THE REVEREND CHARLES FORSTER, B.D.

ONE OF THE SIX PREACHERS OF THE CATHEDRAL OF CHRIST, CANTERBURY,

AND RECTOR OF STISTED, ESSEX.

MY DEAR MR. FORSTER,

AN almost instinctive feeling makes me desire to connect a work, which has occupied the leisure of several years, with the name of an old and constant friend; a name ever to be associated in my mind with its dearest and holiest recollections. In addition to this feeling, I must express how deep and consolatory is the reflection, that he, to whom above any one now living, I owe the early inculcation of principles in which I hope to live and die, has, by precept and example, shown to the children of a faint-hearted and vacillating generation, how unswervingly those principles can be maintained: how a cordial allegiance can be paid to good old English theology, and to the real spirit, both in doctrine and practice, of the Church of England.

Believe me to be,

Your ever affectionate friend,

JOHN JEBB.

INTRODUCTION.

It was not the original design of the author to undertake that which at present forms the principal feature in his work, the translation of the whole Book of Psalms. He is desirous of stating this, and of explaining the reasons for the enlargement of his original plan, from a consciousness that the attempt, on the part of a private individual, to give a new version of any part of Holy Scripture, requires the assignment of some very distinct and specific reason, to vindicate him from the imputation of presumption, or of a love of innovation.

About eleven years ago, while in the discharge of his parochial duties, he found it expedient, during the season of Lent, to deliver a course of four sermons upon the thirty-second Psalm, taking, as the subject of each, one of the four moral portions into which that Psalm is plainly divisible; the whole marking the progress, by certain defined stages, of true repentance, which begins in tears, but ends in joy. It was not till this course was nearly concluded, that it occurred to him to observe, that the word SELAH, three times used in this Psalm, clearly discriminated each of these moral portions. The fact, however, appeared so very remarkable, that he was induced to examine other Psalms, in order to see whether the word in question discharged the same function, of marking the divisions of the subject with any degree of uniformity. This it clearly appeared to do, in many instances. Still a large number of cases seemed so very doubtful, and the reason of its partial insertion so very obscure, that he did not feel justified in drawing any universal conclusion from what might, after all, be only a particular premise. The subject, however, was one to which he recurred from time to time, and to which the study of other and independent parts of biblical criticism brought him back ; till at length the difficulties attending the elucidation of the word seemed naturally to clear up, and an uniform and consistent theory gradually to unfold itself. The proofs of this, supplied by the internal structure of the Psalms, were further confirmed, by the conjectural and traditional explanations given by the early writers, both Jewish and Christian ; explanations which, however apparently discordant, appeared not only easily reconcileable, but to be of mutual use in confirming a common truth.

The details of the theory which was at length matured, and which it is the business of the first Dissertation in the second volume of this work to explain, had so gradually and unconstrainedly fallen into their places in the author's mind, that he could not but feel a strong persuasion of their truth, especially as he was not prejudiced in favour of any system. After the delay of some years, during which time he frequently reconsidered and tested this theory, he proposed to make it the subject of an Essay. In order to exhibit it fairly to the reader, it was found necessary to give those Psalms in which it occurred, at full length, arranged in the metrical order, and in the stanzas into which they are obviously divisible, as these arrangements were closely connected with the use of the word Selah. But it soon was found expedient also to arrange the words as nearly as possible in the sequence of the original; since upon this a great deal of the force of Hebrew poetry depends. Another particular soon suggested itself, which was, to render the same Hebrew word uniformly by the same English word, whenever the idiom of our language, and the propriety of the context, would so allow. The issue was a new translation of all the Psalms in which Selah occurred; not for the arrogant and unattainable design (which no one can more deprecate), of improving upon our two inimitable versions, but for the mere object of exhibiting to the eye the poetical structure of these divine poems. It is obvious that in the execution of this plan, many expressions must appear uncouth, and many arrangements awkward; but when the idiom of the language did not positively forbid these, the object of the proposed work required their adoption. But as no point of sacred criticism is wholly insulated, the progress of this partial translation suggested, before long, the translation of the whole. Had the essay on Selah continued to be the sole object of the critical part of the work, such a task would have appeared not wholly inexpedient, since that word is a key to poetical construction, which has place in Psalms where Selah is not found, and to the illustration of which the same method of translation as that now described is subservient. But some other cognate topics, which had long lain in his mind, as that of the Titles of the Psalms, had meantime suggested themselves, as not altogether unconnected with the primary subject. These were accordingly taken up, and thrown into the form of the four succeeding Dissertations in the second volume, all having reference to the direct and obvious interpretation of the Psalms, and to the contemplation of that portion of Holy Scripture as one complete and connected book.

Whatever judgment from the learned these efforts may deserve, this, at least, can be said with all sincerity, that they are not the result of ideas suddenly or recently adopted. There is hardly any thing more injurious to the cause of theological soundness and sacred truth, than the crude and inconsiderate putting forth of doubts and difficulties, on the one hand, and of hasty and fanciful solutions, on the other. Any such error he has conscientiously endeavoured to avoid. At the same time, it is sufficiently notorious, that no theory, however impartially and honestly worked out, however diligently elicited by the Baconian method of experiment, altogether loses its enticing influence over the mind; and those who are most unprejudiced at the beginning of their labours, are unconsciously swayed more or less by ideal suggestions during their progress. From this influence the writer of these pages cannot hope to be altogether free.

It is here in place to state, that when the theory of Selah had been altogether completed, and the essay nearly ready for the press, it occurred to the author to consult a work which he had hitherto known by name only, the Gnomon Psalmorum of Philip David Burkus, an eminent and able scholar of the school of Bengel, in those days when Germany still preserved much of her ancient theological dignity and soundness. He opened the book without any expectation of deriving more assistance from it than from other commentators, from none of whom had he received any confirmation of his own views, with the exception of St. Hilary, and one of the writers whose works are falsely attributed to St. Chrysostom. To his surprise, however, he found that Burkus had asserted, and elucidated in detail, the main principle illustrated in the present work, namely, that Selah is a mark of division. In the details of his theory, as might be expected, considerable differences were found; none of these, however, had the effect of disturbing the views already adopted. It has not been thought expedient to quote the explanations of Burkus in the present work. This main coincidence of opinions, being altogether undesigned, ought on that very account to be the more valuable, and make the soundness of the theory appear the more probable; and it therefore seems sufficient to refer the biblical scholar to a work, most valuable on many accounts, and fully deserving of holding a place by the Gnomon Novi Testamenti of the celebrated Bengel.

He must further state, that his consultation of St. Hilary, and a casual perusal of E. J. Greve, an accomplished Dutch critic^a, both of whom partially confirmed his view, were subsequent to his forming his conclusions.

The literal interpretation of Holy Scripture having been plainly avowed by the quotation from Hooker in the title-page, as the principle to which the present work adheres, it may be well to make a few observations, somewhat in detail, upon a subject much spoken of at present, and yet liable to great misconstruction, namely, the mystical method of interpretation.

No expression, perhaps, has been more variously understood. By some it is intended to signify the figurative and allegorical, the recondite and secondary meaning; by others it is taken to comprehend all that is moral and intellectual. These two classes of opinions have their various shades and degrees, some taking a more comprehensive, others a more limited acceptation.

If we take the scholastic interpretation of the word^b, it is said to mean that which is not proximate, but remote: it will designate therefore the secondary meaning of Scripture, which consists either of the antitype, or the reality (the type or allegory being the proximate meaning), and will also include that prophetic meaning, which does not consist of type and antitype, but is literal, though still remote, unfulfilled, and not yet understood.

The three divisions of this mystical sense are, —

^a Tractatus de Metris Hebræis, præsertim Jobæis. Appended to his Ultima Capita Libri Jobi. Daventriæ: 1788, 1791.

^b See Menochius, Proleg. in Sacr. Script. Cap. xx.

First, the allegorical; which would seem to include allegories properly so called, that is, as Bishop Marsh observes^a, fictitious narratives or parables, which illustrate the real or secondary sense: and types, or realities, which are taken to represent or prefigure other realities.

Secondly, the tropological, which has reference to a moral meaning. Thirdly, the anagogical, which has reference to heaven, or the world to come.

Now these two last divisions at least seem inartificial and inadequate. For it is not always, or generally, that the moral meaning is remote: it is often proximate, and literal, and the only one which can be elicited from the passage. The same may be said of the anagogical. Both are frequently used in a direct and perfectly intelligible sense.

Mr. Jones of Nayland, in his first lecture on the figurative language of Scripture, defines "speaking in a mystery" thus: "to reveal some heavenly doctrine under some outward and visible sign of it."

But there is a far better classification of the subject by Bishop Van Mildert.^b He defines (1.) the literal meaning to be that which the words signify in their natural and proper acceptation: (2.) the figurative, that which they do not naturally denote, but which they nevertheless intend, under some figure or form of speech: a transfer of words from one signification

^a In his Fifth Lecture on the Interpretation of the Bible, p. 357. edit. 1828. There are many useful observations on the subject of Sacred Criticism in these Lectures. But it is more than questionable whether Bishop Marsh did service to the Church by making Michaelis familiar to the English reader; a writer, whatever his ability may be, most presumptuous and unsound.

to another. Both these belong to the verbal signification, in other words, to the direct and only meaning of the passages in which they occur. (3.) The spiritual and mystical (often improperly confounded with the figurative) stand in contradistinction to these; signifying the more recondite or remote sense, founded, not on the transfer of words from one signification to another, but on the entire application of the matter itself to a different subject. He makes here a distinction between mysterious and mystic; the former meaning something above our comprehension, though conveyed in the plainest language and in the literal sense; the latter, a sense superadded to the obvious signification.

Now it is in this sense that I would be understood as taking the words mystic, and mystical interpretation. The definition made by Bishop Van Mildert is best, for the sake of clearness (its etymological accuracy is quite another question). For if it be applied more extensively to every remote and recondite meaning, great confusion may arise. The prophetic meaning, for instance, of a large portion of the Psalms, was remote and hidden from the Jews before our Lord's Advent, as are a large portion of the yet unfulfilled prophecies to us: and yet these are often expressed as literally and plainly as words can convey them. Such are the prophecies of our Lord's Incarnation in Isaiah, and of his Crucifixion and the accompanying circumstances in the Psalms. Therefore, the literal interpretation of these passages must be identical with their prophetic sense; they are not the antitypes of any types: they are actual facts plainly told. In the same manner, the more remote meaning is often the literal one, that which the words in their proximate sense, though not in their proximate application, signify. Such is the passage, "thou wilt not leave my soul in hell, neither wilt thou suffer thy holy One to see corruption:" a sense literally fulfilled in our Lord, whose body never underwent the decays of death; and only imperfectly applicable to the prophet who uttered them.

The mystical meaning, therefore, in the present work, is restricted to typical or allegorical passages. And when we speak of the literal meaning, we mean the type, or allegory, that signification of the passage, which, whether it be the presentation of a real object, or of a parabolical figure, immediately comes before our notice.

It must be admitted even by the most extravagant upholders of a mystical meaning, even of those who, like the Cabalists of old, would understand every the simplest passage of Scripture to contain a mystery, that in order rightly to understand the secondary meaning, we must have a full apprehension of the primary. It is well remarked by Bishop Marsh^a, that "in all cases the literal meaning of a word must be the first object of our inquiry, because its figurative" (or to speak more properly, its symbolical or secondary) "meaning is only an applied meaning; and to judge of the propriety of the application, we must understand the nature of the thing applied." This is the plain dictate of common sense. We must measure that which is less known, or less distinct, or more remote, by that which is better known, more palpable, or proximate. We must have a clear conception of those more familiar features with which we are to seek an analogy ; we must distinctly understand those circumstances of history or of biography which are made the types of things less historical or personal ; those incidents of external life and of human nature, that are constituted the measures by which the concerns of the more hidden life and a more ethereal nature are brought to our apprehension. Indeed, unless this accuracy be observed, the study of God's Word, the knowledge of his Divine mysteries, the knowledge of ourselves and of Him who made us must be vague and inaccurate in the extreme ; we must even become incapable of fixing the foundations of truth itself in our minds. As well might one hope to comprehend the higher branches of science, of astronomy in particular, without having a clear conception of lines and angles, and of those laws of motion which regulate the most humble operations of mechanics in this lower world, as to rightly understand the higher mysteries of God, without having a clear comprehension of those more proximate and inferior objects which he has appointed to be the means of learning first principles.

The progress of unhealthy mysticism has been such, that self-evident considerations like these require to be distinctly re-asserted at the present hour. That unrestrained licentiousness of thought, or rather of fancy, which deserves to be called by a less exalted name than that of mysticism, so readily assumed, must be in the end auxiliary to rationalism. It has the same tendency to throw into the shade, and even to induce a scepticism of, the facts of Holy Scripture. For he who is so engrossed by the secondary meaning, as to overlook or neglect the historical (as in the events of David's life, so amply exhibited in the Psalms), will not only thus lose the important lessons which that history directly inculcates, but will learn to regard history itself as a thing of little importance, and may ultimately come to look upon it as a fable; or as a "myth," according to the indulgent term invented by the Germans, and introduced into, but it is to be hoped, not naturalized in our language. There is, however, another danger attending a similar treatment of those passages whose direct meaning has reference to the wants, the sins, the infirmities of human nature, the progress of repentance, the growth of grace, the advance in holiness, the resistance of temptation; in a word, all that is technically called tropological, all that refers to the moral nature of man. The direct teaching afforded by these passages is continually deserted, in order that their recondite reference, real or supposed, to the future mysteries of God's kingdom, to our blessed Lord's ministry, and to his divine and eternal nature, may be sought. Thus will men seek to pry into the higher things of God's spiritual dispensation, before they have endeavoured to discipline their minds, and prepare themselves for his future kingdom, by following in faith and humility the regular course of teaching, the chain of connected and preparatory institution marked out in his Holy Word.

In fact, in much that is now called devotion, there is the most flagrant and wayward wilfulness. Some men are eclectics in the worst sense of the word; that is, they choose what part of Holy Scripture they think most edifying to themselves, to the neglect or disparagement of others. They say, "We care not for the circumstances of David's life, or for such or such facts of history; we do not want to dwell on the letter, but on the spirit;" or, "we care not for the imagery or the poetry of Holy Writ: we want the realities to which they refer: on this we dwell:" or, "the fortunes of the Church of Israel, or of the Church at large, are beyond our contemplation; we study what regards our individual salvation;" or, "the Church and not individuals is the real chief object of regard:" while some will cast every thing else into the shade, in order to satisfy the undefined cravings of a fanatical devotion, or meditation, as it is falsely called.

Combined with these fatal mistakes, there is one into which the extreme holders of very opposite opinions are prone to fall; that is, a disregard of the literal context of Holy Scripture. They become mere textuaries: for they, in fact, make the passages of God's Word mere pegs whereon they may hang their own incoherent or fanciful speculations, with which the passages in question can have but a very remote or obscure connection. Instead of tracing the outline afforded by Holy Scripture, and learning from connecting the text with its context to gain consistent ideas upon points of doctrine, of morals, and of religion, whether practical or internal, they treat the passages of inspiration as the men in early ages did the stars of heaven, which they reduced to the fanciful constellations of lions, bears, and serpents, by connecting star with star by means of an imaginary line, choosing at their own discretion the angles and curves which defined these figures of their fancy. Such are the connecting lines of thought in which modern mysticism delights; so that it continually happens, that those results which are falsely represented as being deduced from the Word of God, are in fact nothing more than the mere creations of the most presumptuous private judgment.

The only safe way of studying Holy Scripture is, to receive what is therein written, in the method and order in which it is given to us by the Spirit; not choosing for ourselves this path or that, but following implicitly his guidance. If the reason, the imagination, or the affections, are appealed to, such appeal is an intimation that they must be severally cultivated: if restrained and checked, we must therefore learn to keep them within legitimate bounds; if the facts of history, if the laws of God's moral dispensation are placed before us, then these must be recognised as essential parts of Christian education: in a word, if we would walk by faith, we must cordially and humbly receive every component element as a part of that Scripture which was written for our learning.

