inheritance they vex :
The widow and the stranger slay,
And many an orphan they destroy ;
And say—" The Lord doth not perceive,
The God of Jacob marks it not."
- 8, 9. Ye brutish people, mark ye this :
When will ye, O ye fools, be wise ?
Who fix'd the ear, shall He not hear ?
Who form'd the eye, shall He not see ?

10, 11. Who smites the realms, shall He ne'er chide?
Who teaches man, no knowledge have?
The Lord doth know the thoughts of man,
That as for them, they're vanity.

12, 13. He's blest whom Thou chastisest, Lord,
And whom Thou teachest from thy law:
Whom Thou, when evil days befall,
Dost keep at peace, until the pit
Is for the doomèd sinner dug.

14, 15. For God shall not his people spurn,
Nor his inheritance forsake:
But judgment shall to righteousness
Again return, and in her train
Shall follow all the true of heart.

16, 17. Who will with me 'gainst sinners fight?
With me against oppressors stand?
Unless the Lord my help had been,
My soul had found her silent home.

18, 19. But when I say—My foot hath slipp'd,
Thy mercy holds me up, O Lord:
When crowding thoughts my heart oppress,
Thy consolations soothe my soul.

20, 21. With Thee shall wicked thrones ally
Who 'gainst thy law oppression work?
Who 'gainst the righteous soul combine,
And doom to death the guiltless blood?

- 22, 23. For me, the Lord shall be my tower,
My God shall be my rock of trust :
He shall upon mine enemies
Their own iniquity return :
Through their own sins the Lord our God
Shall slay, yea, He shall slay them all.
-

PSALM XCV.

- 1, 2. COME, let us sing unto the Lord,
And shouts of gladness to the Rock
Of our salvation raise :
Before his presence let us haste
With thanksgiving, and songs of praise,
And shout aloud for joy.
- 3, 4, 5. Because the Lord's a mighty God,
A mighty King above all gods :
Earth's depths are in his hand :
His too the mountain's toilsome heights ;
The sea is his, by Him 'twas made ;
He moulded the dry land.
- 6, 7. Come, let us worship and bow down ;
Before the presence of the Lord
Our Maker let us kneel :
Because the Lord, He is our God,
And we the people whom He feeds,
The sheep of his own hand.

8, 9. Oh, if to-day ye'd hear his voice—
“Harden not ye your hearts, as when
Your fathers with Me strove
At Meribah, mid Massa's wastes,
When doubting still, my power they tried,
Proved Me, and saw my works.

10, 11. “With loathing forty years I bare
This race, and said—A people 'tis
Whose hearts are gone astray ;
They know not, nor will learn my ways :
And in my wrath I swear that they Should enter not my rest.”

PSALM XCVI.

1, 2. O SING to the Lord, a new strain awake ;
O sing to the Lord all ye regions of earth :
O sing to the Lord, and his name extol,
And declare his salvation from day to day.

3, 4. His glory abroad to the heathen make known,
And his wonders to every nation proclaim :
For great is the Lord, and exalted his praise ;
He is more to be feared than all the gods.

- 5, 6. For the gods of the nations are idols all ;
But Jehovah it is, who the heavens hath made :
His presence with splendour and majesty shines,
With glory and might is his sanctuary fill'd.
- 7, 8. Ascribe to the Lord, O ye clans of the nations,
Ascribe to the Lord all glory and strength ;
To the Lord give the glory that's due to his name,
With offerings enter his courts and with praise.
- 9, 10. In the beauty of holiness worship the Lord,
And with awe, all ye lands, in his presence bow
down :
Tell it out to the heathen—The Lord is King ;
And the earth He hath fix'd that it shall not shake ;
He shall judge all the nations with equity.
- 11, 12. Let the heavens rejoice, and the earth exult ;
Let the sea lift her voice, and the dwellers therein ;
Let the fields and each creature within them be glad ;
And each tree of the forest shout out for joy—
- 13, 14. In the presence of God, of the Lord Most High :
For He cometh, He cometh to judge the earth :
The world shall He judge in his righteousness ;
And the nations of earth by his stedfast truth.

PSALM XCVII.

- 1, 2. THE Lord is king : now let the earth exult,
 And be ye glad, ye multitude of isles ;
 Around his presence clouds and darkness roll ;
 On righteousness and judgment rests his throne ;
- 3, 4. Before Him goes a fire, whose hungry flame
 All round about burns up his enemies :
 His lightnings' blaze illuminates the world ;
 The earth beholds, and staggers with affright.
- 5, 6. The mountains melt like wax before the Lord,
 Before the Governor of all the earth :
 The heavens abroad his righteousness proclaim,
 And all the realms behold his majesty.
7. Confounded be all they, whose worship vain
 Before a graven image bends the knee :
 Cursèd be they, who in their idols boast,
 O all ye gods, bow down before the Lord !
- 8, 9. With gladness Sion heard thy judgments, Lord,
 And Judah's daughters listen'd with delight :
 For Thou, Lord, Thou, art high above the earth,
 Above all gods Thou art exalted far.

10. O ye that love the Lord, hate wickedness :
The Lord the souls of all his saints defends,
And from the hands of sinners sets them free.
- 11, 12. Lo, light is sown for righteous hands to reap ;
And seeds of gladness for the true of heart :
Rejoice in God, ye righteous, and with thanks
In memory keep his holiness and truth.
-

PSALM XCVIII.

1. O SING to the Lord, a new strain awake ;
For wonderful things He hath done :
With his own right hand and his holy arm
Hath He gotten the victory.
2. In the sight of the heathen the Lord hath shewn
The might of his saving power :
In the midst of the nations He hath reveal'd
His truth and his righteousness.
3. He hath thought of his mercies and of the truth
Which to Israël's house He pledged :
And the ends of the earth the salvation have seen
Which our God for his people hath wrought.

- 4, 5. To the Lord raise a shout of rejoicing, O earth,
And break out into music and song :
Sound the praise of the Lord with the joyous harp,
With the harp and the voice of song.
- 6, 7. With the voice of the trumpet and clarion hail
The presence of God the king :
Let the depths of the sea with its fulness be stirr'd,
The world and the dwellers therein.
- 8, 9. Let the floods clap their hands, let the mountains
rejoice,
And unite in a chorus of praise—
In the presence of God, for He cometh to judge
The earth and its habitants ;
The world He will judge in his righteousness,
And the nations with justice doom.
-

PSALM XCIX.

1. THE Lord is king : before his throne
Ye nations trembling fall :
He sits between the cherubim,
Quake, earth, and be thou still.

- 2, 3. The Lord is great on Zion's mount,
Above all nations high :
Let all thy mighty name extol,
Thy dread, thy HOLY name !
4. The King's dread power loves righteousness ;
On right Thou'st built thy throne :
In Jacob Thou hast judgment wrought,
And planted equity.
5. O celebrate the Lord our God :
With reverential awe
Before his footstool prostrate fall,
The HOLY place adore.
6. Moses and Aaron, saints renown'd
Amongst the priests of God,
And Samuel amongst the seers
That call upon his name—
Behold, these call'd upon the Lord,
And He did answer them.
7. Behind the pillar'd screen of cloud
He spake to them his word :
And they the law He gave them kept,
And his commands obey'd.
8. O Lord our God, Thou heardest them :
Unto thy people Thou
A God of mercy shewd'st Thyself,
Of vengeance towards their sins !
9. O celebrate the Lord our God :
Before his holy mount
Fall prostrate, and our God adore,
The Lord, the HOLY One !

PSALM C.

A hymn of praise.

1. LET all the earth Jehovah greet
With shouts of triumph and of praise :
The Lord with joy and gladness serve,
And come before Him with a song.
- 2, 3. Know that Jehovah, He is God :
'Tis He hath made us, not ourselves :
We are his people, and the flock
Whom He in his own pasture feeds:
4. With thanksgiving his gates approach,
And come into his courts with praise :
With thankful hearts his praises sing,
And bless and magnify his name.
5. For gracious is the Lord and kind,
And everlasting is his love :
His faithfulness for aye endures,
His stedfast truth from age to age.

PSALM CI.

By David. To the chief musician.

- 1, 2. OF mercy, Lord, to Thee I'll sing,
 And celebrate thy righteousness.
 By wisdom I will guide my steps,
 And keep them in the perfect way :
 O when wilt Thou come unto me ?
 Within my house I'll walk with perfectness of heart.
- 3, 4. No wicked thing before mine eyes
 Will I set up : no hateful deed
 Of sinfulness to me shall cleave :
 From me the heart perverse shall flee,
 Iniquity I will not know,
 Who slanders secretly his neighbour I will slay.
- 5, 6. The lofty eye, the swelling breast
 I will not brook : throughout the land
 Mine eyes the faithful ones shall seek,
 And choose them in mine house to dwell :
 Who walketh in the perfect way,
 In him will I delight, he shall my servant be.
- 7, 8. No treacherous man with me shall dwell,
 Nor liar in my presence stand :
 Each day at morn will I arise,
 And slay the wicked of the earth :
 Till from the city of the Lord
 I have cut off each soul that works iniquity.

PSALM CII.

A prayer of the afflicted, when he is overwhelmed, and poureth out his complaint before the Lord.

1, 2. LORD, hear my prayer, and let my cry
 Come up before thy throne :
 Turn not thy face away from me,
 But in my day of need
 Incline thine ear : the day I call
 Make haste and answer me.

3, 4. Because, like smoke, my days are spent,
 My bones like brands are burn'd :
 My heart is smitten down like grass,
 Dried up and witherèd :
 Yea, I forget to eat, and let
 My food unheeded lie.

5, 6, 7. So deep my groans, my bones adhere
 Unto my wasted flesh :
 I'm like the desert pelican,
 Or ruin-haunting owl :
 I watch, and like a sparrow am
 Alone upon the roof.

- 8, 9. Mine adversaries all day long
O'erload me with reproach :
I'm made the curse of madden'd foes,
Whilst ashes I devour
In place of bread, and with my drink
I mingle bitter tears—
10. Because of thy displeasure, Lord,
And of thy burning wrath :
For Thou hast lifted me on high,
And dash'd me to the ground.
- 11, 12. For me, my days like shadows slope ;
I'm witherèd like grass :
But as for Thee, O Lord, Thou sitt'st
Upon thy throne for ever :
And the remembrance of thy name
From age to age endures.
- 13, 14. Now shalt Thou rise, and favour shew
To Zion's ruin'd walls :
For now her time of grace is come,
The time ordain'd of old :
Thy servants to her stones are kind,
Her dust with pity view.
- 15, 16, } The nations now thy name shall fear,
17. } Earth's kings thy glory own :
For now the Lord builds Zion up,
And in his glory shines :
The prayer of the forlorn He hears,
Their prayer He doth not spurn.

18, 19. This for the age to come is writ,
And nations yet unborn
Shall Jah their great Creator praise :
For from his holy height
He bendeth down ; from heaven the Lord
Looks forth upon the earth—

20, 21, } To hear the chained prisoner's groan,
22. } To loose the sons of death :
To make his name thro' Zion known,
Through Salem's streets his praise :
When realms and nations gathering come
From far to serve the Lord.

23, 24. My strength He brought down in the way,
My days He shortened :
Then said I, take me not away
Ere half my days are spent :
Through countless ages, O my God,
Thy years unending run.

25, 26. Of old Thou laid'st the earth's firm base,
Thy hands built up the heavens :
These shall decay, but Thou endure,
Yea, they shall all wax old
As raiment doth : like vestures Thou
Dost change them, and they're changed.

27, 28. But Thou art HE, the eternal God ;
Thy years are never full.
The children of thy saints shall dwell
At peace within the land :
And in thy presence shall their seed
Stand fast for evermore.

PSALM CIII.

By David.

- 1, 2. BLESS God, my soul, and every power
Within me, bless his holy name.
O bless the Lord, and Thou, my soul,
Forget not all his benefits.
- 3, 4. Bless Him, who all thy sins forgives,
And every pain and sickness heals :
Who from the pit thy life redeems,
And crowns thee with his tender love.
- 5, 6. Who fills thy mouth with goodness full,
And, eagle-like, thy youth renews :
Who executeth righteousness,
And renders justice to the oppress'd.
- 7, 8. The Lord his ways to Moses shew'd,
To Israel's sons his works display'd :
The Lord is merciful and kind,
To anger slow, in goodness rich.
- 9, 10. The Lord will not for ever chide,
And not for aye his wrath retain :
He hath not recompensed our sins,
Nor dealt us our transgressions' need.

- 11, 12. For high as heaven o'er earth expands,
With so great love God o'er us bends :
Far as the east is from the west,
So far He parts us from our sins.
- 13, 14. A father's pity for his child,
Such pity God his servants shews :
For, as for Him, He knows our frame,
And He remembers that we're dust.
- 15, 16. For man, his days are as the grass,
He blossoms like the field's frail flower,
Which, when the wind sweeps o'er it, dies,
Forgotten from its place for ever.
- 17, 18. But God's eternal mercies bide,
With them that fear his name, for ever :
For evermore his righteousness
Shall with the children's children dwell
Of such as keep his covenant,
Remember, and obey his laws.
- 19, 20. The Lord in heaven has fix'd his throne,
And o'er the universe He rules :
Bless Him, ye angels of the Lord,
Ye powers that execute his word,
Ye that, with mighty strength endued,
Unto his voice obedient move.
- 21, 22. Bless ye the Lord, all ye his Hosts ;
His ministers, that do his will :
Bless ye the Lord, all ye his works
In every place, where'er He reigns.
And thou, my soul, through all thy life,
With all thy strength, bless thou the Lord.

PSALM CIV.

1, 2. MY soul, bless thou the Lord :
 O Lord, my God, Thou art exceeding great ;
 With splendour and with majesty
 Thou hast array'd Thyself :
 Thou puttest light as 'twere a garment on,
 And, like a curtain, spreadest out the heavens.

3, 4. God on the waters lays
 His chamber beams, and for his chariot takes Thick clouds : He walks upon the wings
 Of the strong rushing wind :
 The winds He chooses for his messengers,
 And for his ministers a flaming fire.

5, 6. The earth upon its base
 He founded, that it might unshaken rest
 For ever and for ever firm :
 As with a vesture Thou
 Didst clothe its surface with the liquid deep,
 And o'er the mountain tops the waters stood.

- 7, 8, 9. At thy rebuke they fled :
 They shrank affrighted from thy thunder's voice :
 They climb'd the hills, ran down the vales,
 To their appointed place :
 A bound Thou'st set them which they shall not pass,
 Nor back return, nor cover more the earth.
- 10, 11, } Into the dells He sends
 12. } The gushing springs, which wind among the hills :
 There drinks each creature of the field,
 The wild ass slakes his thirst :
 About their banks the birds of heaven dwell,
 And from the branches send the voice of song.
- 13, 14. He watereth the hills
 From his high chambers : earth is filled full
 With fruit of thy benignant works :
 He maketh grass to grow
 For cattle ; for man's use the juicy herb ;
 That so from earth He may cause bread to spring,
- 15, 16. And wine that cheers the heart :
 That with glad oil the face of man may shine,
 And with the life-sustaining bread
 His heart may be refresh'd :
 The trees of God are lusty and full fed,
 Lebānon's cedars, planted by the Lord.
- 17, 18. There build the birds their nests,
 And on the fir-tree tops the stork doth lodge.
 The heights of lofty mountains yield
 A refuge to the goat :
 Whilst mid the rocks the feeble coney hides,
 And seeks a dwelling in their sheltering clefts.

19, 20. The moon for seasons serves,
And at the time ordain'd the sun goes down :
The darkness Thou dost summon forth,
And night o'erspreads the earth :
Then quits each beast of night its secret lair,
And o'er the trampled forest roams at will.

21, 22, } The hungry lions roar
23. } In quest of prey, and ask their meat of God ;
The sun arises, and in troops
They get them to their dens :
Then man awakening to his labour goes,
And plies his work until the shades of eve.

24, 25. O Lord, how manifold
Thy works : in wisdom hast Thou made them
all :
The earth is with thy riches full :
So is this sea, so great,
So wide on either hand, where countless swarm
Thy living creatures, forms minute and huge.

26, 27. There find the ships a road ;
And that leviathan whom Thou hast made
To take his pastime in the deep :
These all upon Thee wait,
And look expectant to thy bounteous hand,
That at their season Thou may'st give them meat.

28, 29. Thou giv'st it them, and they
Do gather it : Thou openest thine hand,

And they are with thy goodness fill'd :
Thou hid'st thy face, and they
Are troubled : Thou tak'st away their breath,
And lo, they die, and turn again to dust.

30, 31. Thou sendest forth thy breath,
And they created are : to life they wake,
And Thou renew'st the face of earth.
The Lord be magnified ;
Yea, let his glory evermore endure ;
Let the Creator in his works rejoice.

32, 33. He looks upon the earth,
And lo, it trembles : if He do but touch
The mountains, they burst forth and smoke :
Unto the Lord I'll sing
As long as life endures ; whilst being lasts,
With voice and music will I praise the Lord.

34, 35. In God is my delight :
O let the meditations of my heart
Be pleasing unto Thee, O Lord !
Transgressors from the earth
Shall be cut off, and sinners be no more :
Bless thou the Lord, my soul : O praise the Lord !

PSALM CV.

- 1, 2. GIVE thanks to God, his name invoke ;
His deeds amidst the people tell :
With songs, with psalms his praise extol,
Yea, all his wonders celebrate.
- 3, 4. His holy name your glory make ;
Be glad, ye hearts, that seek the Lord :
The Lord approach, his might adore ;
Seek ye his countenance for ever.
- 5, 6. Remember his stupendous deeds ;
His marvels, and his dread decrees :
Seed of his servant Abraham,
Ye sons of Jacob his elect.
- 7, 8. 'Tis He, the Lord, who is our God ;
O'er all the earth his judgments sway :
He hath for aye his covenant kept ;
And for a thousand ages seal'd
- 9, 10. The league He struck with Abraham ;
His solemn oath to Isaac sworn :
The ordinance to Jacob given,
And unto Israël assign'd
For an eternal covenant :

11. When thus He spake—"To thee, my son,
The land of Canaan I give :
This thine inheritance shall be
Thy measured portion, and thy lot."
- 12, 13. When weak they were, in number few,
And sojourners in foreign lands ;
When wandering from tribe to tribe,
Adrift from realm to nation borne :
- 14, 15. He suffered none to do them wrong,
Yea, kings for their sakes He rebuked :
"Forbear, nor mine anointed touch ;
See ye do not my prophets harm."
- 16, 17. When famine on the land He call'd,
And all the staff of bread destroy'd,
Before them then a chief He sent,
And Joseph for a slave was sold.
- 18, 19. His foot was with the fetter bruised.
His soul in iron bondage pined ;
Until the Lord his sentence gave,
The word of God pronounced him clear.
- 20, 21. Then sent the king and loosèd him,
The nation's ruler set him free :
And made him lord o'er all his house,
Of all he had the governor :
- 22, 23. To bind his princes at his will,
And to instruct his counsellors.
So Israel unto Egypt came,
The land of Ham was Jacob's home.

- 24, 25. He gave his people large increase,
And made them stronger than their foes,
Who, changed in heart, his people hate,
And shrewdly with his servants deal.
- 26, 27. He sent his servant Moses then,
And Aaron his elected priest :
Amongst them they his signs display'd,
His wonders in the land of Ham.
- 28, 29. Darkness He sent, and lo, 'twas dark ;
And men despised his word no more :
He turn'd their waters into blood,
And brought destruction on their fish.
- 30, 31. With swarms of frogs their country teem'd,
Their monarch's chambers were defiled :
He spake, and lo, the gadfly came,
And lice o'er all their borders spread.
- 32, 33. For showers He sent them storms of hail,
And fire which blazed across their land :
Their fig-trees and their vines He smote,
And brake the trees about their coasts.
- 34, 35. He spake, and in unnumber'd swarms
Locust and caterpillar came :
They ate up every herb which grew,
They ate the fruit up of the ground.
- 36, 37. The first-born also through the land,
The prime of all their strength He smote :
And forth, with gold and silver deck'd,
And firm of foot He brought the tribes.

- 38, 39. Egypt at their departure joy'd,
For they had learn'd their slaves to fear :
A cloud to cover them He spread,
And sent a fire to light the night.
- 40, 41. They ask'd, and flights of quails He brought,
And fill'd them with the bread of heaven :
He clave the rock, and waters ran
Like rivers o'er the parched waste.
- 42, 43. For on his holy word He thought,
And on his servant Abraham :
And brought his people forth with joy,
His chosen with triumphant shouts.
- 44, 45. He gave them then the Gentiles' lands,
And let them reap their foemen's toil :
That so his statutes they might keep,
And heed his laws. O praise the Lord !
-

PSALM CVI.

- 1, 2, 3. O PRAISE the Lord, unto the Lord give thanks ;
For He is good ; his love endures for ever :
Who can express his wondrous deeds of might,
Or utter all the praises of the Lord ?
Blessed are they who uprightness maintain,
And he who always worketh righteousness.

- 4, 5, 6. Let me, with thine, thy thoughts of mercy share,
Yea, visit me with thy salvation, Lord:
That I the good for thine elect reserved
Myself may see : that I too may rejoice
In that rejoicing which thy people know,
And in Thee boast with thine inheritance.
- 6, 7. We with our fathers have transgress'd ; have sinn'd;
Have acted wickedly. In Egypt they
Did not consider all thy wondrous works ;
They thought not of thy many kindnesses ;
But by the sea thine anger they provoked,
Yea, by the sea of reeds, thy spirit vex'd.
- 8, 9, } Yet He, for his name's sake, deliver'd them ;
10. } To let his strength be known, his mighty power :
He chid the sea of reeds, and it dried up ;
And led them through the deep, as 'twere a plain,
Thus from their haters He deliver'd them,
Yea, He redeem'd them from their foemen's hands.
- 11, 12, } The floods returning cover'd up their foes ;
13. } Amongst them all not one remain'd alive.
Then did his people in his word believe,
And chanted forth the praises of his name :
But soon, ungrateful, they forgot his works,
And from his counsels turn'd away their ear.
- 14, 15. With lust they lusted in the wilderness,
And in the desert tempted still their God :
And so He gave them all their hearts' desire,
But leanness sent to gnaw into their souls.

16, 17, } Again, they envied Moses in the camp,
18. } And Aaron, the anointed of the Lord :
 Then gaped the earth, and swallow'd Dathan up,
 And cover'd all Abiram's company :
 Amidst their company a fire blazed forth ;
 Those wicked men were burned in the flames.