The favourers of an exclusive or extreme mystical interpretation appeal to the Catholic principle, and to the examples of the Fathers for their vindication. Now it is acknowledged that mystical interpretation is a Catholic principle. It is recognised by the Church Universal, plainly because it is taught in Holy Scripture by our Lord and his Apostles. And it is well remarked by Archbishop Leighton^a, who was no friend to the abuse of this method, that "there are many things in the Psalms and other parts of the Old Testament, applied by the Apostles to Christ, which, but for their authority, perhaps no one would have considered as referring to Him." And by using, with all discretion and sobriety, the key afforded by them, according to the analogy of wise interpretation, the prophetic application of many passages may be successfully vindicated. But though the principle is recognised by all Christendom, the measure and degree of its application has never been determined or defined. The Fathers are not at unity among themselves upon this matter. And to appeal to the opinion of any one or even of many, as decisive on the point, is to abuse the true doctrine of Catholic authority, which is, to receive the aggregate testimony given by those of the ancient Church, as witnesses to the fundamental verities of the Faith, in strict subordination to the written Word of God.

^a The whole passage in which this occurs is most valuable:—

"Unde Patres Græci et Latini psalmos sic inscriptos ad Messiam referunt omnes, tanquam finem legis, et omnium rerum complementum: pie quidem: sed psalmorum doctrina non raro in hunc sensum per violenta satis glossemata detorta. Nollem tamen omnia istiusmodi interpretamenta morose abdicare, cum multa e Psalmis reliquisque veteris Testamenti libris ad Christum applicent Apostoli, quæ, nisi illis auctoribus, eo spectare forte nemo nostrum unquam conjectasset. Nec verisimile est eos penitus omnes, sed perexiguam tantum partem illarum apud Prophetas de Messia prædictionum in medium protulisse; quorum tamen scripta omnia illum præcipue designasse asserunt."—Medit. in Psalm. IV. in Scholefield's Edition of his Prælectiones, p. 272.

But the Fathers are not only at variance upon the degree of this mode of interpretation (as for instance St. Augustine^a and St. Chrysostom); but they have been acknowledged by the most sober theologians of later times to be frequently wanting in profound critical knowledge, and to have a bias towards allegorical and fanciful meanings, often inconsistent with the context, and with the analogy of Scripture. And although no sound churchman can derogate from their aggregate authority, as witnesses of primitive and Catholic truth, a function which of course none but the earlier ages of the Church can discharge, yet we must not so derogate from the influence of the Spirit of God, and the powers of the Church of Christ, as to conceive that no illumination has visited it in later times. While the verities of the Faith remain unaltered and unmodified, we may believe that in later times a more accurate critical knowledge has been granted, introducing no new doctrines or principles, but more amply illustrating and reducing to a more harmonious order those which have ever been received, and must ever unchangeably stand.

Yet here let it be considered that the annotations on the Psalms, which form so large a department of patristic theology, are generally less to be regarded as formal commentaries, than as the vehicles for conveying sound Christian doctrines, practical exhortations, and food for religious meditation, not always strictly connected with the text. In fact, they are more to be regarded as collections of homilies than as regular treatises. So that by them the texts of the Psalms are treated as suggestive of reflections and of principles which the other parts of Holy Scripture more fully confirm. They are used continually as accommodations.

^a The great advantage to be derived from the deep piety of St. Augustine's writings is not to be questioned. But so fanciful is he in his mystical interpretations in the Psalms, that he is anything but a safe or salutary guide to beginners in theology. The sound good sense of St. Chrysostom is much to be preferred.

Very different, however, are the uses made of these passages of Scripture, however loose and fanciful may be their application, from the unrestrained liberty of thought assumed in later times and in our own. Never was there an age which more deserved the severe remarks of the learned Vitringa:

“ I do not deny that many men of uninstructed faculties and of shallow judgment have, in almost every age of the Church, commended to persons like themselves, under the name of allegorical interpretations of Scripture, certain silly, weak, and stupid fancies, in which there is neither unction, judgment, nor spiritual discernment: and have sought for those mysteries of theirs which spring from a most frigid invention, either in improper places, or promiscuously in every place, without any discrimination of circumstances, without any foundation in allegory, or in verisimilitude of language: so that I do not wonder that it has occurred to many sensible persons to doubt whether it would not be better to abandon this study altogether, to the skilful use of which experience teaches us the abilities of but very few are adequate, than to expose Holy Scripture to the senseless experiments of the unskilful, so as to cause great injury to itself, and to excite the applause of the profane.”^a

This fanciful method of tampering with God’s Word cannot be too strongly deprecated, as an impious abuse of divinely implanted reason, as the surest means of undermining the foundations of truth, and of introducing, under the supposed form of religion, the wildest latitudinarianism, and infidelity itself.

It will be, therefore, the design of the following pages to illustrate, as occasion may serve, the literal meaning of the Psalms; by no means, however, excluding their prophetical application, since that, as has been already observed, is often consistent and identical with the literal. The allegorical sense will be given its due weight; and an endeavour will be made to shew that the poetical figures of Holy Scripture, unlike those of the less exalted secular poets, contribute to fix the principles of truth, and to strengthen the reason, even more than the imagination. The

Such being the incidental objects of the work, in subordination to the definite purposes of the translation and the essays, it may appear sufficiently evident why the writings of the Fathers are rarely quoted, except for purposes merely critical or illustrative. It required considerable forbearance and self-denial to abstain from the exquisite reflections and salutary lessons with which their writings, especially on the Psalter, abound. But to admit them would tempt too many digressions from the main subject, already treated, as it is to be feared, too diffusively by the author, but from which it was his desire and intention to wander as little as possible.

But far different are the reasons for abstaining from any reference to the contemporaneous theology of Germany, from which much critical aid might naturally be expected. I am not ashamed to confess, that of the modern divines and biblical scholars of Germany I know little; more however than I could wish, and quite enough to convince me, were it only from the admissions of their favourers in this country, that I should neither advantage my own mind, nor the cause of sound theology and criticism, by making use of them. This may be considered a bold confession, but it is one which I heartily wish more would be content to make: that more of our present divines would be resolute enough to apply to that portion of modern literature the avowal of Bishop Watson as to the Scotch metaphysicians of his day: "Scotos istos metaphysicos nunquam legi, neque legam: quid igitur dixerint, nescio: quid autem dixisse debuerint, dicam." And there is learning enough in our Church to tell much more plainly and soundly what too many have been satisfied to leave to the mutilating dictation of crude and daring speculators. Yet whatever may be the distinguished merit of some (and in the department of philological science and criticism there are many names of eminence, and a few of sound discretion), I can by no means acquiesce in an opinion practically held, that for the sake of them we must desert or slight the rich and profound theology of England. For my own part, I fully acknowledge a want of sufficient ability or powers of acquirement to pay a due attention to the abundant literature of our Church, and at the same time to devote any considerable leisure to the teeming and redundant lucubrations of Germany. Nor should I attempt it, until I were far better versed in the Fathers of our own Church and of ancient times than I can now pretend to be. I may add, that the studies which have been subservient to the present work having been pursued very much from inclination, and from the course of circumstances, and a great dislike of what is called "getting up" a subject being perhaps morbidly operative, there never was any disposition to resort to those too popular quarters of information. The necessity of such a measure cannot be granted, unless it be ruled, that every critical work ought to be a Synopsis Criticorum, and that a considerable portion of it should be devoted to the purpose of attacking theories which ought never to have existed. But controversy is the last object to which it would be desirable to devote these pages, which do not profess by any means to be exhaustive.

The tendency, however, is so plainly in the contrary direction: the ideality, the rationalism, the theoretical spirit fostered by modern Germany is so rife at present, that there are reasons quite sufficient to deter those who have been educated in the studies of sound English theology from throwing themselves into the popular stream. There are those who fear an injury to the wholesome powers of their mind, by becoming familiar with the debilitating productions of the Continent. If the cause of Christianity is really to be served, Germany must retrace her steps, and learn from the divines of England, not only those of more ancient date, but from such names as Routh, Van Mildert, Middleton, and Rose, and others of our own generation, and from her own ancient but neglected worthies. It is indeed but little to say that modern Germany has much to learn from the Catholicity of the reformed Church of England, who has been foremost in biblical scholarship, as Walton and Kennicott can testify; who can show a school of sacred criticism, in which Lowth, and Copleston, and Keble have taught; who can prove the possession of real genius, as ample and energetic as that of any nation in the world, far different from that laborious eccentricity, that indulgence in a wayward but plodding fancy, which usurps the name; and who, in her best days, and in the persons of her noblest sons, has been the foremost to uphold the cause of sobriety and truth. To exemplars such as these, both at home and abroad, we must recur, if the genuine spirit of Christ's religion is to be upheld, and transmitted to ages to come. We must leave those turbid streams, whose shallowness is concealed by their muddiness, and seek again the smooth waters which run deep, and study that lucid and calm but profound philosophy, taught by those men who thought regularly, and wrote intelligibly. For it is from the influence of that indistinct and unsettling idealism, that many who have lately attempted to instruct others, have so written as to perplex, not to edify. They have had the cruelty to suggest to their younger disciples those doubts or half-formed thoughts which they were still excogitating, and have acted as if the business of theological instruction was little better than a system of intellectual empiricism, as if there were really nothing certain in theology or morality. We have great need to be reminded of the censure of Bishop Butler*: "Confusion and perplexity in writing is, indeed, without excuse, because any one may, if he pleases, know whether he understands and sees through what he is about; and it is unpardonable for a man to lay his thoughts before others, when he is conscious that he himself does not know whereabouts he is, or how the matter before him stands. It is coming abroad in disorder, which he ought to be dissatisfied to find himself in at home." But let us hope that better days may visit us, and that that noble nation with whom, in many of its moral and intellectual endowments, there are such strong features of resemblance to the English mind, to whose earlier scholarship and theology all Europe is so largely indebted, may at length co-operate with our Church in restoring to the world a sounder and more Catholic philosophy.

It is now time to dismiss these observations, and in conclusion to state more explicitly some particulars of the present work.

The translation of the Psalms has been conducted upon the principles already stated. The vocabulary of the two English translations has been mainly adhered to, the principal departures from it being those which the uniform rendering of the same Hebrew by the same English word required. This has been done whenever the idiom or the context would fairly allow. All differences from the vocabulary of our translation has been marked by an asterisk (*); but such differences only are so noted, as consist in the substitution of a word radically different; the change of a verb into a noun or adjective from the same root, or vice versâ, is not noticed.

From a reverence for the habitual usage of our Bible and Prayer Book, and also that of the Septuagint and other ancient versions, the word יהוה has not been translated "JEHOVAH," but LORD: distinguishing this from אדני, as in our Bible, by printing it in capital letters.

The order of the Hebrew words is as nearly observed as our language will permit. Wherever this would be plainly anomalous, this order is given in the margin.

As the arrangement of the words is regulated by the strict laws of parallelism, it was important to exhibit this, and therefore in a few instances a change has been made for this purpose in the mood of the verb, or in some other way; for example, "which is scattered by the wind," instead of "which the wind scattereth;" the original being literally "which scattereth the wind." This literal rendering is given in the margin. But such a variation as "the hill of his holiness," instead of "his holy hill," is not so noticed.

The translator regrets that it did not occur to him till too late to apply Mr. Granville Sharp's^a admirable rule as to the use of the present tense in Hebrew, which he shows plainly to exist, and to be exhibited, not by any inflection, but by the place which the verb and noun relatively occupy. The past tense generally precedes the noun, the present generally follows it; to which there are regular exceptions.

When the personal pronouns are expressed in Hebrew, they are emphatic: the emphasis is represented therefore in the translation by some adjunct; for example, "I, myself," or, "as for me, I," &c. "Thou, even thou," or, "it is Thou who," &c.

The Psalter is divided into five portions, according to the tradition of the Jews, which is explained and vindicated in the third Dissertation.

^a Mr. Sharp's rules for the conversive Vau, and other peculiarities of Hebrew Syntax, are contained in two tracts: "A Letter to a Learned Friend," and "An Account of some other Particularities," both published in 1803. It is a pity that they are mixed up with so much extraneous matter, as they give a most clear and satisfactory solution to grammatical phenomena of no small difficulty. The exceptions to their application (if they be real exceptions) are so few, as to prove that the rules exist. Mr. Sharp's oriental learning was not extensive; but his grammatical acumen, as shewn both in these treatises and in his Essay on the Greek Article, has seldom been surpassed.

In the Appendix to the second volume is given that Psalm of David which occurs in the 16th chapter of the first book of Chronicles. It ought properly to have followed the translation in the first volume; but its insertion was an after-thought, after that volume had been printed. It seems necessary towards a complete illustration of the Psalms.

The prayer of Habakkuk forms the Appendix to the first volume. It is inserted, because containing the word Selah, which occurs only in that prayer and in the Psalms.

In the first Dissertation, those passages in which Selah occurs are repeated, for the most part, at full length. The author has felt the necessity of clearness in treating this subject; and he would sooner expose himself to the charge of repetition and redundancy, than fail in explaining his meaning distinctly; an object which might not be so conveniently effected by referring to the translation at every paragraph. He has, therefore, felt no scruple in adding, by this course, a few sheets to the bulk of the volume.

To any one at all versed in the study of sacred poetry, it will be evident, that the arrangement of the stanzas in the Psalms is capable of various adjustments. This must depend upon the points of apposition or contrast which may be selected, as appearing most prominent to the arranger. The translator has been rather desirous of adopting that method which would most clearly bring out the general structure of each Psalm, than to call attention to the more minute artifices of composition.

BOOK OF PSALMS.

PART I.

PSALM I. TO XLI. INCLUSIVE.

PSALM I.

I.

HAPPY * is the man, that hath not walked in the counsel of
 And in the way of sinners hath not stood, [the ungodly,
 And in the seat of the scornful hath not sat.
 But in the law of the LORD is his delight,
 And in his law will he meditate day and night.

II.

And he shall be like a tree planted by ^arivers of waters,
 Which his fruit shall bring forth in his season :
 And his leaf shall not wither :
 And all that he doeth shall prosper.
 Not so the ungodly :
 But they are like the chaff ^b which is scattered by the wind.

III.

Therefore the ^cungodly shall not ^{*}rise up in the judgment,
 Nor sinners in the congregation of the righteous :
 For the ^dLORD knoweth the way of the righteous :
 But the way of the ungodly shall perish.

^a Or streams.

^b Heb. scattereth the wind.

^c Heb. shall not rise up the ungodly.

^d Heb. knoweth the LORD.

PSALM II.

I.

Why rage the heathen,
 And why do the * nations imagine vanity ?
 They set themselves, the Kings of the earth,
 And the rulers take counsel together
 Against the LORD, and against his Anointed.
 Let us break asunder their bonds,
 And cast away from us their cords.
 He that sitteth in heaven shall laugh :
 The Lord shall have them ^ain derision.
 Then shall he speak unto them in his wrath,
 And in his *hot displeasure he shall vex them.

II.

Yet I myself have ^banointed my King
 On Sion the hill of my holiness.
 I will declare the *statute :
 The LORD hath said unto me,
 My Son art thou : I this day have begotten thee. [heritance, Desire of me, and I will give thee the heathen for thine in-
 And for thy possession the uttermost parts of the earth.
 Thou shalt bruise them with a rod of iron :
 As the vessel of the potter thou shalt *shatter them.

III.

And now, O ye kings, be wise :
 Be instructed, O ye judges of the earth.
 Serve the LORD with fear,
 And rejoice unto him with trembling.
 Kiss the Son, lest he be angry,
 And ye perish from the way :
 When there ^cis a kindling, though but a little, of his wrath,
 Happy* are all that trust in him.

^a Heb. laugh scornfully at them.

^b Heb. ^{וְאֵל} emphatic.

^c Heb. is kindled but a little his wrath.

PSALM III.

A Psalm of David: when he fled from Absalom his son.

I.