19, 20, } On Horeb's heights a golden calf they made,
21. } And down before a molten image bow'd :
 And thus they changed their Glory for the form
 Of brutish ox that browseth on the grass :
 Of God their Saviour they no longer thought,
 Nor of his mighty deeds in Egypt wrought :

22, 23. His wondrous works within the land of Ham,
 His deeds of terror by the sea of reeds :
 For this, He said, He would destroy them all—
 Had not his chosen Moses in the breach
 Before Him stood—to take away his wrath,
 To intercede—that He might not destroy.

24, 25. Moreover they the pleasant land despised,
 And would not place their trust upon his word :
 But in their tents perversely murmured,
 And hearken'd not unto the voice of God.

26, 27. Against them then He lifted up his hand
 To overthrow them in the wilderness :
 Amidst the nations to o'erthrow their seed,
 To scatter them amidst the heathen lands.

- 28, 29. They join'd themselves to Baal-peor too,
And shared the feast presented to the dead :
With such inventions they provoked his wrath,
Until upon them burst the deadly plague !
- 30, 31. With zeal inflamed then Phinehas stood up,
And judgment wrought, and so the plague was
stay'd :
And this was counted as a righteous work,
A deed of praise from age to age for ever.
- 32, 33. The Lord they anger'd by Meribah's streams,
And through their fault, with Moses it went ill :
For with their stubbornness they vex'd his soul,
Till words of folly issued from his lips.
- 34, 35, } They did not cut the rebel nations off,
36. } Whom God their Lord had charged them to destroy :
But intermingled with the heathen hordes,
And learned all their deeds of wickedness ;
With them they served their graven images,
And this became a snare unto their souls.
- 37, 38. For now, behold, they sacrificed their sons,
And slew their daughters at a devil's shrine :
They pourèd out the blood of innocence,
The blood of their own daughters and their sons,
Whom unto Canaan's graven gods they slew,
And the foul land was all profaned with blood.

- 39, 40, } Thus they with their own works themselves defiled,
41. } And with base lust to their own creatures clave :
So 'gainst his people burn'd the wrath of God,
And He abhorr'd his own inheritance :
He gave them up into the Gentiles' hands,
And they that hated them, became their lords.
- 42, 43. Their enemies laid their yoke upon their necks,
And made them, trembling, stoop beneath their hands;
Ofttimes did He release them from their woes,
But as for them, in heart rebellious still,
They sunk again through their iniquity.
- 44, 45, } Yet still did He look down on their distress,
46. } What time He heard their miserable cry :
His covenant with them He recall'd to mind,
And of his great compassion pitied them :
Yea, drew upon them merciful regards
From those that led them to captivity.
- 47, 48. Save us, O Lord our God, and gather us
From heathen lands ; that we thy holy name
May glorify, and triumph in thy praise.
Bless'd be the Lord, the God of Israel,
From age to age for ever ; and let all
The people say, Amen. Praise ye the Lord.

PSALM CVII.

- 1, 2, 3. O THANK the Lord, for He is good ;
 His mercy doth endure for ever :
 Speak, ye redeemed of the Lord,
 Redeemed from your foemen's hands,
 And gather'd out of regions wide,
From east, from west, from north, and from the southern sea.
- 4, 5, 6. They wander'd o'er the desert waste,
 Nor city found wherein to dwell :
 With hunger famish'd, parch'd with thirst,
 Their souls within them languished :
 Then in their straits to God they cried,
And He deliver'd them from all their misery.
- 7, 8, 9. He shew'd them where a city stood,
 And led them straight to their abode.
 The Lord be for his mercy praised,
 His wonders to the sons of men :
 For He the longing soul doth stay,
The lean and hungry soul He filleth full with good.

10, 11, } Who in death's darksome shadow lay,
 12, 13. } In sorrow and in iron bound—
 [For they rebell'd against the words
 Of God, and spurn'd the High One's law ;
 So He bow'd down their hearts with toil,
 They fainted, and found none to help]
 These cried to God in their distress,
 And He deliver'd them from all their misery.

14, 15, } From darkness, and death's shadow drear
 16. } He brought them forth, and burst their bonds.
 The Lord be for his mercy praised,
 His wonders to the sons of men ;
 For He doth break the gates of brass,
 And doth asunder cleave each iron forgèd bolt.

17, 18, } The foolish for their wickedness
 19. } And their transgressions are chastised :
 Their soul diseased all food abhors,
 And nigh the gates of death they draw :
 Then in their straits on God they call,
 And He delivers them from all their misery.

20, 21, } He sends his word, and healeth them,
 22. } And saves them from the yawning pit.
 The Lord be for his mercy praised,
 His wonders to the sons of men :
 Be thanksgiving their sacrifice,
 And let them in glad songs his mighty deeds proclaim.

23, 24, } They who in ships go down the sea,
 25. } And mid the waste of waters toil ;

These men behold the works of God,
His wonders in the ocean's depths :
He speaks, and makes the storm-wind rise,
Which o'er the waters sweeps, and lifts the waves
on high.

26, 27, } To heaven they mount ; into the deeps
28. } They sink ; their soul for trouble melts :
Like drunken men they reel and rock,
And spent is all their trusted skill :
Then in their straits on God they call,
And He delivers them from all their misery,

29, 30, } The storm to stillness He subdues,
31. } And every billow sinks to rest :
Then are they glad, for they're at peace,
And, wafted by his kindly breeze,
They reach the haven of their hopes.
The Lord be for his goodness praised,
And for his wonders wrought for man's ungrateful sons.

32, 33, } Amidst the people Him extol,
34. } And praise Him where the elders meet :
The streams dry up at his command,
Where fountains gush'd, a desert burns :
A fruitful land to barrenness
He turneth for the sins of them that dwell therein.

35, 36, } The desert to a lake He turns,
37. } An arid land to gushing streams :

And there He bids the hungry dwell,
 And build a city for their rest ;
 Commands them there the fields to sow,
 And vineyards plant to yield the fruits of their increase.

38, 39, } Their favour'd seed He multiplies,
 40. } Nor lets their cattle be decreased ;
 Though erst they were decreased, and low
 Through bonds, affliction, and distress.
 On noble chiefs contempt He pours,
 And bids them wander lost amidst the trackless
 waste :

41, 42, } And from their woes the poor He lifts,
 43. } And full as flocks their households makes.
 With gladness this the righteous see,
 And every wicked tongue is still.
 Whoe'er is wise these things will weigh,
 And he shall understand the goodness of the Lord.

PSALM CVIII.

A psalm of David.

1, 2, 3, } O God, my heart is tunèd to thy praise ;
 4, 5. } To Thee I'll sing ; Thee shall my powers exalt.
 Awake my harp, and psaltery awake ;

Now will I waken up the slumbering morn :
 Amidst the nations Thee I'll praise, O Lord,
 Yea, midst the heathen Thee I'll celebrate :
 For thy great goodness reaches down from heaven,
 And to the skies thy faithfulness extends :
 Above the heavens be Thou exalted, Lord,
 And be thy glory o'er the earth display'd.

6, 7, 8, } Lord, that thy loved ones may deliverance find,
 9. } Save with thy right hand ; hearken to our prayer.
 God in his holiness his word hath pledged ;
 And I will in his promises exult :
 Shechem I will divide, and Succoth's vale
 Will I mete out : for mine is Gilead,
 And mine Manasseh : Ephraim too is mine,
 My head's defence : lawgiving Judah mine.
 Moab my washpot is : I cast my shoe
 O'er Edom : swell my pomp, Philistia !

10, 11, } But who will lead me into Edom's gates ?
 12, 13. } Or who will lodge me in her towers of strength ?
 Lord, wilt not Thou, tho' Thou didst cast us off,
 Though with our armies Thou would'st not go
 forth ?
 O give to us thy help from trouble, Lord,
 For false the hope of man's deliverance.
 But we through God will valiant deeds perform,
 For He it is shall tread our foemen down !

PSALM CIX.

To the chief musician. A psalm of David.

- 1, 2, 3. God of my praise, hold not thy peace :
 For wicked men and men of guile
 Against me open wide their mouths,
 Against me speak with lying tongues.
 With words of hate they compass me,
 And fight against me, unprovoked.
- 4, 5. I loved them, and they sought my life ;
 Yet I betook myself to prayer :
 But they for good return'd me ill,
 And paid me hatred for my love.
- 6, 7. Set over him a man of guilt,
 And at his right hand plant a foe :
 From judgment let him go condemn'd,
 And let his very prayer be sin.
- 8, 9. His days be few, another man
 Be to his vacant office raised :
 Make Thou his children fatherless,
 His wife be doom'd to widowhood.

- 10, 11. His sons be wanderers, forced to seek
Through desert haunts the beggar's dole :
His wealth be by the extortioner seized,
His labour be the strangers' spoil.
- 12, 13. Let none to him the hand of mercy stretch,
And none shew pity to his orphan child :
Let his posterity be all cut off,
And after ages know not of his name.
- 14, 15. The Lord remember his forefathers' sins,
Nor let his mother's guilt be blotted out :
Before God's face let their transgressions stand,
And let Him sweep their memory from the earth.
16. Because compassion he remember'd not,
Nor deed of mercy by his hand was done ;
But he pursued the wretched and the poor,
And sought to slay the man of broken heart.
- 17, 18. Curses he loved, let such his portion be ;
Nor nigh him come the blessings which he loathed :
Because with curses he did clothe himself
As with a garment, let their venom flow
Into his bowels like the fountain's draught,
Yea, let it sink like oil into his bones.
- 19, 20. Let curses round him like his vesture cling,
And like his 'customed girdle clasp his loins :
Such be the Lord's reward unto my foes,
Plotters of evil, leagued against my soul.

- 21, 22. But Thou, O Lord Jehovah, for the sake
Of thine own name, work Thou on my behalf:
For thy dear mercy's sake, deliver me :
For, as for me, I'm wretched and forlorn,
And my heart bleeds, pierced through and through with wounds.
- 23, 24. Like eve's declining shadow, I depart,
I'm swept away like locusts in the gale :
My feeble knees through fasting faint and bend,
Nor knows my languid flesh the cheerful oil.
- 25, 26. I am become a scorn unto my foes ;
They look upon me, and they shake their heads :
O Lord my God, do Thou thy succour bring,
Of thy great goodness, save me from my woes.
- 27, 28, } Yea, let men know that thine own hand is here ;
29. } That Thou, O Lord, hast my salvation wrought :
Let them curse on, but Thou thy blessings shed,
Let them to shame—thy servant rise to joy.
Yea, let mine enemies with shame be clothed,
And with confusion cover'd as a cloak.
- 30, 31. So shall my mouth the Lord my God extol,
And 'midst the multitude his praises sing :
For at the right hand of the poor He stands,
And from the oppressor's sentence saves his soul.

PSALM CX.

A psalm of David.

- 1, 2. JEHOVAH to my Lord hath said—
 Sit Thou at my right hand, until
 Thy foemen I thy footstool make.
 The Lord shall out of Zion send
 The rod of thy victorious strength ;
 Rule Thou amidst thine enemies.
3. Thy people in thy day of power
 Their free-will offerings shall bring :
 In beauteous garb of holiness
 Thy dew of youth shall radiant glow,
 More brilliant than the glistening drops
 Which issue from the womb of morn.
- 4, 5. The Lord hath sworn—nor will repent :
 A priest art Thou, ordain'd for ever ;
 Thine order is Melchizedek's :
 At thy right hand Jehovah's might
 Shall princes to destruction send Down-stricken in his day of wrath.
- 6, 7. The heathen shall his judgment feel ;
 Their fields with corpses He shall fill,
 And crush the heads of many realms.
 The brook shall cheer Him by the way,
 And drinking from its quickening streams,
 In triumph shall He lift his head.