LORD, how* many are they that trouble me :
Many are they that rise against me,
Many are they that say to my soul,
There is no salvation for him in God.

SELAH.

II.

But thou, O LORD, art a shield about me,
My glory, and the lifter up of my head.
With my voice upon the LORD I did call,
And he heard me from the hill of his holiness.

SELAH.

III.

As^a for me, I laid me down : I awaked :
For the LORD sustained me.
I will not be afraid for ten thousands of the people,
Which round about have set themselves against me.
Arise, O LORD :
Save me, O my God :
For thou hast smitten all mine enemies on the cheek bone :
The teeth of the ungodly thou hast broken.
To the LORD belongeth salvation :
Upon thy people is thy blessing.

^bSELAH.

* Heb. עַל emphatic.

^b The Syriac here reads "for ever."

PSALM IV.

To the Chief Musician on Neginoth. A Psalm of David.

I.

When I call, hear me, O God of my righteousness :
In trouble thou hast enlarged me :
Have mercy upon me, and hear my prayer.
O sons of men, how long my glory will ye put to shame,
Will ye love vanity, will ye seek after deceit ?

SELAH.

II.

But know that the ^aLORD hath set apart the godly to him-
The LORD will hear, when I call upon him. [self :
Stand in awe, and do no sin :
Speak * to your own heart upon your bed, and be still.

SELAH.

III.

Sacrifice * the sacrifices of righteousness,
And trust in the LORD.
Many there be that say, Who will show us good ?
Lift up on us the light of thy countenance, O LORD.
Thou hast * given gladness to my heart,
More than in the time that their corn and wine increased.
In peace I will both lay me down, and sleep,
For thou, LORD, only, in * hope dost make me dwell.

* Heb. hath set apart the Lord.

PSALM V.

To the Chief Musician on Nehiloth. A Psalm of David.

I.

To my words give ear, O LORD :
Consider my meditation.
Hearken unto the voice of my crying, my King and my God:
For unto thee will I pray.

O LORD, in the morning thou shalt hear my voice :
In the morning will I direct it unto thee, and will look up.
For^a a God that hath no pleasure in wickedness art thou :
There shall not dwell with thee evil :
The ^bfoolish shall not stand before thine eyes :
Thou hatest all that work iniquity.
Thou shalt destroy them that speak lies : [LORD.
The man of ^cblood and the deceitful thou shalt abhor, O

I will worship towards the temple of thy holiness in thy fear.
O LORD, lead me in thy righteousness, because of thine
Make straight before my face thy way. [enemies :
For there is not in their mouth stedfastness :
Their inward part is very wickedness :^d
A sepulchre that is open is their throat :
With their tongue they flatter.
Make them guilty, O God :
Let them fall by their own counsels :
In the multitude of their transgressions cast them out,
For they have rebelled against thee.

^a Heb. for not a God that hath pleasure in wickedness art thou.

^b Heb. shall not stand the foolish.

^c Heb. bloodshed.

^d Heb. wickednesses.

III.

But let there^a be gladness to all them that trust in thee ;
For ever they shall sing for joy, for thou defendest them :
And they shall be joyful in thee who love thy Name.
For it is Thou who shalt bless the righteous, O LORD :
As with a shield, with favour shalt thou compass him.

^a Heb. but be glad all those, &c.

PSALM VI.

To the Chief Musician on Neginoth upon Sheminith. A Psalm of David.

I.

O LORD, do not thou in thine anger rebuke me,
Neither in thy hot displeasure chasten me.
Have mercy upon me, O LORD, for very weak am I:
Heal me, O LORD, for vexed are my bones,
And my soul is vexed sore:
But thou, O LORD, how long?
Turn thee, O LORD; deliver my soul:
Save me, for the sake of thy mercy.
For there is not in death remembrance of thee:
In hell who will give thanks to thee?
I am weary of my groaning:
I wash every night my bed:
With my tears my couch I water.
Mine^a eye is consumed for grief:
It waxeth old because of all them that trouble me.

II.

Away from me, all ye that work iniquity:
For^b the LORD hath heard the voice of my weeping.
The^c LORD hath heard my supplication:
The LORD my prayer will receive.
They shall be ashamed and vexed sore, all mine enemies:
They shall be turned back, and be ashamed suddenly.

^a Heb. is consumed for grief mine eye.

^{b, c} Heb. for hath heard the Lord.

PSALM VII.

Shiggaion of David, which he sang unto the LORD, concerning the words of Cush the Benjamite.

I.

O LORD my God, in thee *do I seek refuge :
Save me from all my persecutors, and deliver me :
Lest he devour, like a lion, my soul,
Rending* it, and there be none to help.

O LORD my God, if I have done this :
If there be *indeed iniquity in my hands :
If I have rewarded unto him that was at peace with me evil :
(Yea, I have delivered him that *troubled me without cause :)
Then ^blet the enemy* pursue^c my soul, and* overtake^d it:
And let him tread down upon the earth my life,
And my *glory in the dust let him lay.

SELAH.

II.

Arise, O LORD, in thy wrath :
Lift up thyself, because of the rage of *those that trouble me:
And awake for me in the judgment that thou hast commanded.
And the congregation of the people^e shall be round about thee:
Therefore^f for their sakes do thou on high return.

The LORD shall *^grule the people :
Judge me, O LORD, according to my righteousness,
And according to the *perfectness that is in me.

^a יט emphatic.

^b Heb. let pursue the enemy.

^c, ^d These two words, "pursue" and "overtake," keep up the image of a wild beast.

^e Heb. nations.

^f Heb. and.

^g Heb. judge, ידן ; but יפֿט is the word in the next line.

Let there be an end now of the wickedness of the ungodly,
But establish thou the just.
For he trieth the hearts and reins, the ^arighteous God.
My ^{*}shield is of God,
Who saveth the upright in heart.
God is a righteous judge^b :
And God is provoked every day.

If he turn not, his sword he will whet :
His bow he hath bent, and made it ready :
Yea, for him he hath made ready the instruments of death :
His arrows against the persecutors he ^{*}prepareth.

Behold, he travaileth with iniquity,
And hath conceived mischief,
And brought forth falsehood.
A pit he hath graven and digged it :
But he hath fallen into the ditch that he ^{*}prepared :
His ^{*c}mischief shall return upon his own head :
And upon his own pate his violence shall come down.

I will give thanks to the LORD, according to his righteousness :
And I will ^{*}make a psalm to the Name of the LORD Most High.

^a Heb. God righteous.

^b Heb. judge righteous.

^c Heb. shall return his mischief.

PSALM VIII.

To the Chief Musician upon Gittith. A Psalm of David.

O LORD, our Lord,
How excellent is thy Name in all the earth !
Who hast set thy glory above the heavens.
Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings thou hast *per-
Because of thine enemies, [fected^a strength,
That thou mightest still the enemy and the avenger.
For I will consider thy heavens, the work of thy fingers,
The moon and the stars which thou hast ordained.
What is man, that thou art mindful of him ;
And the son of man, that thou visitest him ?
Thou madest him ^ba little lower than the angels,
And with glory and honour hast crowned him.
Thou gavest him dominion over the works of thy hands :
All things thou hast set under his feet :
Sheep and oxen, all of them :
The fowl of the heavens, and the *fish of the seas :
Whatsoever passeth through the paths of the seas.
O LORD, our Lord :
How excellent is thy Name in all the earth !

^a This is the rendering in St. Matth. xxi. 16.

^b Heb. madest him lower a little.

PSALM IX.

To the Chief Musician upon Muth-labben. A Psalm of David.

I.

I will give thanks unto the LORD with my whole heart :
I will shew forth all thy marvels :
I will be glad and rejoice in thee :
I will *make a psalm to thy Name, O most High.

When ^amine enemies are turned back,
They shall fall and *be destroyed from thy presence.
For thou hast maintained my judgment and my cause :
Thou art set in the throne, judging in righteousness.

Thou hast rebuked the heathen :
Thou hast destroyed the ungodly :
Their name thou hast *blotted out for ever and ever.
O thou enemy, ^bthy *swords are come to a perpetual end :
And cities thou hast *brought to ruin :^c
Their ^dmemorial is destroyed with them.

But the LORD for ever shall endure :
He hath prepared for judgment his throne :
And HE it is who shall judge the world in righteousness :
He shall ^e*rule the people in uprightness :
And ^fthe LORD shall be a high place to the oppressed,
A refuge in the times of trouble.
And they will trust in thee who know thy Name :
For thou hast not forsaken them that seek thee, O LORD.

^a Heb. when are turned back mine enemies.

^b Heb. are come to an end thy swords for ever.

^c Heb. rooted up.

^d Heb. is destroyed their memorial with them.

^e Heb. shall judge יִדִּין.

Heb. and shall be the LORD.

Make *a psalm to the LORD which dwelleth in Sion :
 Declare among *the nations his doings. [remember :
 For when he maketh inquisition for blood, then he doth
 He forgetteth not the complaint of the afflicted : who say,

 The ^cLORD is known by the judgment which he hath done :

The ^dwicked shall be turned into hell,
 All the *heathen who forget God.
 For not alway shall the needy be forgotten ;^e
 The *hope of the poor shall not *be destroyed for ever.

PSALM X.

I.

Why, O LORD, standest thou afar off?
 Thou hidest thyself in times of trouble.
 In his pride the ungodly doth persecute the poor:
 Let them be taken in the *thoughts that they have imagined.
 For ^athe ungodly boasteth of the desires of his soul,
 And the covetous he blesseth:
 God he contemneth.^b [God:
 The ungodly^c in the pride of ^dhis countenance seeketh not “There is no God,” are all his thoughts.
 Grievous are his ways at all times:
 Far above are thy judgments out of his sight,
 As for all who *trouble him, he puffeth at them.
 He saith in his heart, I shall not be moved for ^egenerations of
 I am he that shall have no evil. [generations,
 Of cursing his mouth is full, and of deceit, and of fraud:
 Under his tongue is mischief and iniquity.
 He sitteth in the lurking places of the villages:
 In secret places he murdereth the innocent:
 His eyes are against the *destitute.
 He *lurketh in secret:
 As a lion in his *covert he lurketh, to ravish the poor:
 He doth ravish the poor, when he draweth him into his net.
 He croucheth, he humbleth himself:
 And ^fthe *destitute fall by his strong ones.

^a Heb. for boasteth the ungodly.

^b In this I have followed Dathe: it corresponds with the third line of the second part, which is an antistrophe.

^c The received Hebrew text reads with the Septuagint כ, but the English Bible, with seventeen of Kennicott's copies, reads ב.

^d Heb. of his nostril נא.

^e Heb. to generation and generation.

^f Heb. and fall by his strong ones the destitute.

He saith in his heart, ^a God hath forgotten :
He hideth his face, he will not see it for ever.^b

II.

Arise, O LORD God, lift up thine hand :
Forget not the poor.
Wherefore should the ^cwicked condemn God,
Saying in his heart, Thou wilt not seek it out?
Thou hast seen it: for Thou, even Thou, mischief and spite
To requite it with thine hand. [dost behold,
To thee ^{*}the destitute committeth himself:
The fatherless,—it is Thou who art indeed his helper.
Break the power of the ungodly and evil :
Thou shalt search out his ungodliness, till thou find none.^d

III.

The LORD is King for ever and ever :
The ^eheathen are perished out of his land.
The desires ^{*}of the meek thou hast heard, O LORD :
Thou wilt establish their heart :
Thou ^fwilt cause thine ear to hear.
That thou mayest judge the fatherless and oppressed :
That ^gthe man ^hof the earth may terrify no more.

^a Heb. hath forgotten God.

^b It is remarkable that one of Kennicott's copies here reads "Selah:" which is the very place where it would appropriately occur.

^c Heb. contemneth the wicked.

^d Heb. thou shalt not find.

^e Heb. are perished the heathen.

^f Heb. thou wilt cause to hear thine ear.

^g Heb. shall not more add to terrifying the man from the earth.

^h From the earth: that is, made of the dust of the ground.

PSALM XI.

To the Chief Musician. Of David.

I.

In the LORD * is my refuge :
 How say ye to my soul,
 Flee to your^a hill, O bird?
 For behold, the ungodly bend the bow,
 They make ready their arrow upon the string,
 To shoot at them in darkness, even at the upright in heart.
 For^b the foundations will be cast down :
 The righteous, what can he do?

II.

The^c LORD is in the temple of his holiness :
 The LORD, in heaven is his throne :
 His eyes behold,
 His eyelids try the children of men.
 The LORD the righteous trieth: [hate.
 But the ungodly, and the lover of violence his ^dsoul doth
 He shall rain upon the ungodly coals of fire,
 And brimstone, and a wind of horror,
 As the portion of their cup.
 For the righteous LORD righteousness^e doth love :
 The upright his countenance shall behold.^f

^a The pronoun is in the plural, the word rendered "bird" being a noun of number.

^b This is the speech of the ungodly.

^c Or else, The Lord, in the temple is his holiness. But this, though more consistent with the parallelism, is unsupported by any version, or by the common use of the words.

^d Heb. doth hate his soul.

^f Heb. shall behold his countenance.

PSALM XII.

To the Chief Musician upon Sheminith. A Psalm of David.

I.

Save me, O LORD, for there is a ceasing of the godly:
 For there is a minishing of the faithful from among the children of men.
 Vanity they speak, each man to his neighbour:
 With a lip of flatteries, with a ^adouble heart they speak.

II.

The ^bLORD shall cut off all lips of flattery,
 The tongue that speaketh great things:
 Which say, With our tongue will we prevail:
 Our lips are our own: who is Lord over us?

III.

Because of the ^{*}desolation of the poor,
 Because of the ^{*}groaning of the needy,
 Now will I arise, saith the LORD:
 I will set him in safety from him that puffeth at him.

IV.

The words of the LORD are words ^eof purity, [times.
 Silver tried in the furnace from ^dthe earth, ^{*}refined seven
 Thou, O LORD, shalt keep them:
 Thou shalt preserve them from this generation for ever.
 On every side the ungodly walk,
 When ^ethe vilest ^fof the sons of men are exalted.

^a Heb. heart and heart.

^c Heb. words pure.

^e Heb. when are exalted, &c.

^b Heb. shall cut off the LORD.

^d Heb. to, or, of the earth.

^f Heb. the vilenesses.

PSALM XIII.

To the Chief Musician. A Psalm of David.

I.

How long, O LORD, wilt thou forget me? for ever?
 How long wilt thou hide thy face from me?
 How long shall I take ^acounsel in my soul,
 With sorrow in my heart daily?
 How long shall ^bmine enemy be exalted over me?

II.

* Behold, hear me, O LORD my God:
 Lighten mine eyes, lest I have the sleep of death;
 Lest mine^c enemy say, I have prevailed against him;
 And those that trouble me rejoice when I am moved.

III.

But as for me, in thy mercy I trust:
 My ^dheart shall rejoice in thy salvation.
 I will sing to the LORD, for he hath *rewarded^e me:
 (And^f I will *make a psalm to the Name of the LORD Most High.)

^a Heb. counsels.

^b Heb. be exalted mine enemy.

^c Heb. lest say mine enemy.

^d Heb. shall rejoice my heart.

^e See English Psalter, Ps. cxvi. 7., where the Heb. is the same.

^f This is preserved in the English Psalter, and in the Septuagint, though obelized there. It seems to have fallen out of the Hebrew Text; for without it the Psalm is abrupt in its termination, and the uniformity of its structure is impaired.

PSALM XIV.

To the Chief Musician. Of David.

The^a fool hath said in his heart, There is no God.^b
They are corrupt, they are abominable in their doings :
There is none that doeth good.

The LORD from heaven looked down upon the children of men,
To see if there was^c any that was wise, seeking after God.^d
They are all gone aside together, they are become filthy :
There is none that doeth good, not even one.

Have they no knowledge, all the workers of iniquity,
Who eat up my people, as they eat bread ?
Upon the LORD they have not called.

There they feared a fear :
For God is in the generation of the righteous.
The counsel of the poor ye have shamed,
Because the LORD is his refuge.