PSALM CXI.

1. O PRAISE the Lord : with all my heart
I'll magnify Jehovah's name,
Where righteous men assembly hold,
And where the congregation meets.
- 2, 3. Great are Jehovah's works ; by all
Who love them, are their marvels search'd :
Glory and might his deeds attend,
His righteousness stands fast for ever.
4. He hath for his stupendous works
An endless memory achieved :
The Lord our God is merciful,
In grace and loving-kindness rich.
- 5, 6. To them that fear Him meat He gives ;
His covenant He ne'er forgets :
His own his mighty power He shews,
And makes them rich with heathen stores.
- 7, 8. His hands with truth and justice deal ;
His laws are laws of faithfulness :
For ever and for ever sure,
They're wrought in truth and righteousness.
9. To Israel's race in thralldom bound
He sent his strong redemption down :
His covenant He ordain'd for ever,
Holy and reverend is his name.

10. The fear of God the fountain is Whence wisdom flows : aright shall they
Judge alway who its rules pursue,
The praise of it endures for ever.
-

PSALM CXII.

- 1, 2, 3. O PRAISE the Lord.
Happy the man that fears the Lord,
That in his law takes great delight :
Mighty on earth his seed shall be,
Yea, blest the issue of the just :
Riches and wealth his house shall fill,
His righteousness stands fast for ever.
- 4, 5, 6. For him light out of darkness springs,
The upright, merciful, and kind :
The good man gracious is and lends ;
He is in all his dealings just :
Ne'er shall he fall, nor ever fade
The memory of his righteousness.
- 7, 8. His stedfast heart shall tremble not
At message of mischance or ill,
Because he trusteth in the Lord :
His heart is stay'd upon his God,
And fearless shall he wait, until
He looks triumphant on his foes.

- 9, 10. His bounty o'er the poor he pours ;
 His righteousness endures for ever ;
 His horn of honour is upraised :
 The wicked shall behold, and grieve,
 And gnash his teeth, and pine away,
 And all his vengeful hopes shall die !

 PSALM CXIII.

- 1, 2. O PRAISE the Lord, His name be praised
 By ye his servants ; praise ye all the Lord.
 Bless'd be the name of God the Lord
 From this time forth for evermore !
- 3, 4. The Lord's name worthy is of praise
 From the sun's rising to his going down :
 The Lord, above all nations high,
 Above the heavens glorious.
- 5, 6. Who's like unto the Lord our God,
 Who dwells on high, yet deigns on heaven to look,
 Yea, deigns to look down and behold
 The things that pass upon the earth.
- 7, 8. The poor He raises from the dust,
 And from the dunghill lifts the needy up ;
 To make him amidst princes sit,
 Midst Israel's princes honourèd.

- 9, 10. He makes the barren woman bear,
And warms her bosom with a mother's joys :
In all his works his love is shewn ;
O all ye people, praise the Lord !
-

PSALM CXIV.

- 1, 2. O PRAISE the Lord.
When Israel forth from Egypt went,
And Jacob's children from a strange-tongued race,
God's sanctuary was Judah's tribe,
His sovereignty in Israël.
- 3, 4. The sea their coming saw, and fled,
And backward turn'd the flow of Jordan's stream :
Like rams the mountains bounded high,
And leapt like lambs the startled hills.
- 5, 6. What ail'd thee, that thou fled'st, O sea ?
And Jordan, thee, that thou didst backward turn ?
Ye mountains, that like rams ye leapt ?
And ye, ye startled hills, like lambs ?
- 7, 8. Tremble, thou earth, before the Lord,
Before the presence quake of Israel's God ;
Who out of rock creates a pool,
From flint calls forth a gushing stream.

PSALM CXV.

1. Nor unto us, not unto us,
 But unto thine own name
 Give glory, Lord, and vindicate
 Thy goodness and thy truth.
- 2, 3. Why should the braggart nations say,
 “Where now is Israel’s God?”
 Surely our God is in the heavens,
 He does whate’er He lists.
- 4, 5. Their idols silver are and gold,
 The work of human hands :
 Mouths have they, but they do not speak,
 They’ve eyes, but do not see.
- 6, 7. Ears have they, but they do not hear,
 They’ve nostrils, but smell not :
 Hands have they, but they do not feel,
 And feet, but cannot walk :
 No voice proceedeth from their throat,
 There’s not a murmur heard.
- 8, 9. Like unto them their makers are,
 And all that trust in them :
 O Israel in Jehovah trust—
 He is their help and shield.

- 10, 11. O house of Aaron, trust in Jah,—
He is their help and shield;
Trust ye in Jah, who Jah do fear—
He is their help and shield.
12. The Lord hath now remember'd us :
He'll bless, yea, He will bless
The house of Israel ; He will bless
The house of Aäron.
- 13, 14. Whoe'er they be that fear the Lord,
He'll bless them, small and great :
The Lord will give you large increase,
To you and to your seed.
- 15, 16. Lo, ye shall of the Lord be bless'd,
Who heaven and earth hath made :
The heavens, the heavens are God's ; the earth
He gives the sons of men.
- 17, 18. The dead praise not the Lord, nor all
Who to the land go down
Of silence ; but we'll praise the Lord
Henceforth for evermore,
Praise ye the Lord !

PSALM CXVI.

- 1, 2. I LOVE the Lord, for He my voice,
 My supplicating cries hath heard :
 His ear to me He bowèd down,
 So, all my days, on Him I'll call.
- 3, 4. Around me clung the pangs of death ;
 The pains of Hell gat hold of me ;
 I fell into the straits of woe :
 Then on Jehovah's name I call'd—
 "O Lord, I pray Thee, save my soul."
- 5, 6. Gracious the Lord, and righteous is ;
 Our God is full of tenderness :
 The Lord defends the simple folk ;
 I fainted, and He helped me.
- 7, 8, 9. Return, my soul, unto thy rest,
 Because the Lord hath helped thee ;
 Yea, Thou hast saved my soul from death,
 From tears mine eyes, my feet from falls :
 Now shall I in God's presence dwell,
 And walk along the land of life.

10, 11. I trusted, and my faith avow'd,
Tho' sorely by affliction tried :
In my dismay and grief I said,
The sons of men are all untrue !

12, 13. What shall I render to the Lord
For all the bounties of his love ?
The cup of God's deliverance
I'll take, and call upon his name.

14, 15. My vows unto the Lord I'll pay,
And praise Him in his people's sight :
Of highest count his servants' deaths
Are held before the eyes of God !

16, 17. Behold, I am thy servant, Lord,
Thy servant, and thine handmaid's son ;
My fetters Thou hast sever'd :
To Thee an offering of praise
I'll offer, and invoke thy name.

18, 19. My vows unto the Lord I'll pay,
And praise Him in his people's sight,
Within Jehovah's temple-courts,
Yea, in thy midst, Jerusalem.
O praise the Lord !

PSALM CXVII.

- 1, 2. O ALL ye nations, praise the Lord,
 O laud Him, all ye tribes of earth :
 For o'er us flows his mighty love,
 His truth is our eternal stay.
 O praise the Lord !
-

PSALM CXVIII.

- 1, 2, } O PRAISE the Lord, for He is good,
 3, 4. } And everlasting is his love :
 O now, let Israël declare
 That everlasting is his love :
 O now, let Aaron's house declare
 That everlasting is his love :
 O ye, that fear the Lord, declare
 That everlasting is his love !
- 5, 6, } From straits upon the Lord I call'd ;
 7, 8. } The Lord in freedom answer'd me :
 The Lord is with me, as for man,
 I will not fear what he can do :

The Lord amidst my helpers comes,
And on my foes I shall look down :
'Tis better on the Lord to trust
Than in the succour of a man.

9, 10, } 'Tis better on the Lord to trust
11, 12. } Than on a prince's aid to lean :
Lo, all the nations hem me round,
But in God's name I'll cut them off :
They hem me round, they hem me round,
But in God's name I'll cut them off :
Like bees they compass me about,
But like the blaze of thorns they'll fall,
For in God's name I'll cut them off.

13, 14, } Thou stravest hard to thrust me down,
15, 16. } But I was helped of the Lord :
The Lord my strength is, and my song,
Yea, He has my salvation been :
The shout of joy and safety rings
Amidst the dwellings of the just :
" The Lord's right hand doth strength impart ;
The Lord's right hand exalts on high ;
The Lord's right hand doth strength impart."

17, 18, } I shall not die ; but still shall live,
19, 20. } And celebrate the works of God :
The Lord hath scourged and chasten'd me,
But hath not yielded me to death :
Now ope the gates of righteousness,
And I'll go in, and praise the Lord :
" Lo, these the Lord's gates are, through these
The sons of righteousness go in."

21, 22, } I'll praise Thee, for Thou'st heard my prayer ;
23, 24. } Yea, Thou hast my salvation been :

The stone the builders cast aside,
Is now for the foundation ta'en,
And bears the angle of the wall :
The Lord Himself this work has wrought,
Its wonders well our eyes may charm :
This is the day the Lord hath made ;
'Tis ours for triumph and for joy.

25, 26, } " O save us now, we pray Thee, Lord ;

27. } O Lord, we pray Thee, prosper us ;

Blessed be he who hither comes
In the Lord's name his courts to tread ;
We bless thee from the house of God :
The Lord is God, and on us shines ;
Then to the horned altar bind
With cords the ready sacrifice.

28, 29. Thou art my God, and Thee I'll praise ;
Thee, O my God, I'll magnify :
O praise the Lord, for He is good,
And everlasting is his love."

PSALM CXIX.

ALEPH.

1, 2, 3. BLESSED are they whose ways are clean,
 Who in the Lord's commandments walk :
 Blessed are they who keep his laws,
 Who seek Him with a perfect heart :
 They, who no wickedness commit,
 Whose walk is in the ways of God.

4, 5. Thyself hast thy decrees ordain'd
 To be observed with strictest care :
 O that my ways so stable were,
 That I might keep thine ordinances.

6, 7, 8. Then shall I be preserved from shame,
 When all thy precepts I obey :
 With upright heart I'll praise Thee then,
 When in thy righteous judgments taught :
 For me, thy statutes I will keep,
 Forsake me not, O Lord, for ever.

BETH.

9, 10. How shall a young man cleanse his path ?
 By making still thy word his guide :
 Thee, Lord, with all my heart I've sought ;
 Let me not from thy statutes stray.

11, 12. Thy words I've treasured in my heart,
That I may not transgress thy law :
Blessed art Thou, O Lord my God,
Instruct me in thine ordinances.

13, 14. My lips have published abroad
Each rule and sentence of thy mouth :
As much as all earth's wealth, the path
Of thy commandments charms my soul.

15, 16. Thy statutes I will ponder o'er,
And on thy ways I'll meditate :
Thy precepts my delight shall be,
And I will ne'er forget thy law.

GIMEL.

17, 18. Lord, grant thy servant life,
And I will keep thy word :
Ope Thou mine eyes, and let me see
The wonders of thy law.

19, 20. From me, earth's fleeting guest,
Do not thy counsels hide :
My heart with longing bursts to read
Thy judgments age by age.

21, 22. Thou'st chid the proud, the cursed,
Who from thy statutes stray :
Remove from me reproach and scorn,
For I thy precepts keep.

- 23, 24. Against me chiefs combined :
 On thy commandments still
Thy servant mused : in them my joy
 And counsellors I found.

DALETH.