Who will give from Sion salvation to Israel ?
When^e the LORD turneth the captivity of his people,
Rejoicing^f shall be in Jacob,
Gladness in Israel.

^a Heb. hath said the fool.

^{b, d} See the 10th Psalm.

^c "was" is emphatic, הָיָה.

^e Heb. when turneth the Lord.

^f Heb. shall rejoice Jacob ; shall be glad Israel.

PSALM XV.

A Psalm of David.

LORD, who shall sojourn^a in thy tabernacle?
Who shall dwell in the hill of thy holiness?
He that walketh uprightly,
And doeth righteousness,
And speaketh truth in his heart.
He backbiteth not with his tongue,
He doeth not to his neighbour evil, [him.
And a reproach he taketh not up against *him that is near
He^b is contemned in his own eyes, he is abased:
And those that fear the LORD he honoureth.
He sweareth to his neighbour, and changeth not:
His money he giveth not upon usury:
And a reward against the innocent he taketh not.
He that doeth these things shall not be moved for ever.

^a יגור, which, being joined to the word "tabernacle," signifies the temporary habitation of God on earth, of which the tabernacle of Moses may be considered a symbol; while "dwell" refers to the temple, the type of God's perpetual habitation in heaven.

^b Here the sense of the English Psalter is followed; though the Septuagint and English Bible alike translate it "in whose eyes a vile person is contemned."

PSALM XVI.

Michtam of David.

I.

Preserve me, O God: for *my refuge is in thee.
 Thou^a hast said unto the LORD, my Lord art thou:
 My goodness is nothing unto thee:
It^b is for the saints which are in the earth;
 Those, and the excellent, all my delight is in them.
 Many shall be their sorrows who after another god do hasten.^c
 I will not offer their drink-offerings of blood,
 And I will not take up their names into my lips.

II.

The LORD is the portion of mine inheritance, and of my cup:
 Thou thyself shalt maintain my lot.
 The lines are fallen to me in pleasant places:
 Yea, a heritage that is goodly is mine.
 I will bless the LORD, who hath given me counsel:
 Yea, in the night my reins chasten me.^d
 I have set the LORD before me continually,

^a The Septuagint and Syriac here read, "I have said," which reading is the most intelligible; and is confirmed by 21 or 22 of Kennicott's, and by 8 of De Rossi's MSS.

^b This very obscure passage I have rendered according to the sense of the English Bible translation. That is, all the good I can do or imagine, can in no way benefit thee. But it may benefit thy servants, the saints which are in the earth. It may also be rendered, according to the sense of the English Psalter, "I am for, or attached to, the saints that are in the earth." The Septuagint reads, τοῖς ἀγίοις τοῖς ἐν τῇ γῇ αὐτοῦ, ἐθελούμαστωσιν πάντα τὰ θελήματα αὐτοῦ ἐν αὐτοῖς, reading instead of ואדירי (and the excellent) האדירי, and instead of הפציו הפציו.

^c "Or give gifts to another," as the margin of the English Bible gives it; the Heb. word מהר, signifying either to hasten, or to endow.

^d Heb. chasten me my reins.

For he is on my right hand; I shall not be moved.
Wherefore^a my heart was glad, and my glory rejoiced:
Yea, my flesh shall rest^b in hope.
For thou wilt not leave my soul in hell,
Thou wilt not suffer thy ^cHoly One* to see corruption.
Thou* shalt^d make known to me the path of life:
Fulness of joys is in thy presence:
Pleasures are at thy right hand for evermore.

^a Heb. was glad my heart, and rejoiced my glory.

^b Heb. dwell.

^c "Holy One" is plural among the received copies of the Jews; but Dr. Kennicott remarks that it is in the singular number in six editions of the printed Talmud. In 180 copies of Kennicott, in the LXX., and in the Syriac, it is singular.

^d This is the more literal rendering, as in Acts ii. 28.

PSALM XVII.

A Prayer of David.

I.

Hear, O LORD, *righteousness :
 Consider my cry :
 Give ear unto my prayer,
 That goeth not out of lips of deceit.
 From thy presence let *judgment come forth :
 Let thine eyes behold the things that are equal.
 Thou hast proved mine heart,
 Thou hast visited me in the night :
 Thou hast tried me, and shalt find nothing :^a [mouth,^b

 Concerning^c the works of man.
 By the word of thy lips
 I^d have kept me from the paths of the destroyer.
 Hold up my goings in thy paths :
 My ^efootsteps shall not be moved.

II.

As for me, I have called upon thee,
 For thou wilt hear me, O God :
 Incline thine ear to me,
 Hear my speech.
 Shew the marvels of thy mercies,^f

^a Heb. thou shalt not find.

^b Heb. shall not transgress my mouth.

^c The Septuagint is followed in taking this line in connection with the former. The Septuagint, however, reads, "that my mouth may not speak," instead of "transgress," יעבר for ירבר.

^d אני emphatic.

^e Shall not be moved my footsteps.

^f So read both our translations, the LXX., the Syriac, 35 and 37 of

O thou that savest them that *take refuge in thee
 From those that rise up against thy right hand.
 Keep me as the apple of the eye,^a
 Under the shadow of thy wings hide me :
 From the presence of the ungodly that waste me :
 Mine enemies my soul ^bdo* surround.
 In their own fat they are inclosed :
 Their mouths speak in pride.^c
 Our* goings they have now encompassed ;
 Their eyes they have set, turning down to the earth,
 Like as when a lion is greedy of prey,
 And as when a young lion lurketh in secret places.

III.

Arise^d, O LORD : °disappoint him : cast him down :
 Deliver my soul from the ungodly by thy sword :
 From the men, by thy hand, O LORD :
 From the men of this world :
 Their portion is in this life :^f
 And with thy hid treasure thou fillest their belly.
 They ^ghave children to the full,^h
 And they leave their* residue to their babes.
 As for me, in righteousness I will behold thy Presence :
 I shall be satisfied,ⁱ when I awake, with thy likeness.

Kennicott's MSS., and some of De Rossi's. But the received Heb. text is הפלה, not הפלא, which they read.

^a Heb. of the daughter of the eye.

^b Or, the enemies in soul surround me.

^c Plural in the Heb.

^d This is like the style of the circumjacent Psalms.

^e Heb. go before his face : but this idiom is so obscure, that the reading of our authorised translations is here retained.

^f Heb. lives.

^g Or, according to the margin of the English Bible, "Their children are full."

PSALM XVIII.

To the Chief Musician. Of David the servant of the LORD ; who spake unto the LORD the words of this song, in the day that the LORD delivered him from the hand of all his enemies, and from the hand of Saul. And he said,

I.

I will love thee, O LORD, my strength : [deliverer,
 The LORD is my^a stony rock, and my fortress, and my
 My God, my Rock ; I will *take refuge in him :
 My shield, and the horn of my salvation ; my high tower.
 With^b praise will I call upon God :
 And from mine enemies I shall be saved.

II.

They compassed me, ^cthe sorrows of death,
 And the floods of Belial affrighted me :
 The sorrows of hell came about me,
 They overtook me, the snares of death.

In my^d trouble I will call upon the LORD,
 And unto God will I cry :
 He shall hear, from his temple, my voice,
 And my cry shall be in his presence :
 It shall enter into his ears.

III.

Then did ^eshake and *quake the earth :
 And the foundations of the hills trembled,
 And did shake, because wrath was with him.

^a Heb. סלעי.

^b The Septuagint (αἰρώ) is here followed.

^c Heb. the pangs, or throes, חבלי.

^d Heb. in the trouble (that was) to me.

^e The similarity of sound of the two Hebrew words תרעש and תנעש is here imitated.

There went up a smoke from his nostrils,
 And a fire out of his mouth devoured :
 Coals were kindled by it.
 And he bowed the heavens, and came down :
 And there was darkness under his feet :
 And he rode upon the cherub, and did fly :^a
 And he came ^bflying upon the wings of the wind.
 He made darkness his secret place :
 Round ^cabout him were as a pavilion darkness of waters,
 Thick clouds of the skies.^d
 At the brightness before him the thick clouds passed,
 Hail, and coals of fire.
 And ^ethe LORD thundered in the heavens,
 And the Most High gave his voice,
 Hail, and coals of fire.
 And he sent out his arrows, and scattered them ;
 And his lightnings he ^{*}showered, and discomfited them.
 Then ^fwere seen the channels of the waters :
 Then were discovered the foundations of the world,
 At thy chiding, O LORD :
 At the blasting of the breath of thy nostrils.

He shall send from on high : he shall fetch me :
 He shall draw me out of many waters.^g
 He shall deliver me from mine enemy, that was strong,
 And from my haters : for they were too mighty for me :
 They overtook me in the day of my calamity :
 But ^hthe LORD was a stay for me.

IV.

For I have kept the ways of the LORD,
 And have not gone wickedly from my God.

^e Heb. and thundered the Lord.

^f Heb. and were seen, and were discovered.

^g Heb. waters many.

^h Heb. but was (emphatic) the Lord a staff to me.

 And his statutes I put not away from me.
 And ^aI was perfect before him :
 And I kept myself from mine iniquity : [righteousness,

 According to the cleanness of my hands before his eyes.

With the merciful thou wilt be merciful :
 With the ^cman of perfectness thou wilt be perfect :
 With the clean thou wilt be clean :
 And with the froward thou wilt wrestle.

For thou, even thou the people of affliction wilt save,
 But the eyes of haughtiness wilt bring down :
 For thou, even thou shalt light my lamp :
 The LORD my God will lighten my darkness :
 For by thee I shall run through an host :
 And by my God I shall leap over the wall.

v.^d

GOD : . . perfect are his ways :
 The word of the LORD is tried in the fire ;
 A shield is He to all who *take refuge in him.

For who is God, save the LORD ?
 And who is the Rock, except our God ?
 It is God who girdeth me with strength,
 And maketh perfect my ways.
 He maketh my feet like those of hinds,
 And on my high places he maketh me to stand :
 He teacheth my hands to war,

^b Heb. and hath rewarded me the Lord.

^c Heb. גִּבּוֹר, a strong (or eminent) man perfect.

^d This v. division is antistrophical to the first : containing an enlargement of the epithets there, Strength, Rock, Shield, &c.

^e Heb. is broken a bow of brass.

And thou shalt give me the shield of thy salvation :
And thy right hand shall hold me up,
And thy gentleness shall be multiplied on me.

Thou shalt make room for my steps under me,
And ^amy footsteps shall not slide.
I will follow mine enemies, and overtake them :
And I will not return till I have destroyed them.
I will smite them, and they shall not be able to rise :
They shall fall under my feet.

And thou hast girded me with strength to war ;
Thou hast bowed down ^bunder me those who rose up against me.
And mine enemies ; . . thou hast given me their neck,
And those that hate me I ^{*}shall cut down.
They shall cry : but there shall be none to save :
Even to the LORD : but he shall not hear them.
And I will beat them small as the dust before the wind :
As the clay of the streets I will cast them out.

VI.

Thou shalt deliver me from the strivings of the people ;
Thou shalt make me the head of the heathen :
A people whom I have not known shall serve me :
At the hearing of the ear they shall hear me ;
The children of the stranger shall dissemble with me,
The children of the stranger shall fail,
And shall be afraid out of their close places.

VII.

The LORD^c liveth :
And blessed be my Rock :
And exalted be the God of my salvation :

To the Chief Musician. A Psalm of David.

I.

The heavens *are telling the glory of God ;
And the works^a of his hands *declareth the firmament.

And to the end of the world their words.

For the sun he hath set a tabernacle in them,
And he as a bridegroom goeth forth from his chamber :
He rejoiceth as a strong man to run his course.
From the end of the heavens is his going forth,
And his circuit unto the ends of them :
And nothing is hid from the heat thereof.

II.

^d So read both our versions, and the LXX. The Heb., which is in the plural, is obviously wrong, since the adjective is singular.

^c Heb. will fulfil the LORD.

^d Or, some of chariots, and some of horses, but we of the Name of the LORD our God will be mindful.

1. O LORD, save the King^a:

Hear us in the day when we call.

^a This reading follows that of our offices for Morning and Evening Prayer, and the Septuagint. The translations both in our Bible and Psalter, "let the King hear us when we call," and "hear us, O King of heaven," &c., are opposed to the context both of this and the following Psalm, and with the general use of the word "King" in the Psalms: which, though applied to the second Person of the Trinity, is not used to express God the Father, unless coupled with some epithet or adjunct. The Syriac, however, supports our authorized versions.

To the Chief Musician on Aijeleth Shahar. A Psalm of David.

I.

My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me,
Far from my salvation, from the words of my roaring?
O my God, I cry in the day, and thou hearest not:
And in the night, and there is no rest to me.

But thou continuest holy,^a

Thou that art the praise^b of Israel.

In thee trusted our fathers:

They trusted, and thou didst deliver them:

Unto thee they cried, and were holpen:

In thee they trusted, and were not *ashamed.

But as for me, I am a worm, and no man:

The reproach of men, and despised of the people.

All they that see me laugh in scorn at me:

They shoot out the lip; they shake the head, saying,

Let him deliver him: for he delighteth in him.

But^d thou art he that took me out of the womb:

^d Heb. doors everlasting.

Lift up, O ye gates, your heads ;

For the sake of thy goodness, O LORD.

ⲁ Good and upright is the LORD :

Therefore will he * guide sinners in the way :

ⲁ He will * shew the way to the meek in judgment :

Yea, he will learn the meek his way.

^a This verse is evidently a fragment : so Dr. Kennicott marks it. The words, " O God," plainly belong to the first distich : as the word in thee, Ⲃ, begins the distich Ⲃ.

^b Heb. shall not triumph enemies to me.

^c Heb. guide me in thy truth : but it is thus paraphrased, to shew the connection of the verb with a noun preceding ; " thy ways : " the root of both being the same in the Heb.

^d Heb. remember me Thou.

- 5 All the paths of the LORD are mercy and truth,
 To those who keep his covenant and his testimonies.

^a "shall lodge" marg. Eng. Bible, making a transitory sojourn.

^b Here the letter ק ought regularly to occur; but of this there is no trace in the Heb. or the Septuagint. Bishop Horsley, with Dr. Kennicott and Houbigant, proposes to read, instead of ראה look upon, קצר cut short. This is ingenious, but merely conjectural. See Bishop Horsley's very able notes on this psalm, which propose solutions of many apparent anomalies.

^c Heb. take me out of . . וישא.

^d This last line is redundant; it begins, as does the redundant couplet in Ps. xxxiv., with the letter פ. On this Michaelis has a very ingenious and plausible conjecture, that in ancient times the double power of the פ was marked by a distinction in the character. Of course the present Masoretical pointing would interfere with this theory, but that is a comparatively modern addition. See his notes to Bishop Lowth's xxii. Praelection.

PSALM XXVI.

Of David.

I.

Judge me, O LORD.

For I ^asurely in innocence have walked :
And in the LORD I have trusted :

And I have walked in thy truth.

III.

I have not dwelt with men^b of vanity,
And with dissemblers I have not gone :
I have hated the congregation of the wicked ;
And with the ungodly I have not sat.
I will wash in innocency my hands,
And I will compass thine altar, O LORD :
That I may shew, with the voice of thanksgiving,
And that I may tell, all thy wonders.
O LORD, I have loved the habitation of thy house,
And the place of the dwelling of thy *glory.

Take not away with sinners my soul,
Nor with men of blood my life :
In whose hands is mischief,
And their right hand is full of gifts.

IV.

But as for me, in my *perfectness I will walk :
Redeem me, and be *gracious to me.
My foot standeth in uprightness :

Which speak peace to their neighbours,
But *evil is in their hearts.

Give to them according to their doings,

Nor the work of his hands :
He shall break them down, and shall not build them.

PSALM XXIX.

A Psalm of David.

I.

Give unto the LORD, ye sons of the mighty,^a
 Give unto the LORD glory and strength.
 Give unto the LORD the glory of his Name :
 Worship the LORD in the beauty of holiness.

II.