- 25, 26. My soul is glued unto the dust ;
 O quicken me, according to thy word :
I told Thee all my ways, and Thou didst hear ;
 Instruct me in thy law.
- 27, 28. Teach me the way of thy commands,
 And on thy marvels I will meditate :
My soul for sorrow melts ; O lift me up,
 According to thy word.
- 29, 30. Far from me cast the way of lies,
 And grant me, Lord, the knowledge of thy law :
The law of truth I've chosen ; I have set
 Thy judgments for my guide.
- 31, 32. Unto thy statutes I have cleaved ;
 Lord, put me not to shame : along the path
Of thy commandments I will run, for Thou
 Hast made my heart to swell.

HE.

- 33, 34. Teach me the way of thy decrees,
 And I will keep it to the end :
Instruct me, and I'll keep thy law,
 And cleave to it with all my heart.

- 35, 36. Along the way of thy commands
Lead me, for I delight therein :
My heart unto thy precepts bend,
And save me from the lust of gain.
- 37, 38. Let not mine eyes on sin be turn'd,
But let me keep thy ways, and live :
Thy promise to thy servant pledged
Fulfil—for in thy fear he dwells.
- 39, 40. Turn from me the reproach I fear,
Because thy judgments, Lord, are good :
See, I have longed for thy word,
Through thy uprightness quicken me.

VAU.

- 41, 42. Now let thy promised mercies come,
Thy pledged salvation greet me, Lord :
That to my scorers I may say,
“ My trust is in the word of God.”
- 43, 44. Not wholly from my mouth remove
This word of strength, “ I wait my judge.”
So shall I keep thy laws for ever,
For ever, and for evermore.
- 45, 46. Yea, I shall walk at large and free,
Because thy statutes I have sought :
Of thy commandments I will speak
To kings, and will not be ashamed.

- 47, 48. And in thy precepts, which I've loved,
I will exult : with lifted hands
Thy laws, which I have loved, I'll praise,
And on thy counsels meditate.

ZAIN.

- 49, 50. Remember, Lord, the promised aid,
In which Thou bad'st thy servant trust :
This is my comfort in my woe—
Thy word, I know, shall quicken me.
- 51, 52. Though much despised by the proud,
I have not from thy statutes swerved :
I call'd to mind thy deeds of old,
And so I comforted my soul.
- 53, 54. With horror and deep dread I view'd
The wicked disregard thy law :
Thy judgments then I sang, and cheer'd
The dwelling of my pilgrimage.
- 55, 56. By night I thought upon thy name,
And so I kept thy laws, O Lord :
And this my confidence became,
That thy commandments I observed.

CHETH.

- 57, 58. The Lord my portion is, I said ;
Now will I keep thy word :
With all my heart thy grace I've sought,
Thy promised mercy shew.

- 59, 60. My ways I ponder'd o'er, and turn'd
My feet unto thy laws :
I hasted, and did not delay
Thy statutes to fulfil.
- 61, 62. Though troops of sinners hemm'd me round,
I ne'er forgot thy laws :
At midnight I arose to praise
Thy righteous government.
- 63, 64. I cherish all who fear thy name,
And thy commandments keep :
The earth is of thy goodness full ;
Lord, teach me thy decrees.

TETH.

- 65, 66. Well with thy servant, Lord, Thou'st dealt
According to thy word :
Teach me, to thy commandments true,
To judge and know the right.
- 67, 68. Unchasten'd once, I went astray ;
But now I keep thy word :
Good art Thou, and Thou doest good ;
Instruct me in thy will.
- 69, 70. My haughty foes with cunning lies
Have sought my overthrow :
But as for me, with all my heart
Thy statutes I embrace :
Their hearts are thick as fat ; for me,
Thy precepts are my joy.

- 71, 72. 'Tis well that I have been chastised,
For so I've learn'd thy law :
The lessons of thy mouth I prize
Above uncounted gold.

JOD.

- 73, 74. Thy hands have made me, and built up my frame ;
O give me wisdom, thy commands to learn :
So shall thy saints behold me and rejoice,
Because my faith I've kept, and waited for thy word.
- 75, 76. I know, O Lord, that thy decrees are just,
And that, chastising, Thou art faithful still :
Then let thy mercies comfort me, I pray,
And be thy servant's stay, according to thy word.
- 77, 78. Thy loving-kindness send, and quicken me,
Because thy law is sweet unto my soul :
Confounded be the proud, who seek with lies
To thrust me down ; but I upon thy statutes muse.
- 79, 80. Let those who fear Thee, turn themselves to me,
And let them there thine ordinances learn :
O let me, Lord, to thy commandments cleave
With perfectness of heart, and ne'er be put to shame.

CAPH.

- 81, 82. My soul for thy salvation pines,
Thy promise I await :
Mine eyes for thy word pine ; I cry—
“ When wilt Thou comfort me ? ”

- 83, 84. I'm like a smoky, shrivell'd hide,
 Yet ne'er forget thy law :
 How many are thy servant's days ?
 When doomest Thou my foes ?
- 85, 86. The proud, to thy commandments deaf,
 Dig pits to take my life :
 Thy statutes are all truth : with lies
 They hunt me ; help me, Lord.
- 87, 88. I'm nigh destroy'd from off the earth,
 Yet hold thy precepts fast :
 In mercy save me, and I'll keep
 The lessons of thy mouth.

LAMED.

- 89, 90, } For evermore, O Lord, stands fast
 91. } In heaven thy sure unfailing word :
 From age to age thy truth endures,
 The earth Thou'st founded, and it stands :
 This day they stand, and thy decrees
 Await, for Thee all things obey.
- 92, 93. Had not thy law been my delight,
 I should have perish'd in my woe ;
 Thy statutes I will ne'er forget,
 Because by them Thou'st quicken'd me.
- 94, 95, } Behold, I'm thine ; O save me, Lord,
 96. } For thy commandments I have sought :
 The wicked my destruction schemed,
 But on thy promises I thought :
 Of all things else the bounds I've seen ;
 Far beyond ken thy statutes range !

MEM.

- 97, 98. O how I love thy law ! all day
Upon thy word I meditate :
Thy statutes, my eternal guides,
Have made me wiser than my foes.
- 99, 100. In thy commandments versed, the lore
Of all my teachers I surpass :
The old in prudence I excel,
Because I keep thine ordinances.
- 101, 102. From paths of sin my feet I've kept,
That so I might obey thy word :
From thy decrees I have not swerved,
For Thou thyself instructed'st me.
- 103, 104. How sweet thy lessons to my taste !
More sweet than honey to my tongue :
With wisdom from thy doctrines fraught,
My soul abhors the paths of lies.

NUN.

- 105, 106. Thy word's a lamp unto my feet ;
A light it is upon my path :
I've sworn, and my resolve is fix'd,
To keep thy righteous ordinances.
- 107, 108. I've been sore troubled, quicken me,
O Lord, according to thy word :
The offerings of my mouth, O Lord,
Accept, and teach Thou me thy will.

109, 110. My life is ever in thy hand,
 Yet do I not forget thy law :
 The wicked lay their snares for me,
 Yet swerve I not from thy commands.

111, 112. Thy statutes for myself for ever
 I've chosen, for they charm my heart :
 My heart is on thy precepts fix'd
 For ever, and for evermore.

SAMECH.

113, 114, } I hate a false, divided heart ;
 115. } But thy decrees I love :
 Thou art my shelter, and my shield,
 Thy promise I await :
 Avaunt, ye wicked ; I will keep
 The statutes of my God.

116, 117. Uphold me, Lord, and let me live,
 According to thy word :
 O let me not be put to shame,
 Nor from my hope be driven :
 Help me, and save me, and for aye
 Thy precepts I'll obey.

118, 119. Those who from thy commandments stray
 Thou lightly dost esteem ;
 For all their craft is rottenness :
 As dross Thou sweep'st away
 Each wicked dweller on the earth :
 For this I love thy law.

120. My shuddering flesh thy terrors owns,
Thy judgments, Lord, I fear.

AIN.

- 121, 122. Justice and righteousness I've done ;
To my oppressors yield me not :
With pledge of bliss thy servant cheer,
Nor let the proud oppress my soul.
- 123, 124. Mine eyes for thy salvation long ;
Yea, for thy promised justice pine :
Thy wonted love thy servant shew,
And let me thy commandments learn.
- 125, 126. Lo, I'm thy servant, make me wise,
And let me understand thy law :
'Tis time, O Lord, thy might to shew ;
They've broken and contemn'd thy word.
- 127, 128. Yet still, thy statutes I have loved
Beyond the choicest golden ore :
Yet still, all, all thy rules I prize,
And all the paths of lies abhor.

PE.

- 129, 130. Thy statutes, Lord, are wonderful ;
My soul shall therefore mark them well :
Light shines from thy unfolded word,
Illumining the simple mind.

- 131, 132. I gape and pant ; with such desire
The knowledge of thy law I crave :
Behold and pity me ; thy faith
To those that love thy name maintain.
- 133, 134. My steps unto thy word conform,
And let no sin my spirit sway :
From man's oppression set me free,
And make me to thy precepts firm.
- 135, 136. O let thy face upon me shine ;
And make me learned in thy law :
With streams of tears mine eyes run down,
Because men thy commandments spurn.

TSAD.

- 137, 138. Thou, O Jehovah, righteous art,
And in thy judgments just :
Thy statutes Thou hast firmly based
On righteousness and truth.
- 139, 140. My zeal consumes me, when I see
My foes thy lessons slight :
Thy word is well refined and pure,
Thy servant loveth it.
- 141, 142. For me, I am despised and mean,
Yet ne'er forget thy law :
Eternal is thy righteousness,
And thy commandments truth.

- 143, 144. Though pain and sorrow find me out,
Thy counsels are my joy :
For ever just are thy decrees ;
Teach me, and I shall live.

COPH.

- 145, 146. To Thee with all my heart I cried—
“Hear me, O Lord, thy law I’ll keep :”
To Thee I cried—“O save me, Lord,
And I’ll observe thine ordinances.”
- 147, 148. Ere morning brake, my voice I raised,
I hoped, and waited for thy word :
Ere night had fled, mine eyes awoke,
To muse upon thy promises.
- 149, 150. Lord, of thy goodness, hear my voice ;
As Thou art righteous, quicken me :
The followers of sin draw nigh,
They who from thy commandments stray.
- 151, 152. Thou too, O Lord, Thou drawest nigh ;
And every word of thine is truth :
Of thy decrees I’ve known of old,
That Thou hast founded them for ever.

RASCH.

- 153, 154. Behold my woes, and rescue me,
For I’ve forgotten not thy law :
Plead Thou my cause, and set me free,
And for thy word’s sake, quicken me.

- 155, 156. Salvation far from sinners flies,
Because they heed not thy commands :
Great are thy tender mercies, Lord,
Of thy uprightness, quicken me.
- 157, 158. Though swarms of foes my life pursue,
I have not from thy statutes swerved :
The wicked I beheld, and grieved
To see them still transgress thy law.
- 159, 160. See how I love thy precepts, Lord ;
Of thy great goodness, quicken me :
On truth thy word is built, and all
Thy righteous judgments stand for ever.

SIN.

- 161, 162. By chiefs with causeless rage pursued,
Thy promise stirs my throbbing heart :
For me, upon thy word I gloat
As warriors o'er a heap of spoil.
- 163, 164. Falsehood I hate, and I abhor,
But thy commandments, Lord, I love :
Seven times a day will I extol
The judgments of thy righteousness.
- 165, 166. Much peace have they that love thy law ;
And safe their steps, from stumbling free.
For thy salvation, O my God,
I've waited, and I've done thy will.

- 167, 168. My soul hath thy commandments kept,
I've lovèd them exceedingly :
I've kept thy statutes and thy word,
For all my ways are seen by Thee !

THAU.

- 169, 170. Lord, let my cry before Thee come ;
For thy word's sake, enlighten me :
Before Thee let my prayer arise ;
As Thou hast promised, rescue me.
- 171, 172. My lips shall with thy praise o'erflow,
When Thou hast taught me thy commands :
My tongue shall to thy word respond,
For all thy laws are righteousness.
- 173, 174. Sustain me with thy helping hand,
Because I've made thy will my choice :
For thy salvation, Lord, I've long'd,
And thy decrees are all my joy.
- 175, 176. Let my soul live, and praise thy name,
And let thy judgments be my stay :
Like a lost sheep I've wanderèd ;
O seek thy servant, for thy laws
I've still remember'd in my woe.

PSALM CXX.

A song for pilgrims.

- 1, 2. To God in my distress I cried,
And He my prayer vouchsafed to hear.
Lord, save my soul from lying lips,
Defend me from a treacherous tongue.
- 3, 4. What shall He give thee, what reward
On thee bestow, thou treacherous tongue?
Sharp arrows from a warrior's arm,
With glowing coals of juniper!
- 5, 6. Woe's me, that I must sojourn still
In Mesech, amidst Kedar's tents:
O that my soul must dwell so long
Amongst the enemies of peace.
7. For me, I am a man of peace;
But as for them, whene'er I speak,
With angry scorn my words they spurn,
And straightway arm themselves for war.

PSALM CXXI.

A song for pilgrims.

- 1, 2. MINE eyes I lift up to the hills,
From whence my help proceeds :
My help proceedeth from the Lord,
Who made the heavens and earth.
- 3, 4. He will not let thy footsteps slip,
Thy Keeper slumbers not :
Lo, He that keepeth Israël
Nor slumbereth nor sleeps.
- 5, 6. The Lord thy Keeper is, the Lord
Thy shield on thy right hand :
The sun shall wound thee not by day,
Nor shall the moon by night.
- 7, 8. The Lord shall keep thee from all harm,
Yea, He thy soul shall keep :
Thy goings out and comings in
The Lord shall keep for ever.

PSALM CXXII.

A song for pilgrims. By David.

- 1, 2, 3. WITH joy I answer'd to the call—
 “Up with us to the House of God.”
 With joy our feet advancing stand
 Within thy gates, Jerusalem !
 Jerusalem, thou city fair,
 In strength compact, well knit together.
- 4, 5, 6. 'Tis there the tribes, the tribes of God
 Go up, fulfilling Israel's law,
 The name of God to celebrate :
 For there the thrones of judgment stand,
 The thrones for David's house prepar'd.
 O Israel, seek Jerusalem's weal ;
 Peace be with them that love thy walls !
- 7, 8, 9. May peace thy ramparts crown, and rest
 Within thy palaces abide :
 Now, for my brethren's sake and friends,
 Thy peace shall be my daily prayer :
 Yea, for that holy house where dwells
 The Lord our God, thy good I'll seek.

PSALM CXXIII.

A song for pilgrims.

1, 2, 3. To Thee I lift mine eyes, O Thou
 That dwellest in the heavens :
 Lo, as the eyes of servants turn
 Unto their master's hand,
 And as a maiden's eyes the hand
 Of her own mistress watch,
 So seek our eyes the Lord our God,
 And for his mercy look.

4, 5, 6. Have pity on our wretched state,
 Have pity on us, Lord :
 For we have eaten to the full
 The bitter bread of shame :
 Our souls have eaten to the full
 Of insolence and scorn
 From braggart wealth, and of contempt
 From proud oppressors' lips.

PSALM CXXIV.

A song for pilgrims. By David.

- 1, 2. "UNLESS the Lord had been with us"—
 Now may the sons of Israel say :
 " Unless THE LORD had been with us
 When men against us rose to war "—
- 3, 4. Then had they swallow'd us alive,
 What time their wrath against us burn'd :
 Then had the waters drownèd us,
 The floods had overwhelm'd our souls.
- 5, 6. Then had our souls been overwhelm'd
 Beneath the proud and angry floods :
 But bless'd be God, who left us not
 A prey unto our foemen's teeth.
- 7, 8. Our souls have like a bird escaped
 The meshes of the fowler's net :
 It broke, and we the toils escaped.
 Our help is in Jehovah's name,
 Maker and Lord of heaven and earth.

PSALM CXXV.

A song for pilgrims.

- 1, 2. Who in the Lord their trust repose,
Like Sion's mount shall not be moved,
But stand for ever fast :
As round Jerusalem the hills,
The Lord around his people dwells,
From this time forth for ever.
3. For sin's dark sceptre shall not rest
Upon the holy heritage
For righteous men prepared :
That righteous men may not yield up
Their hands to deeds of wickedness,
Forgetful of their God.
- 4, 5. Do good, O Lord, unto the good,
Thy grace upon the just bestow,
The men of upright heart :
But who unto their evil ways
Incline, them shall the Lord cut off,
With all the brood of sin.
Peace be to Israël !

PSALM CXXVI.

A song for pilgrims.

1, 2. WHEN unto Zion's captive state
 The Lord his eyes of mercy turn'd,
 And freed her from her chains—
 Then were we like to men who dream'd,
 Our mouths with laughter then were fill'd,
 Our lips o'erflow'd with praise :
 Then was it midst the heathen said—
 " Behold, what mighty things the Lord
 Hath for his people wrought."

3, 4, } The Lord did mighty things for us,
 5, 6. } And we were glad. Turn, Lord, again
 Our captive state relieve,
 As freshening streams the barren south ;
 And let thy servants reap in joy,
 Who now have sown in tears :
 Let him who, bearing precious seed,
 Went weeping forth, with joy return,
 And bring with him his sheaves.

PSALM CXXVII.

A song for pilgrims. By Solomon.

1. UNLESS the Lord doth build the house,
In vain the builders o'er it toil :
Unless the Lord the city watch,
The watchman waketh all in vain.
2. In vain for you at early dawn
To rise, and late at night take rest ;
In vain ye eat the bread of care,
Whilst his beloved He soothes with sleep.
- 3, 4. Lo, children are the gift of God,
A fruitful womb is his reward :
As arrows in a warrior's hand,
So are the lusty sons of youth.
5. Blessed is he, the man of might,
Who hath with such his quiver fill'd :
They unabash'd their foes will meet,
And with them parley at the gate.

PSALM CXXVIII.

A song for pilgrims.

- 1, 2. BLEST is the man that fears the Lord,
That walketh in Jehovah's ways :
For thou shalt of thy labour eat,
Blest shalt thou be, and fill'd with good.
- 3, 4. Thy wife shall, like a fruitful vine
Upon thy walls, thine house adorn :
Thy sons, like olive branches, shine
In prime of youth, thy table round.
5. Behold, thus shall the man be blest,
The righteous man that fears the Lord.
- 6, 7. Thee shall the Lord from Zion bless,
And, all the days thou liv'st, thine eyes
Shall look upon Jerusalem's joy.
Thy children's children shalt thou see,
And Israel's borders clothed with peace.

PSALM CXXIX.

A song for pilgrims.

- 1, 2. OFT from my youth have they afflicted me.
 May Israël now say :
 OFT from my youth have they afflicted me,
 But they've subdued me not.
- 3, 4. Upon my back the ploughers drew their ploughs,
 Long furrows there they made :
 The Lord the righteous to my rescue came,
 And cut the sinners' cords.
- 5, 6. Who Zion hate shall all confounded be,
 And driven back with shame ;
 Like grass upon the house-top shall they be,
 Which fades ere 'tis grown up :
- 7, 8. With which the mower filleth not his hand,
 Nor sheaf-binder his arm.
 Nor shall the passers-by " God speed you " say,
 " We greet you in God's name."

PSALM CXXX.

A song for pilgrims.

- 1, 2. LORD, from the deep on Thee I call,
Hear Thou my voice, O Lord :
O let thine ears consider well
The voice of my complaint.
- 3, 4. If Thou, Lord God, our sins dost mark,
Who can thy judgments bear ?
But with Thee pardoning mercy dwells,
That Thou mayst still be fear'd.
- 5, 6. For God I wait ; my soul doth wait ;
And in his word I hope :
More eagerly my soul doth wait
For her redeeming Lord,
Than watchmen for the lingering morn,
Than watchmen for the morn.
- 7, 8. Let Israel in the Lord confide,
For with the Lord are found
Goodness and mercy, and with Him
Are ransoms large and free :
Yea, He shall Israël redeem
From all her wickedness.

PSALM CXXXI.

A song for pilgrims.

1. LORD, I am not high-minded, nor
Have I proud looks :
In things too great for me and high
I meddle not.
2. Surely my soul I have composed,
And still'd its cries :
Like child new wean'd, that on her lap
The mother lulls,
E'en like such weaned child, my soul
With me doth rest.
3. O Israë! thy trust repose
Upon the Lord :
From this time forth for evermore
In Him confide.

PSALM CXXXII.

A song for pilgrims.

- 1, 2. THINK on thy servant David, Lord,
Remember all his woes :
Who to Jehovah sware, who vow'd
To Jacob's Mighty One,
- 3, 4. "Beneath my roof I will not step,
Nor mount upon my bed ;
Mine eyes with sleep I will not soothe,
Nor give mine eyelids rest ;
5. "Till for Jehovah I have found
A place where He may rest :
For Jacob's Lord, the mighty God,
A habitation meet."
6. Behold, at Ephratah we heard
The tidings of God's Ark :
And found it in the woody plains
Of Kirjath-jearim.
- 7, 8. Now let us to God's house go up,
And at his footstool bow :
Rise, Lord, betake Thee to thy rest,
Thou, and thine Ark of strength.

- 9, 10. Thy priests with righteousness be clothed,
And let thy saints rejoice :
Spurn not, for David's sake, the face
Of thine anointed one.
11. The Lord hath unto David sworn—
(His word He will not break)
“ Upon thy throne thy seed I'll place,
The fruit of thine own loins.
12. “ And, if thy sons my covenant keep,
And to my laws give heed,
Their sons also for evermore
Upon thy throne shall sit.”
- 13, 14. For Zion is the chosen seat
Desirèd of the Lord :
“ Here will I rest, here dwell for ever,
For here is my desire.
- 15, 16. “ With blessings will I bless her food,
And fill her poor with bread :
Her priests with health will I adorn,
Her saints shall sing for joy.
17. “ Here David's horn will I exalt,
And make it sprout and grow :
And here, for mine anointed one
A lamp have I prepared.
18. “ His enemies I'll put to shame,
And clothe them with disgrace :
But as for him, his crown shall bloom
For ever on his head.”

PSALM CXXXIII.

A song for pilgrims.

- 1, 2. BEHOLD, how good, how pleasant 'tis
 When brethren dwell in unity together
 'Tis like the precious oil
 Which pour'd upon the head
 Unto the beard, to Aaron's beard runs down,
 And, gliding on, perfumes his garments' skirts.
- 3, 4. 'Tis like the dew which Hermon drinks,
 The dew which, with refreshing virtue fraught,
 Upon the mountains falls
 Where Zion's city stands.
 Thou happy Zion, for to thee hath God
 Decreed his blessing—life for evermore.
-

PSALM CXXXIV.

A song for pilgrims.

1. BEHOLD, bless ye the Lord,
 Ye servants of the Lord:
 All ye that in the Lord's house stand,
 And there by night keep watch.