The Voice of the LORD is upon the waters :
 The God of glory thundereth :
 The LORD is upon many waters.^b
 The Voice of the LORD is with power :
 The Voice of the LORD is with majesty.
 The Voice of the LORD breaketh the cedars,
 Yea, the^c LORD breaketh the cedars of Lebanon.
 Yea, he maketh them to skip like a calf :
 Lebanon and Sirion like a young^d unicorn.
 The Voice of the LORD divideth the flames of fire :
 The Voice of the LORD shaketh the wilderness ;
 The^e LORD shaketh the wilderness of Kadesh.
 The Voice of the LORD^f maketh the hinds to bring forth,
 And discovereth the forests :
 But^g in his temple doth every thing therein speak of his glory.

^a Heb. of the gods.^b Heb. waters many.^c Heb. and breaketh the Lord.^d Heb. son of the unicorns.^e Heb. shaketh the Lord.^f Heb. maketh to bring forth the hinds.^g The idea is taken from the margin of the English Bible. בְּלֵךְ does not mean, literally, every one, but every one of him, or thereof. It seems as if this line was a climax : i. e. that great as is the glory of his voice, yet a greater glory than this, namely, his Presence, is shewed in his temple.

III.

The LORD upon the flood doth sit :
Yea, ^a the LORD doth sit a King for ever.
The LORD strength to his people shall give ;
The LORD shall bless his people in peace.

^a Heb. and doth sit the Lord.

PSALM XXX.

A Psalm of a Song at the dedication of the house of David.

I will *exalt thee, O LORD, for thou hast lifted me up,

To the Chief Musician. A Psalm of David.

I.

In thee, O LORD, I have * taken refuge :
 I shall not be ashamed for ever :
 In thy righteousness * rescue me.

Of David. A Maschil.

I.

Happy* is he, whose^a transgression is forgiven;
Whose sin is covered.
Happy* the man, to whom the LORD will not impute iniquity,
And^b in whose spirit there is no guile.
When I kept silence, my bones were consumed^c
Through my roaring all the day.
For by day and night thy^d hand was heavy upon me;
My^e moisture was turned into the drought of summer.

And mine iniquity I have not covered:
I said, I will confess my transgression to the LORD:
And thou thyself didst forgive the iniquity of my sin.

IV.

I^a will inform thee, and teach thee in the way which thou shalt go:

I will counsel thee: upon thee shall be mine eye.

Be ye not like horse, like mule, without understanding:

With bit and bridle their mouths must be held, lest they come near to thee.

Many plagues shall be on the ungodly:

But he that trusteth in the LORD mercy shall compass him.

Be glad in the LORD, ye righteous:

And *sing for joy, all that are upright in heart.

PSALM XXXIII.

I.

Rejoice,^a ye righteous, in the LORD:
For to the upright* pleasant is praise.

Give* thanks unto the LORD with harp,
With a lute of ten strings* make a psalm to him.
Sing to him a song that is new:

For right is the word of the LORD:
And all his works are done in truth.
He loveth righteousness and judgment:
Of the mercy of the LORD the^c earth is full.
By the word of the LORD the heavens were made:
And by the breath of his mouth all the hosts of them:
He gathereth, as an heap, the waters of the sea:
He layeth up in treasure-houses the depths.

Fear the LORD, all the earth:
Of him stand in awe, all the dwellers of the world:
For HE spake, and it was:
HE commanded, and it stood.

II.

And in the greatness of his strength he shall not* rescue.

Upon them that* wait for his mercy:
To deliver from death their soul,

Our help and our shield is HE:
For in him shall be^d the gladness of our heart:

Of David: when he changed his behaviour before Abimelech:
and he drove him away, and he departed.

I.

- 8 I will bless the LORD at all times:
Continually his praise shall be in my mouth.
2 In the LORD shall my soul * make her praise^a:

3 O magnify the LORD with me:

PSALM XXXV.

Of David.

I.

Strive* thou, O LORD, with them that strive with me;
Fight thou against those that fight against me.
Lay hand upon the shield and buckler,
And* arise for mine help.
And draw out the spear,
And stop the way against my persecutors:
Say to my soul, Thy salvation am I.

Let them be *ashamed and *confounded, that seek after my soul:

Let them be turned back, and put down,^a that imagine my hurt.^b
Let them be as the dust before the wind:

And let the Angel of the LORD chase them:
Let their way be dark and slippery:

And let the Angel of the LORD persecute them:
For without a cause have they hid for me in a pit their net:
Without a cause have they digged^c for my soul.
Let there come upon him destruction whereof he knoweth not.
And let the pit which he hid, catch himself;
Into^d that very destruction let him fall.

II.

And my soul shall be joyful in the LORD:
It shall rejoice in his salvation.
All my bones shall say,
LORD, who is like unto thee,
Who deliverest the poor from him that is too strong for him,
Yea, the poor and needy from him that spoileth him.

^d Heb. into destruction let him fall into it.

III.

There arose witnesses of violence :
Who of things that I knew not asked me :
They rewarded me evil for good,
To the despoiling of my soul.

But as for me, when they were sick, I put on sackloth,
I afflicted with fasting my soul :
And my prayer into my own bosom shall return.
As though it had been a friend, as a brother I behaved ;^a
As one mourning for a mother, in heaviness I bowed down.
But when I went halting, they were *glad, and gathered themselves together.
They were gathered against me, the abjects, and I knew it not :
They did tear me, and ceased not.
With^b the hypocritical mockers at feasts,
They gnashed upon me their teeth.

IV.

O LORD, how long wilt thou look upon this ?
Turn* aside my soul from their destructions,
From^c the lions mine only one.
I will give thanks to thee in the great congregation :^d
Among^e much people I will praise thee.

Let not them be glad over me who are mine enemies falsely,
And let not those who hate me without a cause wink their eye.
For not of peace do they speak :
But against the quiet of the land speeches of deceit they devise.
Yea, they opened wide against me their mouth :
They said, Aha, aha, our^f eye hath seen it.

^a Heb. I walked.

^c A strong resemblance is observable between this Psalm and the 22d, in this and the following distich.

^d Heb. congregation great.

^e Heb. people strong.

^f Heb. hath seen it our eye.

Thou hast seen, O LORD :

Keep not silence ; O LORD, be not far from me.

And let them not be *glad over me.

Let them not say in their heart, Aha ! our soul !

Let them not say, We have devoured him. [at my hurt^b :

Let them be ashamed and *put down together that *are glad

Let them be clothed with shame and * confusion that magnify themselves against me.

Let them *sing for joy, and be glad, that favour my righteousness.

And let them say continually, Let^c the LORD be magnified,

Who hath pleasure in the *peace of his servant.

And my tongue shall speak of thy righteousness ;

All the day of thy praise.

^a Heb. my striving.

^b Or, mine evil.

^c be magnified the Lord.

PSALM XXXVI.

To the Chief Musician. Of the servant of the LORD, even of David.

I.

The transgression ^a of the wicked saith within my heart,
 There is no fear of God before his eyes.
 For he flattereth himself in his own eyes,
 Until ^b his iniquity be found to be hateful.
 The words of his mouth are iniquity and deceit:
 He hath left off to be wise, to do good.
 Iniquity he hath devised upon his bed;
 He hath set himself in a way that is not good:
 Evil he doth not abhor.

II.

O LORD, in the heavens is thy mercy:
 Thy truth reacheth unto the clouds.
 Thy righteousness is like the mountains of God:
 Thy judgments are the great deep.^c
 Man and beast thou shalt save, O LORD:
 How precious is thy mercy, O God: [have refuge.
 And the children of men under the shadow of thy wings shall

III.

They shall ^{*}be refreshed ^d with the plenteousness of thy house:
 And of the river of thy pleasures thou shalt make them drink.

^a Heb. saith the transgression: that is, causes this reflection that follows: but if we read, with the LXX, the Syriac, one of Kennicott's, and two of De Rossi's copies, "his" for "my" heart (as Dathe recommends), the sense will be more consistent. "Transgression saith to the ungodly לרשע, within his heart; i. e. makes suggestions to his heart."

^b Or, that he may find out (i. e. systematize) his iniquity, and may hate.

^c Heb. deep great.

^d Heb. be watered: marg. Eng. Bible, ירֹוּן.

For with thee is the well of life,
And in thy light shall we see light.
O continue^a thy *mercy to them that know thee,
And thy righteousness to the upright of heart.
Let^b not the foot of pride come against me,
And the hand of the ungodly, let it not remove me.
There are they fallen, the workers of iniquity ;
They are cast down, and shall not be able to rise.

^a draw out: marg. Eng. Bible.

^b let not come against me the foot, &c.

PSALM XXXVII.

Of David.

1. 8.

Fret not thyself because of the wicked :
Be^a not envious against the doers of iniquity :
For as the grass they shall soon be cut down :
And as the green herb they shall wither.

2. 2.

Trust in the LORD, and do good :
Dwell in the land, and^b be fed in truth :
And delight thyself in the LORD,
And he shall give thee the desires of thine heart.

3. 2.

Commit unto the LORD thy way :
And trust in him : and He himself shall do it :
And he shall bring forth, as the light, thy righteousness,
And thy^{*} justice as the noon day.

4. 7.

Hold thou still in the LORD, and wait for him :
Fret not thyself at him who prospereth in his way :
At the man who doeth after evil counsels.

^a Both our versions, the Septuagint, and 20 of Kennicott's copies, read "And be not:" but as the authorities for and against it seem equally balanced, and as the internal evidence of the structure of the Psalm is against it (vide stanzas 2, 4, 5.), I have followed the received Heb. text.

^b So both our translations read: the Hebrew רעה, he shall feed. The Septuagint, ποιμανθήσῃ.

5. 7.

Leave off from anger, and forsake wrath :
 Fret not thyself^a in any wise to do evil :
 For the wicked shall be cut off : [the earth.
 But those who *hope in the LORD, even they shall inherit

6. 1.

For yet a little while, and the ungodly shall not be^b :
 And thou shalt consider well his place, and it shall not be :
 But the meek shall inherit the earth,
 And shall delight themselves in the multitude of peace.

7. 1.

The^c ungodly *deviseth evil against the just,
 And gnasheth upon him with his teeth.
 The LORD shall laugh at him :
 For he seeth that his day is coming.^d

8. 7.

The^e ungodly have drawn the sword,
 And have bent their bow,
 To cast down the poor and needy,
 To slay the upright of way.
 Their sword shall go through their own heart,
 And their bow shall be broken.

9. 2.

Better is a little to the righteous,
 Than riches of many of the ungodly^f :
 For the arms of the ungodly shall be broken,
 But^g the LORD upholdeth the righteous.

^a 78, surely.^b Heb. shall not be the ungodly.^c Heb. deviseth evil the ungodly.^d Heb. is coming his day.^e Heb. the sword have drawn the ungodly.^f Heb. of the ungodly many.^g Heb. but upholdeth the righteous the Lord.

10. י.

The LORD knoweth the days of the *perfect,
And their inheritance for ever shall be:
They shall not be ashamed in the time of evil,
And in the days of dearth they shall be satisfied.

11. כ.

For the ungodly shall be destroyed:
And the enemies of the LORD as the fat of lambs shall consume,
Into smoke shall they consume.

12. ל.

The ^a ungodly borroweth, and doth not repay:
But the righteous is merciful, and giveth.
For the blessed of him shall inherit the earth,
And the cursed of him shall be cut off.

13. מ.

By the LORD the steps of a ^b good man are ordered,
And in his way he *taketh pleasure:
If he fall, he shall not be cast down:
For the LORD upholdeth with his hand.

14. נ.

Young I have been: now am I old:
Yet I have not seen the righteous forsaken,
Nor his seed begging for bread.
All his days he sheweth mercy and lendeth:
And his seed is blessed.^c

15. ס.

Depart from evil, and do good:
And dwell for evermore.
For the Lord loveth *justice,
And forsaketh not his saints.

^a Heb. borroweth the ungodly.

^b נָבֵר, a man, or a strong man: this word always signifies some excellence of mind or body, among the more ancient Hebrew writers.

^c Heb. for a blessing.

16. [ג.]

For^a ever they are preserved:
 But the seed of the ungodly shall be cut off.
 The righteous shall inherit the earth,
 And shall dwell for ever in it.

17. ד.

The mouth of the righteous^b will speak of wisdom,
 And his tongue will talk of judgment:
 The law of his God is in his heart:
 And^c his goings shall not be * moved.

18. ז.

The^d ungodly is watching for the righteous,
 And seeking to slay him:
 The LORD will not leave him in his hand,
 Nor condemn him when he is judged.

19. ח.

Hope in the LORD, and keep his way,
 And he will exalt thee to inherit the earth:
 When^e the ungodly are cut off, thou shalt see it.

^a This stanza does not begin with the letter ג in the Heb. But Dr. Kennicott places the ל in לעולם in brackets; intimating that the word should be עולם, which is probable. If so, however, the ל was inserted before the LXX was translated; since the reading there is εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα. But it is to be remarked, that the English Psalter, after the words "for ever they are preserved," reads "the unrighteous shall be punished," following the LXX reading, ἀνομοὶ ἔτι ἐκδικηθήσονται (the line "and the seed of the ungodly &c.," following). Rosenmüller and Dathe agree with Cappellus and Houligant in conjecturing that the words עוילים שמרו have fallen out of the Heb. text, and that these formed the first line of the stanza: a conjecture confirmed by Symmachus's reading: οἱ δὲ ἄνομοι ἐξαρθήσονται. The Vulgate reads "injusti punientur." The reading however is obelized by Origen: and indeed from its great resemblance to the second line of this stanza, one or other would seem to be redundant. The parallelism is more perfect according to the Heb. text. I hold to Dr. Kennicott's view.

^b Or, meditate: יהגה μελετήσει LXX.

^c Heb. shall not be moved his goings.

^d Heb. is watching the ungodly.

^e Heb. at the cutting off of the ungodly.

20. ג.

I have seen the ungodly in great power ^a,
 And spreading himself like a tree that is green :
 Then ^b I went by, and behold, he was not,
 And I sought for him, and he was not to be found.

21. ש.

Keep perfectness, and behold uprightness :
 For the end thereof to a man is peace.
 But the transgressors shall be destroyed together :
 The end of the wicked is, that they are cut off.

22. ח.

[But] ^c the salvation of the righteous is from the LORD :
 Their strength in the time of trouble.
 And ^d the LORD shall help them, and *rescue them,
 He shall rescue them from the ungodly,
 And shall save them, because they seek *refuge in him. ^e

^a Heb. terrible, ערִיץ.

^b So the English Psalter and the LXX. read, and so the context requires. (Compare Psalm cxix. 8.) But the English Bible, and all existing Heb. MSS. read "he passed away," יעבר.

^c The ו of this stanza is obviously redundant: and though found in the LXX, is wanting in three of Kennicott's copies, and one of De Rossi's.

^d Heb. and shall help them the Lord.

^e It is to be observed, that this Psalm, like the 23d and 34th (which are also alphabetical), has a redundant line, expressing future salvation and redemption. This uniformity of design vindicates the last line of Ps. xxv. from being an insertion of later times.

PSALM XXXVIII.

A Psalm of David: to bring to remembrance.

I.

O LORD, in^a thine anger rebuke me not:
 Neither in thy hot displeasure chasten me.
 For thine arrows press sore on me,
 Yea, thou dost press sore on me thine hand.^b
 No health is there in my flesh, by reason of thy wrath:
 No peace in my bones, by reason of my sin.
 For mine iniquities are gone over my head:
 Like a burthen that is heavy are they heavy unto me.
 My^c wounds stink, they are corrupt,
 By reason of my foolishness.
 I^d am * distorted, I am bowed down greatly:
 All the day long mourning do I go.
 For my loins are filled with a sore disease:
 And there is no * health in my flesh:
 I am enfeebled, and broken* greatly:
 I have roared, from the disquietness of my heart.

II.

LORD, before thee are all my desires;
 And my groaning from thee is not hidden.
 My heart panteth, my strength * hath forsaken me:^e
 And the light of mine eyes, even that is not with me.
 My lovers and my friends^f looking on my * plague^g do stand,
 Yea, my kinsmen afar off do stand.