2. Yea, lift ye up your hands
 Within the holy place :
And bless ye there the Lord your God,
 Yea, bless the Lord of Hosts.
3. “ The Lord, the mighty God,
 Who heaven and earth hath made,
From Zion's mount his blessings send Upon thy head for ever.”
-

PSALM CXXXV.

- 1, 2, 3. O PRAISE the Lord, the Lord's name praise :
 O ye his servants, praise the Lord :
 O ye that in his temple stand,
 Ye that his temple-courts frequent,
Praise ye the Lord, for the Lord is good ;
And chant his name, for his name is sweet.
- 4, 5, 6. For Jacob hath the Lord preferr'd,
 And chosen Israel for Himself :
 And great Jehovah is, I know,
 Yea, great our God above all gods.
Whate'er He lists, the Lord doth do,
In heaven and earth, in seas and floods.
- 7, 8, 9. From earth's far bounds the clouds He lifts,
 He makes the lightning and the rain,
And from his storehouse sends the winds.
'Tis He that Egypt's first-born smote

From child of man to young of beast ;
 His fearful signs and prodigies
 Midst thee, O Egypt, He sent forth
 On Pharaoh, and on all his train.

10, 11, } Full many a nation He struck down,
 12. } And many a mighty king He slew ;
 Sihon, the Amoritish king,
 And Og, the king of Basan's hordes,
 And all the realms of Canaan ;
 And of their land a gift He made,
 A gift to Israël, his son.

13, 14, } O Lord, thy name for aye endures,
 15. } Thy glory, Lord, from age to age ;
 For lo, the Lord his people rights,
 And looks with pity on their woes.
 The idols by the nations fear'd
 Are gold and silver, made by man.

16, 17, } Mouths have they, but they do not speak,
 18. } And eyes they have, but do not see :
 Ears have they, but they do not hear,
 And in their mouths no breath is found :
 Like unto them their makers are,
 And so are all that trust in them.

19, 20, } O house of Israel, bless the Lord ;
 21. } O house of Aaron, bless the Lord ;
 O house of Levi, bless the Lord ;
 All ye that fear Him, bless the Lord ;
 The Lord, who in Jerusalem dwells,
 Be blest from Zion. Praise the Lord !

PSALM CXXXVI.

- 1, 2, 3. THE Lord extol, for He is good,
 And everlasting is his love :
 O come, extol the God of gods,
 For everlasting is his love ;
 O come, extol the Lord of lords,
 For everlasting is his love.
- 4, 5, 6. Who by Himself his wonders works,
 For everlasting is his love :
 Who hath in wisdom framed the heavens,
 For everlasting is his love ;
 And stretch'd the land out by the sea,
 For everlasting is his love.
- 7, 8, 9. Who in the skies great lights hath set,
 For everlasting is his love ;
 The sun to bear the rule by day,
 For everlasting is his love ;
 The moon and stars to rule by night,
 For everlasting is his love.
- 10, 11, } Who Egypt in her first-born smote,
 12. } For everlasting is his love :
 Who from her midst brought Israel forth,
 For everlasting is his love,
 With mighty hand and stretch'd out arm,
 For everlasting is his love.

13, 14, } Who cleft in twain the sea of reeds,
15. } For everlasting is his love,
And through her midst led Israel out,
For everlasting is his love,
But Pharaoh and his hosts o'erwhelmed,
For everlasting is his love.

16, 17, } Who through the waste his people led,
18. } For everlasting is his love ;
Who mighty kings before them smote,
For everlasting is his love ;
Yea, greatest kings before them slew,
For everlasting is his love :

19, 20, } Sihon, the Amoritish king,
21, 22. } For everlasting is his love,
And Og, the king of Basan's hosts,
For everlasting is his love,
And gave his people Israel
(For everlasting is his love)
Their land for their inheritance,
For everlasting is his love.

23, 24, } Who in our woes remember'd us,
25, 26. } For everlasting is his love ;
And saved us from our enemies,
For everlasting is his love :
Who food upon all flesh bestows,
For everlasting is his love.
O come, the Lord of heaven extol,
For everlasting is his love !

PSALM CXXXVII.

- 1, 2. By Babel's waters, there we sat,
And thought on Zion's towers and wept ;
And there, upon the willow trees,
We hung our sad and silent harps.
3. For they that led us captive came,
And askèd of our grief a song :
Yea, they that bruised us, call'd for mirth,
"Come, sing us now a song of Zion."
- 4, 5. How shall we sing Jehovah's song
To strangers, in a heathen land ?
If thee, Jerusalem, I forget,
Let my right hand forget her power !
6. When I no more remember thee,
My tongue be to my palate glued :
Unless Jerusalem I prefer
Above my chiefest, dearest joy.
7. O Lord, on Edom's sons avenge
Jerusalem's day of shame and woe :
"Destroy her, lay her waste," they cried,
"Destroy her, rase her to the ground."

8. Daughter of Babylon, for whom
Impending desolation waits,
Blest be the man that deals with thee,
As thou, proud Queen, with us hast dealt.
9. Yea, blessed shall that man be call'd,
Who thy destructions on thee turns ;
And who thy little ones shall take,
And dash them down upon the stones.
-

PSALM CXXXVIII

By David.

- 1, 2. LORD, Thee with all my heart I'll praise ;
To Thee, before the gods, I'll sing ;
To Thee my worship I will pay,
And towards thy holy temple bow.
- 2, 3. Yea, for thy loving-kindness' sake
And for thy truth thy name I'll praise :
For Thou thy name hast lifted high,
And o'er the earth made known thy word :
Thou heard'st me when on Thee I call'd,
Thou breathed'st strength into my soul.

- 4, 5, 6. All kings shall praise Thee, when they hear
Thy words, and learn thy judgments, Lord :
And in the Lord's ways they shall walk,
And of the Lord's great glory sing,
Who, throned on high, the lowly owns,
But views with distant glance the proud.
7. If snares and troubles hem me round,
Thou shalt preserve me : Thou thine hand
Against my foes' fell rage shalt stretch,
And with thy right hand set me free.
8. The Lord shall all his promised grace
To me and to my seed fulfil :
Thy goodness, Lord, endures for ever,
Forsake not Thou thy handiwork !
-

PSALM CXXXIX.

To the chief musician. By David.

- 1, 2. LORD, Thou hast search'd me out, and knowest me ;
Thou know'st my sitting down, and rising up :
My dawning thoughts, imperfect and remote,
Before thy prescience reveal'd lie.

- 3, 4. My walk Thou notest, and dost watch my bed,
And Thou art conversant with all my ways :
Though not a sound escapeth from my tongue,
My words, unspoken, are all known to Thee.
- 5, 6. Behind, before, I'm compass'd by thy power ;
Above me and around, I feel thy hand :
Too wonderful for me this knowledge is ;
'Tis high indeed : above my reach it towers.
- 7, 8. O whither from thy Spirit shall I go ?
Or whither from thy presence shall I flee ?
If up to heaven I mount, there, Lord, art Thou ;
If down in hell I lie—behold, Thou'rt there !
- 9, 10. If on the morning's wings I take my flight,
And past the furthest bounds of ocean dwell,
There also shall I find thy guiding hand,
And thy right hand shall still uphold me there.
- 11, 12. With fears of death when darkness scares my soul,
The night itself around me glows with light :
For with Thee darkness is not dark, and night
Like day doth shine : darkness and light are one.
- 13, 14. For Thou didst fashion all my inward parts,
And shelter me within my mother's womb :
Thee will I praise for this most marvellous frame,
Marvellous thy works : they fill my soul with awe.
- 15, 16. Not hid from Thee my substance was, when first
In earth's dark loom its lineaments were wrought :
The matter, yet unshaped, thine eyes beheld,
And in thy book each day was written down—
Whilst none was yet—of its predestined life.

- 17, 18. How precious to me are thy thoughts of love,
How great the sum of all thy mercies, Lord :
To count them, they're more numerous than the sand ;
With Thee I sleep, Thou fill'st my waking hours.
- 19, 20. Wilt Thou not slay the wicked, O my God ?
Depart then from me, all ye men of blood !
For lo, thine enemies blaspheme thy name,
And with their perjuries thy vengeance mock.
- 21, 22. Do not I hate all them that hate Thee, Lord ?
And do not those that grieve Thee, vex my soul ?
With perfect hatred I have hated them,
And all thine enemies I count as mine.
- 23, 24. Search me, O Lord, and thoroughly sift my heart ;
Try me, and penetrate my inmost thoughts :
See that no wickedness defile my soul,
And lead me in the everlasting way.
-

PSALM CXL.

To the chief musician. A psalm of David.

- 1, 2, 3. DELIVER me, O Lord, from evil men,
Protect me from the man of violence :
Guard me from them whose hearts are set on wrong,
Who all day long are gathering for war,
Whose whetted tongues are sharp as serpents' fangs,
And adders' poison lurks within their lips.

- 4, 5. Keep me, O Lord, from sinners' impious hands,
Protect me from the man of violence ;
From them that seek to overthrow my steps.
To catch me unawares my haughty foes
Laid hidden snares, their nets and cords they spread,
And in my path placed pitfalls for my feet.
- 6, 7, 8. Then said I to the Lord—Thou art my God,
Lord, hear my voice, regard my earnest prayer :
O Lord my God, O my salvation's strength,
My head Thou coverest in the day of arms :
Grant not, O Lord, the wicked their desire,
Nor prosper Thou their schemes, nor swell their pride.
- 9, 10. As for those men that compass me about,
The sorrows which their lips have caused, shall be
The covering of their heads : hot burning coals
Shall on them fall, the Lord shall cast them down
Into the fire, beneath the whelming floods ;
There shall they sink, no more to rise again.
- 11, 12, } The man of slanderous tongue within the land
13. } Shall not abide ; the man of violence
Shall dire destruction to his ruin hunt :
The Lord, I know, the poor man's cause upholds,
And to his right the destitute restores :
Surely the righteous shall thy name extol,
And upright men shall in thy presence dwell.

PSALM CXLI.

A psalm of David.

- 1, 2. To Thee I cry ; Lord, haste to me,
 O hear me when to Thee I cry :
 Before thy presence let my prayer
 Continually like incense rise,
 And, as an evening sacrifice,
 Accept, O Lord, my lifted hands.
- 3, 4. Lord, set a watch upon my mouth,
 And guard the passage of my lips :
 Turn not mine heart to wickedness,
 To work the impious works of sin
 With doers of iniquity ;
 Nor let me of their dainties taste.
- 5, 6. The Just One in his love may smite
 And chide me. The head-anointing oil
 He will not from my head withhold :
 For still, whate'er befall, to God
 Against their wickedness I'll pray :
 Their princes, on the rocks o'erthrown,
 Shall hear my words, and own their power.

- 7, 8. By the grave's mouth our bones are strewn,
As on the earth the sever'd clods :
But unto Thee, O Lord our God,
Our eyes for our salvation turn :
On Thee I've trusted, pour not out
The life which on thy hand depends.
- 9, 10. Preserve me from the cunning snares
Against me by my foes contrived,
And from the evil-doers' nets.
Let sinners be together caught
Within the nets themselves have laid,
Whilst I, unharm'd, the perils pass.
-

PSALM CXLII.

A psalm of instruction. A prayer of David when in the cave.

- 1, 2. WITH trembling voice to God I cry,
With trembling voice to God I pray :
Before Him I pour out my sighs,
Before Him I recount my woes.
3. Because my fainting spirit sinks,
And Thou, Lord, Thou my path dost know :
Along the path I walk they've laid
Their nets for me, and hid their snares.