^a Heb. not in thy foaming wrath, בְּקַעַף, rebuke me.

^b So the LXX, ἐπιστήμις.

^c Heb. stink my wounds.

^d "Wried" is the marginal rendering in the English Bible: but this, being an obscure word, an equivalent is here given.

^e Hath forsaken me my strength.

 And they that render evil for good are mine adversaries :
 Because I follow the thing that is good.

PSALM XXXIX.

To the Chief Musician : to Jeduthun. A Psalm of David.

I.

I said, I will^a take heed to my ways,
That^b I sin not in my tongue.
I will keep my mouth with a bridle,
While the ungodly is before me.

I was dumb with silence :
I held my peace, even from good :
And my pain was stirred.^c

My^d heart was hot within me :
While I was musing, the fire kindled ;
I spake with my tongue.

Make me to know, O LORD, mine end,
And the measure of my days, what it is,
That I may know how *short lived am I.

Behold, a span-long thou hast made my days :
And my * short life is as nothing before thee :
Surely * altogether vanity is every man living.^e

SELAH.

^a Heb. will keep.

^b Heb. from sinning.

^c That is, was exasperated, was renewed. This word, נִעְנַר, occurs only here, and in Prov. xv. 6. This would seem a presumption for Solomon's authorship, particularly when taken in connection with הַבֵּל, "vanity," the burthen of this Psalm and of Ecclesiastes. But against this militate the internal evidence of David's authorship, the title, and the connection with circumjacent Psalms, unquestionably his. The styles of father and son, however, were naturally similar.

^d Heb. was hot my heart.

^e Heb. surely all vanity is all mankind living.

II.

Surely * in a shadow ^a man doth walk :
 Surely in vain are they disquieted :
 He heapeth up, and knoweth not who shall gather.^b

And now, what is my hope ?
 O LORD, my * waiting is even for thee.^c
 From all my transgressions deliver me ;
 The reproach of the foolish make me not.

I was dumb, I opened not my mouth :
 For it was thou who didst it.
 Remove from me thy plague :
 By the blow of thy hand I am even consumed.

When thou with rebukes for iniquity dost chasten man,
 Thou * destroyest, as a moth, his beauty :

* Surely vanity is every man.

PSALM XL.

To the Chief Musician. Of David. A Psalm.

I.

In * hoping * I hoped for the LORD:
 And he inclined unto me, and heard my cry.
 And he brought me out of the pit of noise,
 Out of the mire of clay,
 And set upon the * stony rock my feet, ordering my goings.
 And he hath put in my mouth a song that is new,
 Even praise to our God.

Many ^a shall see, and shall fear,
 And shall trust in the LORD.

Happy * the man, who maketh the LORD his trust:
 And * looketh not unto the proud, and to those who go about with lying.

Many things hast thou done, even thou, O LORD our God;
 Thy wonders and thy thoughts which are to usward
 No man can set in order before thee.
 I ^b would declare them; and I would speak of them
 They are ^c more than can be numbered.

Burnt-offering and sin-offering thou didst not require:

Then I said, Lo I come,

^c Heb. are too strong.

^d The difference between the Heb and the Septuagint, as given by St. Paul, Heb. x. 5. "a body hast thou prepared me," is well known. The received Heb. reading, followed by both our translations, is very obscure, and puts a forced meaning upon this verb כָּרַה. Dr. Kennicott, Dissert. gener. § 18. [5.], considers the LXX, or true reading to have been, אָזְנוֹה, osōma cē, instead of אֹזְנוֹה. In a certain Syriac MS. instead of אֹזְנוֹה, "ears," is read פִּנְיָה. "body."

To do thy will, O God, I desire:
And thy law is within my * reins.

I ^a have * published righteousness in the great congregation: ^b
Lo, my lips I will not restrain, O LORD;
Thou thyself dost know.

Thy righteousness I have not hid within my heart:
Of thy truth and thy salvation I have spoken:
I have not concealed thy mercy and thy truth from the great congregation. ^c

Thou, O LORD, restrain not thy loving kindness from me:
Let thy mercy and thy truth continually preserve me.

III.

For there are compassing me evils without number:
Mine ^d iniquities have taken hold on me, and I am not able to

They are more than the hairs of my head:
And my heart hath forsaken me.

Let them be driven back and confounded, that * desire my

Let those rejoice and be glad in thee, all they that seek thee:
Let them say continually, The LORD be magnified: ^f
Even those who love thy salvation.

The LORD will * keep him, and give him life:
He shall be happy upon earth:
And thou wilt not * give him over to the ^a will of his enemies.
The LORD will preserve him upon the couch of languishing:
All his bed thou shalt make in his sickness.

II.

As for me, I said, O LORD, * be gracious to me :
Heal my soul, for I have sinned against thee.
Mine enemies speak evil of me:
When shall he die, and his name perish? ^b
And if he come to see me, vanity he speaketh:
His heart gathereth iniquity to itself:

PART II.

PSALM XLII. TO LXXII. INCLUSIVE.

† PSALMS XLII and XLIII.

To the Chief Musician. Maschil of the Sons of Korah.

I.

As the hart *longeth for the brooks of waters,
 So my soul longeth for thee, O God.
 My^a soul is athirst for God, for the God of life :
 When shall I come and appear before the presence of God ?
 My^b tears have been meat to me day and night,
 While they say unto me all the day, Where is thy God ?
 These things I remember, and I pour out within me my soul :
 For^c I would go with the multitude :^d
 I would go^e forth into the house of God, [holiday.
 In the voice of joy and praise of the multitude keeping
 Why art thou cast down, O my soul ?
 And art disquieted within me ?
 Wait* thou for God : for I will yet praise him,
 The *salvation of my countenance, and my God.^f

† Both these Psalms form but one in 38 of Kennicott's, and in many of De Rossi's, copies. The LXX title of the xliii (forming here the 3d division) is a modern interpolation.

^a Heb. is athirst my soul.

^b Heb. have been to me my tears.

^c Heb. I will go.

^d סֶךְ ; Dathe remarks almost all ancient interpreters render this word "a tabernacle." I am inclined to think this right.

^e This is a very obscure line, the first word, אֲדַרְכֵּם, being very uncertain in its meaning ; if, indeed, it be the correct reading. The LXX connect it with the preceding word, here reading אֲדַרְכֵּם, and making the word here translated "multitudes" mean "tabernacle," so that their interpretation is, "I will go into the glorious tabernacle, even to the house of God." The received reading is here followed, but Bishop Horsley, in his learned note, shows that the construction of the word אֲדַרְכֵּם (though defended by Glassius), is altogether anomalous. Dr. Hammond gives the interpretation of Abu Walid, and R. Tanchum, "I caused them to go," which seems the most consistent reading.

^f Both our translations read "his countenance." The present division

II.

Within me my soul is cast down :
 Therefore will I remember thee from the land of Jordan,
 And of the Hermonites, from the hill of Mizar.^a
 Deep unto deep calleth, at the * voice of thy waterspouts ;
 All thy * breakers^b and thy billows over me have gone.
 In the day the^c LORD will command his mercy :
 And in the night his song shall be with me,
 A prayer to the God of my life. [me ?
 I will say to God, my stony rock, Why hast thou forgotten
 Why in mourning do I go, because of the oppression of the enemy ?
 As with a sword in my bones^d my * persecutors reproach me,
 While they say unto me all the day, Where is thy God ?
 Why art thou cast down, O my soul ?
 And why art thou disquieted within me ?
 Wait* thou for God: for I will yet praise him,
 The *salvation of my countenance, and my God.

III.

Judge me, O God, and plead my^e cause against a people without mercy ;
 From the man of deceit and iniquity deliver me. [me off ?
 For Thou art the God of my strength: Why hast thou cast and reading is supported by the LXX and the Syriac, and by two or four of Kennicott's copies. It is most consonant with the parallelism of the Psalm.

^a Dr. Lightfoot observes that Mizar is the same as Zoar, near the extreme part of Jordan close to the Salt Sea. David went towards Hermon when flying from Absalom, towards Zoar or Mizar, in an opposite direction, when flying from Saul. 1 Sam. xxii. 3., Chorogr. Inquiry, c. iii. § 7. But see an ingenious interpretation, (which it would be out of place here to analyze,) in Mr. Vernon Harcourt's very learned Doctrine of the Deluge, vol. ii. p. 381.

^b This is literal: breakers and rollers. Bishop Horsley translates the words as in the present work. Thus we have the waters from above, the great deep beneath, the rolling waves, and the waves breaking against the rocks.

^c Heb. will command the Lord.

^d Heb. reproach me my persecutors.

^e Heb. pleading.

Why in mourning do I go, because of the oppression of the enemy? [lead me:

O send forth thy light and thy truth: they, even they shall They shall bring me unto the hill of thy holiness, and unto thy tabernacles.^a

And I will go unto the altar of God,

Unto God, the gladness of my joy:

And I will give thanks to thee upon the harp, O God, my God.

Why art thou cast down, O my soul?

And why art thou disquieted within me?

Wait* thou for God: for I will yet praise him,

The *salvation of my countenance, and my God.

^a This would make the LXX rendering of $\gamma\delta$ ("a tabernacle") in the first part more probable.

To the Chief Musician. Maschil of the Sons of Korah.

It was Thou: thine hand the heathen did^a drive out, and

Through thy Name will we tread them under that rise up

For not in my bow will I trust:

For^e thou hast saved us from * them that trouble us,

And them that hate us thou hast put to shame.

In God we boast all the day,

And thy Name for ever we praise.

1.

But thou hast cast us off, and puttest us to confusion,
 And goest not forth with our *hosts.
 Thou makest us to turn back from *him that troubleth us,
 And they which hate us take spoil for themselves.^a
 Thou hast given us, like sheep, for meat,
 And among the heathen thou hast scattered us.
 Thou sellest thy people for nought,
 And dost not make increase by their price.
 Thou makest us a reproach to our neighbours,
 A scorn and derision to them that are round about us.
 Thou makest us a bye-word among the heathen,
 A shaking of the head among the nations.
 All day my confusion is before me;
 And the shame of my face hath covered me;
 For the voice of him that reproacheth and blasphemeth,
 By^b reason of the enemy and avenger.

All this is come upon us: yet we do not forget thee,
 Nor behave falsely in thy Covenant.
 Our^c heart is not turned back,
 Neither^d have our steps gone out of thy way:
 Though thou hast * shattered us in the place of dragons,^e
 And covered us with the shadow of death.

^a Our Prayer Book reads לָנוּ (instead of לָמוֹ,) with four of Kennicott's copies.

^b The rendering of מַפְנֵי by ἀπὸ προσώπου seems preferable: though doubtless the word is often used in the meaning given in the text. Vide Ps. 38. 4.

^c Heb. is not turned back our heart.

^d Heb. nor declined our steps.

^e מַחֲרָבִים. This word is used six times by Isaiah, six times by Jeremiah, twice in Job, rarely in other books. In the book of Psalms it occurs in the 72d, 89th, and 47th.

3.

If we have forgotten the Name of our God,
Or stretched out our hands to a god that is strange,
Then shall not God search out this?
For it is He who knoweth the secrets of the heart.
Yea, for thy sake are we killed all the day;
We are counted as sheep for the slaughter.

4.

Up, why sleepest thou, O Lord?
Awake, cast us not off for ever.
Wherefore thy face dost thou hide,
Dost thou forget our affliction and oppression?
For our soul^a is bowed to the dust,
Our^b belly cleaveth unto the ground.
Arise for a help unto us;
And redeem us, for the sake of thy mercy.

^a Heb. is bowed to the dust our soul.

^b Heb. cleaveth to the ground our belly.

PSALM XLIX.

To the Chief Musician. A Psalm of the Sons of Korah.

1.

O hear ye this, all ye people :
 Give ear, all ye that dwell in the world :
 Sons * of Adam, and * sons of men,
 Rich ^a and poor together.
 My mouth shall speak of Wisdom ^b,
 And the meditations of my heart shall be Understanding.
 I will incline to a parable mine ear :
 I will open upon the harp my dark saying.

Wherefore should I fear in the days of wickedness,
When the iniquity of * those ^c who would supplant me compasseth me about ?
 Some ^d men trust in their wealth,
 And in the multitude of their riches boast themselves :
 But a brother no man can * by any redemption redeem : ^e
 He cannot give to God a ransom for him :
 [For precious is the redemption of their soul,
 And ^f he ceaseth to be for ever,]—
 Though ^g he may still live long,
Though he see not corruption.
 For ^h he seeth that wise men die,

^a Heb. together rich and poor

^b "Wisdom" and "Understanding" are both in the plural.

^c ^{אֲדָמָה}, so it is rendered by Bishops Lowth and Horne, and Mr. Parkhurst. The LXX give the same sense as in our translation.

^d If the foregoing meaning is right, this passage may be rendered, "even of those who trust," &c.

^e Heb. a brother shall not redeeming redeem a man.

^f Dr. Kennicott's meaning is here adopted.

^g Heb. and.

^h Or, "one sees," experience shows.

Both the foolish and brutish perish,
 And leave, to those who come after, their wealth.
 Their ^ainward thought is, that their houses shall be for ever :
 Their dwelling places from generation to generation :
 They ^bcall after their own names the lands.

But man that is in honour shall not abide :
 He is like unto the beasts that perish.^c
 This their way is folly to them :
 Yet those that come after of their sayings approve.

SELAH.

II.

Like ^dsheep in the hell they lie :

 And their ^fbeauty shall consume :

^a "Their inward thought is," &c. The LXX has τάφτοι, reading קברים for קרנם. "And their tombs are their houses for ever." The Syriac, Vulgate, Arabic, and Chaldee read the same. This reading seems plausible: apparently an allusion to the magnificent monuments of Egypt, &c.: but our received reading and translation are supported by Psalm lxii. 4.

^b Heb. they call in their own names on the lands.

^c Heb. are dumb, נדמו avoirois.

^d "Like sheep in the hell," &c. It is worth while here to note Dr. Kennicott's note on this passage, to show into what absurdities a learned ingenuity may sometimes betray even the soundest critics. "Like cattle do they advance to the grave: Death is their Shepherd; and they go down. In straight rows to his flock he fasteneth them: till the grave cease from being a habitation to them." ירעם he renders, with the LXX, "is their Shepherd:" a meaning the word will bear. יררו the same, taking the root ירר, while our translators take רדה. But the rest is all forced. Instead of בם ישרים, "upon them the righteous," he reads במישרים something made straight: but not necessarily "straight rows." לבקר "to his herd," instead of "in the morning." For וצירם he reads, without authority, יצירם "he fastens them." And instead of translating לבלות שאול for the destruction of the grave, he renders these words, till the ceasing of the grave; an utterly constrained meaning.

^e Heb. shall have dominion over them the righteous.

^f Heb. their strength shall be for destruction.

Hell shall be a dwelling to them.

But ^a God shall redeem my soul from the hand of hell :

For ^b he shall receive me.

SELAH.

Yet ^hshe shall go to the generation of his fathers,
They shall not ^{*}for a long time see light.

Man that is in honour, and understandeth not,

^b "He" is not emphatic here, as it is not found in the Hebrew.

^c Heb. be made rich a man.

^d Heb. be increased the glory.

^e Heb. receive all.

^f Heb. shall not descend after him his glory.

PSALM L.

A Psalm of Asaph.

I.

The * God ^a of Gods, the LORD hath spoken, and called the earth

From the rising of the sun, unto the going down thereof.

Out of Sion, the ^b perfection of beauty, God hath shined.

He shall come, even our God, and shall not keep silence :

A fire before him shall devour :

And round about him shall be a mighty tempest.^c

He shall call to the heavens from above,

And to the earth, that he may judge his people :

“ Gather unto me my saints,

“ Those that have covenanted with me with sacrifice.”

And the heavens shall declare his righteousness,

For God is Judge^d himself.

SELAII.

II.

Hear, O my people, and I will speak ;

O Israel, and I will testify unto thee :

God, even thy God am I.