4. I turn to the right hand, and look,
But meet no sympathizing eye :
Escape has vanish'd from my sight,
And no man careth for my soul.
5. Then unto Thee, O Lord, I cry,
And say, Thou art my confidence :
Within the land of life Thou art
My portion, and shalt give me rest.
6. Regard my supplications, Lord,
For I am weak and sore distress'd :
From these my persecuting foes
Save me, for they're too strong for me.
7. My soul from her imprisonment
Save, Lord, that I thy name may praise :
The righteous shall around me throng,
When thou dost bless me with thy love.

PSALM CXLIII.

1. LORD, hear my prayer, incline thine ear
To him who craves thine aid :
For thine own truth's sake, answer me,
For thine own righteousness.

2. And into judgment enter not
With thy poor servant, Lord ;
For in thy presence none that lives
Shall be accounted pure.
3. Because the foe my soul pursues,
My life he tramples down,
To darkness dooming me, like those
Who're sunk in endless death.
- 4, 5. My spirit now within me faints,
My heart is desolate :
I call to mind the days of old,
I muse o'er all thy works :
- 5, 6. I meditate upon the works
Of thine almighty hand :
To Thee I stretch my hands ; for Thee
My soul like dry ground thirsts.
7. Make haste, and answer me, O Lord,
My spirit pines away :
Hide not thy face lest I be like
The tenants of the grave.
8. At morn thy mercy let me hear,
Because in Thee I trust :
Teach me the way wherein to walk,
Because to Thee I look.
- 9, 10. Lord, save me from my enemies,
For Thou my refuge art :

PSALM CXLIV.

Teach me to execute thy will,
For Thou, Thou art my God.
Let thy good Spirit guide my feet
Unto a land of peace.

11. Because of thy great name, O Lord,
Restore me unto life :
Because of thine own righteousness,
My soul from trouble save.
12. And for thy loving-kindness' sake,
Cut off mine enemies :
All them that hate my soul destroy,
For I thy servant am. .
-

PSALM CXLIV.

By David.

- 1, 2. BLESSED be the Lord my Rock,
Who has train'd my hands to war,
And my fingers taught to fight :
He my wealth and fortress is,
Refuge and deliverance :
He my shield is, and my trust,
He my people 'neath me bends.

- 3, 4. What is man, Lord, that on him
Thou bestowest thy regard?
What a mortal's feeble race,
That on them Thou pour'st thy love?
Man is like a fleeting breath,
Like a passing cloud his days.
- 5, 6. Bow thy heavens and come down,
Touch the mountains that they smoke:
Hurl thy lightnings and disperse,
Shoot thine arrows and confound
Thy presumptuous enemies.
- 7, 8, 9. From on high thine arm extend,
Save me, Lord, and rescue me:
Save me from the mighty floods,
From the hands of strangers' sons:
Lies they utter, their right hands
Right hands are of treachery.
10. Lord, to Thee new songs I'll sing;
On the psaltery and harp
I will celebrate thy praise,
Who to kings salvation giv'st,
Who thy servant David sav'st
From the sword of wickedness.
11. Save me, Lord, and rescue me
From the hands of strangers' sons:
Lies they utter, their right hands
Right hands are of treachery.
12. That our sons, like well grown plants,
Vigorous in their youth may be;
And our daughters like the shafts
For the temple-corners carved.

13. That our garners may be full,
Yielding produce of all kinds :
That our flocks may thousands bear,
Tens of thousands in our folds.
- 14, 15. That our oxen laden be,
That no hurt nor loss befall,
Nor complaining in our streets :
Blest the people favour'd thus,
Blest the people who can boast
For their God, the Lord of Hosts !

PSALM CXLV.

A song of praise. By David.

- 1, 2. THEE I'll extol, my God, the mighty King,
And bless thy name for ever and for ever :
Thee every day with blessings I will greet,
And praise thy name for ever and for ever.
- 3, 4. The Lord is great, and greatly to be praised ;
His greatness none can tell, no search find out :
Age unto age thy works, O Lord, shall praise,
And through the earth thy mighty deeds make known.
- 5, 6. The splendour of thy glorious majesty
And thy stupendous works will I declare :
Thy deeds of fearful might each tongue shall tell,
And, all around, thy greatness I'll proclaim.

7. In streams of song thy saints shall celebrate
The memory of thy exceeding love :
And with thanksgivings loud thy goodness own,
Thy righteousness and thy eternal truth.
- 8, 9. The Lord is merciful and kind,
To anger slow, and rich in love :
The Lord is good to every man,
His mercy is o'er all his works.
- 10, 11. Thy works shall all praise Thee, O Lord,
And Thee shall all thy servants bless :
Thy kingdom's glory they shall tell,
And celebrate thy mighty deeds—
12. That taught by them, the sons of men
Jehovah's mighty deeds may know ;
And every nation may confess
His kingdom's glorious majesty.
13. Thy kingdom through all time shall stand,
A kingdom of eternal might :
And thy dominion shall be own'd
By generations without end.
- 14, 15, } The Lord supporteth all that fall,
16. } And lifts the prostrate from the ground :
The eyes of all upon Thee wait,
And Thou giv'st each the food he needs :
Thou openest thine hand, and fill'st
All living things with plenteousness.
- 17, 18. The Lord is just in all his ways
And merciful in all his works :
He's nigh to all that call on Him,
That call on Him with hearts sincere.

- 19, 20. The Lord fulfilleth the desire
Of such as reverence his name :
In their distress He hears their cry,
And sets them from their trouble free :
The Lord his loving servants guards,
But cuts each wicked sinner off.
21. My grateful lips shall ever sing
The praises of the Lord my God :
And let all flesh his holy name
For ever and for ever bless.
-

PSALM CXLVI.

- 1, 2. PRAISE the Lord, O Israël :
Praise the Lord, O thou my soul :
While I live, the Lord I'll praise ;
While I breathe, to God I'll sing.
- 3, 4. In princes trust not, lean not thou
On child of man, that cannot save :
His breath goes forth, and he returns
Unto the dust from which he sprang ;
That day his projects die.
- 5, 6. He's blest, whom Jacob's God defends,
Whose hope is in the Lord his God,
Who made the heavens, the earth, the sea,
And all that in them is contain'd,
Who keeps his truth for ever.

- 7, 8. He renders justice to the oppress'd ;
He feeds the famished with bread :
The Lord unties the prisoner's bonds ;
The Lord gives sight unto the blind ;
The Lord the prostrate raises up ;
The Lord the righteous loves.
- 9, 10. The Lord the stranger guards ; He keeps
The widow and the fatherless ;
But sinners' ways He overthrows :
The Lord shall reign for evermore ;
Yea, Zion's God from age to age.
O Israel, praise the Lord.
-

PSALM CXLVII.

1. PRAISE thou the Lord, O Israel ;
For good and sweet it is to sing
The praises of the Lord our God .
His praise becomes us well.
- 2, 3. The Lord builds up Jerusalem,
And gathers Israel's scatter'd flock :
The Lord the broken-hearted heals,
He bindeth up their wounds.

- 4, 5. He counts the number of the stars ;
He calls them every one by name :
Our Lord is great, his power immense,
His wisdom infinite.
- 6, 7. The Lord the lowly setteth up,
And down to earth the wicked casts :
Sing praises to the Lord ; extol
Our God upon the harp.
- 8, 9. The face of heaven in clouds He wraps,
And rain for earth provides : He makes
The grass upon the mountains spring,
He gives the beasts their food ; He hears
The ravens when they cry.
- 10, 11. The horse's strength delights Him not ;
Nor pleases Him man's sinewy leg :
They please the Lord, who fear his name,
Who on his mercy trust.
- 12, 13. Praise thou the Lord, Jerusalem,
And, Zion, thou thy God extol :
By Him thy gates with strength are barr'd,
Thy sons within thee blest.
- 14, 15. Upon thy borders peace He brings,
And fills thee with the fat of wheat :
His mandates thro' the earth He sends,
His word with swiftness runs.
- 16, 17, } Snow o'er the land like wool He spreads,
18. } Hoar-frost, like ashes, scattereth :
His ice in fragments round He throws,
And who before his frost can stand ?
At his command they melt ; when breathes
His wind, the waters flow.

- 19, 20. His word to Jacob He hath taught ;
His statutes and his judgments given
To Israel : with no people else
Thus hath He dealt : they have not known
His judgments. Praise the Lord.
-

PSALM CXLVIII.

- 1, 2. PRAISE the Lord ; from heaven praise Him :
Praise Him in the heights above :
Praise Him, ye angelic powers ;
Praise Him, ye his heavenly hosts.
- 3, 4. Praise the Lord, ye sun and moon ;
Praise Him, all ye stars of light :
Praise the Lord, ye heavens of heavens ;
Him, ye heaven-poised waters, praise.
- 5, 6. Let them praise Jehovah's name ;
For He spake, and they were made :
He hath set them fast for ever,
Held by his unchanging law.
- 7, 8. Praise the Lord, ye things of earth ;
Dragons, and devouring floods :
Fire and hail, and snow and mist,
Storms that his behests obey.

- 9, 10. Him ye hills and mountains praise ;
Cedars, and fruit-bearing trees :
Cattle, and each roaming beast,
Creeping things and winged fowl :
- 11, 12. Kings and nations of the earth,
Rulers of the earth, and chiefs ;
Youths and maidens in their prime,
Children, and their elders grey.
13. Let them praise Jehovah's name,
For his name alone is high :
Over heaven his glory shines,
Through the earth his power is known.
14. He hath raised his people's horn :
Sons of Israel, ye that stand
Nigh your God—'tis yours to praise
All his mercies. Praise the Lord.
-

PSALM CXLIX.

1. O PRAISE the Lord ; to Him
New strains of song awake :
Amidst the assembly of the saints
His praises celebrate.
2. Let Israël rejoice
In his Creator's might :
And Zion's children in their King
Exult and leap for joy.

3. In dances let them praise
Jehovah's holy name :
Unto the harp and timbrel's sound
His mercies let them sing.

4. Because the Lord's delight
Is in his people's weal :
With his salvation He'll adorn
The humble and the meek.

5. Then let his saints rejoice,
By Him with glory crown'd :
And from their beds exulting sing
The triumphs of his love.

6. Let God's high majesty
Their mouths with praises fill :
And let them in their hands lift up
The Lord's two-edged sword—

7. His vengeance to perform
Upon the heathen tribes :
And on the nations to inflict
His fearful chastisements.

8. Their kings with chains to bind,
Their chiefs with iron bonds :
And on them execute the doom
Which in the book is writ.

9. This glory He will give
To all his faithful ones :
Then let his saints his name extol,
O Israel, praise the Lord.

PSALM CL.

1. PRAISE the Lord, the Lord of Hosts ;
Praise Him in his sanctuary :
Praise Him in the firmament,
Where his power sublime He shews.
- 2, 3. Praise Him for his mighty strength ;
Praise his wondrous majesty :
Praise Him with the trumpet's sound ;
Praise Him with the harp and lyre.
4. With the tinkling cymbals praise Him ;
Praise Him in the circling dance :
Praise Him on the tuneful strings ;
Praise Him on the vocal pipes.
- 5, 6. With the cymbal's clangour praise Him ;
With the cymbal's tones of joy :
Creatures all that live and breathe,
Praise your God. Yea, praise the Lord.

THE END.

ms

YB 70891