Not for thy sacrifices will I reprove thee :

For thy burnt offerings are before me continually.^e

^a So the LXX.

^b The LXX takes הוֹפִיעַ (hath shined), in connection with יָבֹא in the next line, ὁ Θεὸς ἐμφανῶς ἦξει. If it were translated “ From Sion is the perfection of beauty : God hath shined,” &c., the construction would be apparently more consistent.

^c Heb. there shall be a tempest, נִשְׁעָרָה mightily.

^d לָרִין, “ Judge,” in line 12. is שָׁפֵט.

^e וְ is here rendered “ for,” and the sense of the LXX, the most literal, is adopted.

I will not take out of thy house a bullock,
Nor out of thy folds the he-goats.
 For mine is every beast of the forest,
 The cattle upon a thousand hills : ^a
 I know every fowl of the * hills,
 And the wild beast of the field is * before me.
 If I be hungry, I will not tell thee :
 For mine is the world, and the fulness thereof.
 Will I eat the flesh of bulls,
 And the blood of goats will I drink ?
 Sacrifice * unto God thanksgiving,
 And perform to the Most High thy vows :
 And call on me in the day of trouble :
 I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glorify me. ^b

But unto the ungodly saith God,
 What is it to thee to declare my statutes,
 Or to take my Covenant into thy mouth ?
 For it is thou who hatest instruction, ^c
 And castest my words behind thee ?
 If thou seest a thief, then thou consentest unto him,
 And with adulterers is thy portion.
 Thy mouth thou ^dgivest to wickedness,
 And ^ethy tongue frameth deceit.
 Thou sittest : against thy brother thou speakest ;
 Against the son of thy mother thou settest forth slander.
 These things thou hast done ; and I kept silence ;
 Thou thoughtest, that I ^f am altogether as thyself :
 I will reprove thee, and set them in order before thine eyes.

Consider now, ye that forget God,

^a Heb. ¹hills thousand : the LXX and the Syriac render אֶלֶף oxen.

^b Here a Diapsalma occurs in the LXX. Though a modern interpolation, it occurs in a very appropriate place.

^c Discipline : παιδείαν, מוסר.

^d Or, "employest in."

^e Or, "And (with) thy tongue thou framest."

^f Heb. "being I am," היות אהיה : the Prayer Book reads הוות (wickedness) with the LXX.

Lest I tear in pieces, and there be none to deliver.
He that *sacrificeth praise, honoureth me :
And he that ordereth his way,
To ^ahim will I shew the salvation of God.

^a Or rather, "To him shall I be shewn."

PSALM LI.†

To the Chief Musician. A Psalm of David. When Nathan the Prophet came to him, after he had gone in to Bathsheba.

I.

Have mercy upon me, O God, according to thy *mercy :
According to the multitude of thy loving kindnesses blot out my transgressions :

Thoroughly wash me from mine iniquity :

And from my sin cleanse me.

For my transgressions ^aI do acknowledge,

And my sin is before me continually.

Against thee, against thee only, have I sinned,

And this wickedness in thy sight have I done,

That thou mightest be justified in thy saying,

That thou mightest be clear when thou judgest.

Behold, in iniquity I was shapen,

And in sin ^bhath my mother conceived me :

Behold, truth thou desirest in the inward parts,

And in the hidden part wisdom thou shalt make me know.

Thou shalt ^cpurge me with hyssop, and I shall be clean :

Thou shalt wash me, and than snow I shall be whiter.

Thou shalt make me to hear of joy and gladness,

They shall rejoice, the bones which thou hast *bruised.

Hide thy face from my sins :

And all mine iniquities blot out.

A heart that is clean create in me O God,

† חטא, "Sin," is the characteristic word of this Psalm.

נינ emphatic.

^b Heb. hath conceived me my mother.

 Cast me not away from thy *face:
 And thy Spirit of holiness take not from me.

 And with the spirit of freedom uphold me.

II.

I will teach transgressors thy ways:
 And sinners to thee shall *return.
 Deliver me from blood guiltiness, O God,
 O God of my salvation:
 My ^atongue shall sing of thy righteousness.
 O LORD, my lips thou shalt open,
 And my mouth shall shew forth thy praise.

For thou hast no *pleasure in sacrifice, that I should give it:
 In burnt offering thou delightest not.
 The sacrifice of God is a spirit that is broken: [despise.
 A heart that is broken and *bruised, O God, thou wilt not Do good in thy pleasure to Sion:
 Thou shalt build the walls of Jerusalem. [ness,
 Then shalt thou have pleasure in the sacrifices of righteous-
 In burnt offering and oblation;^c

PSALM LII.

To the Chief Musician, Maschil of David: when Doeg the Edomite came and told Saul, and said unto him, David is come to the house of Abimelech.

I.

Why boastest thou thyself in *evil, O thou mighty man?
 The ^amercy of God endureth all day long.

PSALM LV.

To the Chief Musician on Neginoth. Maschil of David.

Give ear, O God, to my prayer,
And hide not thyself from my supplication.
Take heed unto me, and hear me ;
I ^amourn in my complaint, and am vexed ;^b

2.

For the voice of the enemy,
Because of the oppression of the ungodly ;
For they ^ccast upon me mischief,
And in wrath they hate me.

3.

My heart is sore pained within me,
And the terrors of death are fallen upon me.
Fearfulness and trembling are come upon me,
And ^dhorrors have overwhelmed me.

 Destroy, O LORD, divide their tongues, [the tempest.
 For I have seen violence and strife in the city.
 Day and night they go about it in the walls thereof,
 And ^{}iniquity and ^{}sorrow are in the midst thereof:
 Mischiefs^{*} are in the midst thereof,
 And ^bdeceit and guile depart not from the streets thereof.

For it was not an enemy that reproached me,
 Then I could have borne it :
It was not an adversary that magnified himself :
 Then I could have hid myself from him.
 But thou, a man mine equal,^c

 For we ^dtook together sweet counsel :
 In the house of God we walked in company.

As for me, upon God will I call,
 And the LORD shall save me. [cry aloud,
 Evening, and morning, and noon-day, will I ^{*}complain, and
 And he shall hear my voice.

^a Escape to me. The LXX reads, προσέχούμην τὸν σώζοντά με ἀπὸ ὀλιγοψυχίας καὶ καταγίδος. "I waited for him that saveth me" &c., i. e. אהילה for אהיטה: which is also the reading of the Syriac, and two of Kennicott's MSS. The second word may mean either an escape, or one who causes one to escape. This rendering of the LXX makes the function of Selah more obvious. The impatience, expressed in the preceding line, is subdued: he has waited in faith for the divine rescue.

^b Heb. and depart not from the streets thereof deceit and guile.

To the Chief Musician upon Jonath elem rechokim. Mich-

I.

Against me all their imaginings are for evil.
They gather together :^f they hide themselves :
Yea they mark my steps,^g when they wait for my soul.
Shall there be escape for them through iniquity ?
In thine anger thou shalt cast them down, O God.
My wanderings thou tellest, even thou :
Put my tears into thy bottle :
Are not they in thy book ?^h

^a Heb. would swallow me up man.

^b The word is not עליון, but מרום. It would seem that the LXX is right : ἀπὸ ὑψους.

^c אני, emphatic.

^d Heb. what can do flesh unto me.

^c In the Septuagint, the Diapsalma here occurs: apparently dividing the sense better. Still, though the last two lines are parallel with the first of the next division, the Heb. reading (preserved in our translation) appears to be the true one: in the exordium the action is future; here it is begun.

^d Heb. shall send forth God.

PSALM LVIII.

To the Chief Musician. Al Taschith. Michtam of David.

I.

Do ye, O ye congregation,^a of righteousness speak :
 Do ye uprightly judge, O sons of men ?
 Yea, in your heart wickedness ye work :
 On the earth in violence with your hands ye deal.^b
 The wicked are estranged^c even from the womb :
 They go astray, as soon as they are born, speaking lies.
 Their poison is like unto the poison of a serpent,
 Like the adder that is deaf, which stoppeth her ears,
 Which will not hearken to the voice of the charmers,
Of him that *enchanteth with *enchantments wisely.

 Both livingⁱ and in his wrath^j his whirlwind shall seize them.

^a אֱלֹהִים is a very difficult word. The LXX probably is right : ἀπα.

^b weigh, or devise.

^c Heb. are estranged the wicked.

^d "Great teeth." Bible translation, "grinders."

^e Heb. to themselves, לָמָן.

^f Heb. (as if) they cut themselves to pieces.

^g Heb. before can feel your pots.

^h Heb. can feel your pots, יִבְיִנוּ, distinguish, discern, understand.

ⁱ This is the English Bible translation of this very obscure passage.

I would agree with those who render it "both the green and the dry he shall take away." Confer Ezek. xxi. 3., where the idea is the same, though the terms employed are different. Compare, in the last line but one, the contrary condition of the righteous, who shall bear fruit.

^j But one word in Hebrew.

His footsteps shall he wash in the blood of the ungodly.

MSS., I read עָזִי. The passage is literally "his strength for thee will I keep;" which might mean "I will leave his ungodly violence to be dealt with by thee." But this is forced; τὸ κράτος μου πρὸς σὺ φηλάξω is the LXX. Were there any authority for אֲזַמְרָה, instead of אִישְׁמְרָה, I would read it, with the Syriac, Michaelis, Døderlin, and Koehler.

A Psalm of David, when he was in the wilderness of Judea.

O God, my God art thou :
I will seek thee early :
My ^asoul thirsteth for thee :
My ^bflesh longeth after thee,
In a land of drought and barrenness,
Where no water is.

2.

For better is thy *mercy than life.
My lips shall *boast of thee :
Thus will I bless thee while I live :
In thy Name will I lift up my hands.
As with marrow and fatness my soul shall be satisfied ;^d
And with lips that *sing for joy my mouth shall give praise.^e

When I remember thee in my bed,
In the night watches I meditate on thee.
For thou hast been a help to me,

^j Our translation of the line "till every one," &c., is not borne out by any authority. The verb itself is in Hithpahel, and signifies in Kal, to trample on. Bythner and Bp. But the verb is not plural, and therefore Mr. Parkhurst makes it agree with אֱלֹהִים. Bp. Lowth, in his notes on Prael. vi., rightly observes, that the verb is here distributive, and signifies "each one," which answers Mr. Parkhurst's objection: and understands this to mean "the beasts of the reed disturbing the silver stream:" (רִיץ from רִצִּי, Arab.: potum præbere,) i.e. the Jewish people. But he adds another interpretation, which corresponds to that of Bp. Horne and others: "the beast of the reeds," i.e. the Egyptians, worshippers of bulls and calves: רַפֵּס is those who "ad saltandum se excitant:" the word being only read in one other place besides this: Prov. vi. 3., ("festina," or "se excita;") and the pieces of silver are the "sistra." Dathe objects that the Egyptians were at peace with David; and that the "beast of the reeds" was a lion: i.e. the King of Syria. But these objections seem frivolous: Egypt was always the subject of prophecy.

^c Heb. no help to him.

^d The evangelical grain of mustard seed.

^e Heb. shall shake like Lebanon his fruit.

^f Heb. shall be his Name.

^h Heb. and shall be filled all the earth.

THE BOOK OF PSALMS.

PART III.

PSALM LXXIII. TO LXXXIX. INCLUSIVE.

PSALM LXXIII.

A Psalm of Asaph.

I.

Truly God is good to Israel:^a

Even to the clean of heart.

But as for me, almost gone were my feet,

Well nigh slipt had my steps.

For I was envious at the foolish;^b

The prosperity of the ungodly I beheld.

For they are in no *terror of death,^c

And firm is their strength:

In trouble like other folk they are not,

And as other men^d they are not plagued.

Therefore^e pride^f encompasseth them,

^a Heb. truly good to Israel is God. This order is not observed, to avoid the ambiguity of the phrase: "truly" might then seem to belong to "good," according to the English idiom.

^b Heb. the insolent: הוֹלָלִים.

^c The paraphrase of the Prayer Book version of this very obscure passage is here followed: the word הַרְצָבוֹת, here rendered "terror," occurs only once besides this passage: viz. in Isaiah, lviii. 6. Parkhurst gives, with approbation, Bates's explanation of the passage, with which Moerlius coincides. "For there are no difficulties (literally, "knots") to them; their strength is perfect and firm." He thus reads, instead of לְמוֹתָם, "to their death," לָמוֹתָם: "to them, perfect," &c. The latter division of the words, as Mr. Parkhurst remarks, is in Kennicott's text; and this, I am disposed to think, is the correct reading. The Prayer Book reads both מוֹתָם, and תָּם: "of death: they are lusty and strong." The Septuagint renders it οὐκ ἔστιν ἀνάρεσις ἐν τῇ θανάτῳ αὐτῶν. "Non sunt contorsiones usque ad mori ipsius."—Rosenm. Jarchi renders the word in dispute "terrores," which our Psalter somewhat similarly renders by "peril." The Chaldee agrees with Jarchi. Perhaps it may mean "there are no bands to them; they are free to run their own course."

^d Heb. with mankind.

^e Heb. encompassed them pride.

^f Encompasses, as a chain does the neck.

As the covering of a garment is cruelty to them:^a
 Their eyes swell out^b out with fatness,
 They have more than the wishes of the heart.^c

They are corrupt, and speak of ^{*}evil,
 Of oppression loftily do they speak.^d
 They have^e stretched unto the heavens their mouth,
 And their tongue goeth through the earth.
 Therefore^f his people turn unto them :
 And waters of fulness are wrung out to them.^g
 And they say, How doth God know?^h
 And is there indeed knowledge in the Most High?ⁱ

Behold, these are the ungodly ;
 And they who prosper^{*} for ever;^j
 They increase^k in riches :
 Truly in vain have I cleansed my heart,
 And have washed in innocency my hands !
 For I have^l indeed been plagued all the day,
 And my chastening hath been every morning.
 If I should say, I will speak even as they,
 Behold, the generation of thy children I should offend.^m it.

And I thought to know this :
 A ^{*}trouble it was in mine eyes :

^a Heb. covereth as a garment cruelty them.

^b Heb. swell out their eyes : literally, "stand out."

^c Heb. they overpass.

^d The LXX is here followed : ἀδικίαν εἰς τὸ ἕψος ἐλάλησαν.

^e Heb. set in the heavens.

^f Heb. The Septuagint reads "my people," which seems the better reading.

^g Or rather, "shall be found by them," as the Septuagint reads ἡμεῖς for ימצא, which reading is found in 3 of Kennicott's copies.

^h Heb. knoweth God.

ⁱ יי, emphatic.

^j עולם is rendered in both our translations as "saculum," in this world ; but in the LXX as here.

^k Luxuriate

^l ואתי, emphatic.

^m Contemn.

Until I went into the Sanctuary of God,
Then I understood their end.

Truly in slippery places thou dost set them,
 Thou *makest them fall into destruction.^a
 Oh how are they brought to desolation, as in a moment !
 They perish,^b they are consumed with terrors !^c
 As a dream, when one awaketh, [vanish.^d
 So, O LORD, from the City their image thou shalt make to

Thus^e my heart was grieved,^f
 And in my reins I was pricked :
 And I myself was *brutish, and did not know :^g
 As a beast^h was I before thee.

III.

But as for me, I am continually by thee :
 Thou holdest me by thy right hand.ⁱ
 With thy counsel thou shalt lead me,
 And afterwards with glory thou shalt receive me.
 Who is there for me in heaven but thee ?
 And besides thee I have no desire on earth.

My flesh and my heart faileth :^j
 The strength of my heart and my portion is God for ever.
 For behold, they that are far from thee shall perish :
 Thou hast *cut off every one that committeth fornication against thee.
 But as for me, to draw near to God is good for me :^k

^a Heb. destructions.

^b This is like the abrupt style of Psalm xlviii. which was contemporaneous.

^c Heb. wastings : בלהות

^d " shalt despise : " Bible Translation.

^e Heb. for.

^f Heb. was grieved my heart.

^g Heb. know not.

^h Heb. beasts.

ⁱ Heb. hand right.

^j Heb. faileth my flesh and my heart.

^k Heb. for me is good.

I have put in the LORD^a God my * refuge :
That I may tell of all thy wonders
In the gates of the daughter of Sion.^b

^a Heb. the Lord the Lord.

^b This line does not occur in the Hebrew, Syriac, or English Bible Translation. It does in the English Psalter, and in the Septuagint, though obelized there. It appears, however, to be genuine: the conclusion of the Psalm would be otherwise abrupt; and the mention of the daughter of Sion is in the style of Isaiah, in whose time the present Psalm seems to have been written.

PSALM LXXIV.^a

Maschil of Asaph.

I.

Wherefore, O God, hast thou cast us off for ever?^b*Why* smoketh thy wrath against the sheep of thy pasture?

Remember the congregation, which thou hast purchased of old:

Thou hast redeemed the tribe^c of thine inheritance;

Mount Sion, wherein thou hast dwelt.

Lift up thy feet to the perpetual desolations^d [tuary.Of all that the enemy hath done wickedly^e in the Sanc-Thine adversaries roar^f in the midst of the congregation:They have set up their ensigns as signs.^g*A man was*^h famous according as he lifted upUpon the thicket of the trees his axe:ⁱ

But now the carved work thereof

Both with *hatchet and hammer they break down.

They have cast into the fire thy Sanctuary:

^a This Psalm is very much in Isaiah's style.^b לָנֶצַח, "for a long time," occurs again in line 22.^c This may either refer to the tribe of Levi, or that of Judah: probably the latter, Mount Sion being the royal habitation of Judah. It would then seem that this Psalm was written after the Israelitish Captivity, under Shalmaneser.^d The parallelism is indistinct, and the sense obscure. The Prayer Book is followed.^e Heb. hath done wickedly the enemy.^f Heb. roar thine adversaries.^g The two words have the same resemblance in the Hebrew. they are identical^h A very obscure and perhaps corrupt passage, elliptical, and in the parallelism imperfect. The LXX is utterly unintelligible, though the causes of the misconception are easy to be seen.ⁱ Heb. axes.

Even to the ground have they defiled^a the dwelling-place of thy Name. [together:

They have said in their hearts, We will ^b destroy them
They have burnt up all the houses of God in the land.

Our signs we see not:

There is no longer a prophet: [long this shall be.

Neither is there among us one who knoweth how

How long, O God, shall the ^cadversary reproach?
Shall the enemy blaspheme^d thy Name for ever?
Wherefore withdrawest thou thy hand,
And thy right hand within thy bosom dost thou hide?^e

II.

But God is my King of old:
Working salvation^f in the midst of the earth. [sea:^g
*It was Thou who didst break *asunder by thy strength the Thou didst *shatter the heads of the ^hdragons in the waters:
It was Thou who didst *crush the heads of Leviathan:
Thou gavest him for meat to the ⁱpeople of the wilderness:
It was Thou who didst cleave the fountain and the flood:
It was Thou who didst dry up rivers of might.
Thine is the day: thine also is the night:^j
It is Thou who hast prepared the light and the sun:*

^a Or, shattered: חללו

^b The LXX translates נִינִי by συγγένει αὐτῶν: deriving it from נִין, "a son."

^c Heb. reproach the adversary.

^d Heb. blaspheme the enemy.

^e The word כלה will not bear the translation of either Bible or Prayer Book, and it ought to be תכלה, or כליית. I strongly suspect it should be כלה, Selah. The Syriac does not translate it, as it hardly ever does Selah. It occurs exactly where Selah would be appropriate. One of Kennicott's MSS. reads it; the LXX translates it εἰς τέλος.

^f Heb. salvations.

^g This passage is in the style of Ps. lxxxix.

^h i.e. "Egypt:" vide Ps. lxxxix.

ⁱ Or, as Parkhurst conjectures, "the multitude of ravening beasts." See Isaiah's use of צִיִּים xxiii. 13.

^j Exactly in the style of Ps. lxxxix.

It is Thou who [†] has set all the borders^a of the earth :
Summer and winter, it is Thou who hast made them.

III.

Remember this, that the enemy hath reproached, O LORD :^b
 And the people of folly have blasphemed thy Name.

Deliver not to the ^cmultitude the soul of thy turtle-dove :

The ^{*d}multitude of thy poor forget not for ever.

Look upon the covenant : [tations of cruelty.

For full are the dark places of the earth of the habi-

O let not the oppressed go away ashamed :^e

Let the poor and needy praise thy Name.

Arise, O God, plead thine own cause ;^f

Remember how ^g the foolish man reproacheth thee all day.

Forget not the voice of thine ^{*}adversaries : [continually.

The ^{*}noise^h of those that rise up against thee ascendeth

^a Or, "bounds."

^b This last strain is like the two Epodes in Psalm lxxxix.

^{c, d} תַּחַת, the LXX translates τοῖς θηρίοις, which appears better.

^e Heb. let not go away the oppressed.

^f Heb. pleading.

^g Heb. thy reproaches from the foolish man.

^h So שִׁנְאָה is translated in both our versions in Ps. lxxv. 8.

PSALM LXXV.†

To the Chief Musician. Al Tashith. A Psalm of Asaph.

I.

We give thanks to thee, O God, we give thanks:
For ^anear is thy Name: ^bthy wonders do declare it.
When I receive the ^ccongregation, I in uprightness will judge.
The earth is dissolved, and all the inhabitants thereof:
I myself bear up the pillars of it.

SELAH.

II.

I said unto the ^dfools, Deal not foolishly,
And to the ungodly, *Exalt not the horn:
Exalt* not on high your horn:
Speak not with a stiff neck.^e

For not from the ^feast, nor from the west,
Nor from the south is *exaltation: ^g
For God is the Judge:
This one he putteth down, and that one he *exalteth.

† הרים (exalt), is the characteristic word of this Psalm.

^a The reading of the LXX, not obelized by Origen, is more consonant to the style of the Psalms: ἐξομολογησόμεθα σοι ὁ Θεός, ἐξομολογησόμεθα καὶ ἐπικαλεσόμεθα τὸ ὄνομά σου. διηγήσιναι τὰ θαυμάσια σου: instead of וקרוב בשמך אספר וקראנו בשמך אספר. With this reading the Syriac coincides; except that they read ספרנו instead of אספר. But it is unsupported by any existing MSS.

^b Heb. do declare thy wonders.

^c Dathe renders מועד, with Ludov. de Dieu and Schultens, “a promise:” the meaning of the word, as the latter says, in Arabic and Syriac.

^d Heb. scorners: הוללים.

^e Heb. neck stiff.

^f מוצא (sun) rising: a poetical phrase.

^g ὀρέων: LXX: thus giving a different meaning to the same word הרים.

For a cup is in the hand of the LORD, and the wine is red :
It is full of mixture, and he poureth out of the same :
But the dregs thereof, they shall wring them out,
They shall drink them, even all the ungodly of the earth.

But as for me, I will declare for ever,
I will *make a psalm to the God of Jacob :
And all the horns of the ungodly will I break :
The ^ahorns of the righteous shall be exalted.

^a Heb. shall be exalted the horns.

PSALM LXXVI.†

To the Chief Musician on Neginoth. A Psalm of Asaph.
A Song.

I.

Known in Judah is God:
In Israel great is his Name:
And in Salem^a is his tabernacle:
And his dwelling in Sion.
There brake he the arrows of the bow,
The shield, the sword, and the battle.

SELAH.

II.

More glorious art Thou,
More excellent than the hills of prey. [sleep:
They are spoiled, the stout of heart: they have slept their
And^b all the men of might have not found their hands.
At thy rebuke, O God of Jacob,
Are^c *entranced both chariot and horse.

Thou art to be feared, even thou:
And who may stand in thy sight at the time of thy wrath?

† ירא "fear," is the characteristic word of this Psalm.

^a שֶׁלֶם (Salem) is translated by the LXX, ἐν εἰρήνῃ, which shews their ignorance of the spirit of the Psalm, and makes for the supposition, that Alexandrian philologists, perhaps not even Jews, were the translators. They could have been but little versed in local allusions (which long absence from their parent country might have obliterated), or in the genius of sacred poetry, which obviously required a local antithesis to the two preceding proper names.

^b Perhaps the Prayer Book translation may be right. The LXX renders שָׁן by πλούτον.

^c The words "fallen into a deep sleep" are the translation of but one word in Hebrew, and therefore the above reading has been offered.

From heaven thou didst cause judgment to be heard:^a
 The earth feared, and was still,
 In the arising to judgment of God,
 To save all the meek of the earth.

SELAH.

III.

For the fierceness of man shall praise thee:
 The remnant of his fierceness shalt thou restrain.^b
 Vow, and pay to the LORD your God: [is to be feared.
 All ye that are round about him bring presents to him that
 He shall refrain the spirit of princes,
Even he that is to be *feared among the kings of the earth.

^a Heb. cause to be heard judgment.

^b The LXX reads ἐπράσσει σοι, reading תחנך for תחנך, which would better accord with the parallelism.

PSALM LXXVII.†

To the Chief Musician. ^aTo Jeduthun. A Psalm of Asaph.

I.

With my voice unto God I cried:^b
 My voice was unto God:
 And he gave ear unto me.
 In the day of my trouble the LORD I sought:
 My ^chand in the night was ^{*}stretched out, and ceased not:
 My ^dsoul refused to be comforted.
 I remembered God, and was disturbed:
 I ^{*}communed with myself, and my spirit was overwhelmed.^e

SELAH.

II.

Thou holdest the watches of mine eyes:
 I am troubled, and I cannot speak.
 I have considered the days of old,
 The years of ancient times:
 I call to remembrance my song in the night:
With my heart I commune, and search ^fout my spirit.
 Will ^gthe Lord for ever cast me off:

† זכר "remember," is the characteristic word of this Psalm.

^a Heb. on Jeduthun: על therefore would seem to refer to the instrument or subject, not to the author.

^b The LXX, Syriac, and both our translations reject ו before אצעהק, and also one of Kennicott's MSS.

^c So margin of Eng. Bibl.: יד never bears the sense of a "sore." Possibly its other meaning, a "side," might have suggested our authorised translation.

^d Heb. refused to be comforted my soul.

^e Heb. was overwhelmed my spirit.

^f So the Prayer Book and LXX: וואפשׂ for ויחפשׂ.

^g Heb. will for ever cast off the Lord.

And ^awill he not be favourable any more?
 Is ^bhis mercy gone for a ^{*}long time?
 Is ^chis promise come to an end for ever and ever?
 Hath ^dGod forgotten to be gracious?
 Hath he shut up in anger his loving kindness?

SELAH.

III.

Then ^eI said, Mine infirmity is this: [High.
But ^fI will remember the years of the right hand of the Most
 I will remember the doings of the LORD;
 Yea, I will remember thy wonders of old,^g
 And I will meditate on all thy works:
 And on thy doings I shall ^{*}commune.

O God, in holiness is thy way:
 What God is so great as God?
 Thou art the God that doest wonders:
 Thou hast ^{*}made known among the ^hpeople thy strength.
 Thou hast redeemed with thine arm thy people,
 The sons of Jacob and Joseph.

^b Heb. is gone for a long time his mercy.

^c Heb. is come to an end his promise.

^d Hath forgotten to be gracious God.

^e Heb. and I said.

^f The LXX renders שִׁנִּית by "changes;" also the Syriac and Chaldee:
 — "changes" from good to evil, or the contrary, "are from the hand of the Most High."

^g Heb. of old thy wonders.

^h Heb. peoples.

ⁱ Heb. saw thee the waters.

^j Heb. also tremble the depths.

^k Heb. poured out water the clouds.

The ^askies gave forth a ^{*}voice :
Thine ^barrows also went abroad.
The voice of thy thunder was round about : ^c
The ^dlightnings shone through the world :
The earth trembled and shook.

In the sea is thy way,
And thy paths in the great waters : ^e
And thy footsteps are not known.
Thou leddest like sheep thy people,
By the hand of Moses and Aaron.

^a Heb. a voice gave forth the skies.

^b Heb. also thine arrows.

^c Heb. in a whirlwind : הַצִּלְזִל is in this sense an ἀπ. λεγ.

^d Heb. shone the lightnings.

^e Heb. waters great.

PSALM LXXVIII.

Maschil of Asaph.

1.

Give ear, O my people, to my law :
 Incline your ears to the words of my mouth :
 I will open in a parable my mouth :
 I will utter * dark ^asayings of old,
 Which we have heard and known,
 And our fathers have declared to us.
 We will not hide them from their children ;
 To the generation to come * declaring the praises of the LORD,
 And his strength, and the wonders that he hath done.

For he established a testimony in Jacob,
 And a law he appointed in Israel,
 Which he commanded to our fathers,
 That they should make them known to their children ;
 To the intent that ^bthe generation to come might know them ;
 That the children who should be born might arise,
 And declare it to their children ;
 And that they might put in God their trust,^c
 And not forget the works of God,
 But that his commandments they might * observe,
 And that they might not be as their fathers,
 A generation faithless and rebellious,
 A generation that prepared not their heart,
 And whose spirit * believed not in God.
 The children of Ephraim, armed, ^dcarrying bows,
 Turned themselves back in the day of battle.

^a חִידוֹת : enigmas.^b Heb. might know the generation after.^c Strength : כֶּסֶל.^d Throwing forth : נִישָׁקִי : marg. Eng. Bibl.

They kept not the covenant of God,
 And in his law they refused to walk,
 And they forgot his works,
 And his wonders, which he had *made them see.

II.

In the sight of our fathers he did wonders,
 In the land of Egypt, the field of Zoan.
 He *clave the sea, and made them pass through,
 And he ^amade the waters to stand as an heap :
 And he led them with a cloud by day,
 And all the night with a light of fire.
 He clave the rocks in the wilderness,
 And he gave them drink, as out of the great depths :
 And he brought streams out of the stony rock,
 And made the waters to flow down as rivers.

Yet still ^bmore they sinned against him,
 By provoking the Most High in the *desert,
 And they tempted God in their hearts,
 By asking meat for their *soul.
 And they spake against God : they said,
 Can God prepare a table in the wilderness ?
 Behold, he smote the rock, and the waters gushed out ; ^c
 And the streams overflowed :
 Can ^dhe give bread also,
 Yea, ^ecan he provide flesh for his people ?

III.

Then ^fthe ^gLORD heard, and was wroth ;
 And a fire was kindled in Jacob,
 And ^hanger also came up in Israel.
 For they believed not in God,

^a Heb. made to stand the waters.

^b Heb. they added yet more to the sinning against him.

^c Heb. gushed out waters.

^d Heb. also bread can he give.

^e 𐤀𐤍𐤔.

^f Heb. heard the Lord.

^g לָכֵן, "wherefore:" Eng. Bibl.

^h Heb. and also anger.

And trusted not in his salvation.
 So he commanded the clouds from above,
 And the doors of heaven he opened :
 And he rained down upon them manna to eat,
 And the corn of heaven he gave them.
 The food of the mighty ones man did eat,^a
 Bread he sent them to the full.
 He ^b made the east wind to blow in heaven,
 And he brought in by his power the south wind :
 And he rained on them ^c flesh as the dust,
 And as the sand of the sea the fowl of wing :
 And he let it fall in the midst of their camp,
 Round about their habitations.
 And they did eat, and were filled exceedingly,
 And their own desire he gave them,^d
 They were not disappointed of their ^e desire.
 While ^e their meat was in their mouths.
 But the wrath of God came upon them,
 And slew the fattest of them,
 And the chosen men of Israel smote down.^f

For all this, they sinned still,
 And believed not his wonders ;
 So he consumed in ^g vanity their days,
 And their years in trouble.
 When he slew them, then they sought him,
 And turned back, and enquired early after God ;
 And they remembered that God was their Rock,
 And God the Most High their Redeemer.
 Yet they flattered him with their mouth,

^a Heb. did eat man.

^b Heb. he made to blow the east wind.

^c Heb. as the dust flesh.

^d Heb. brought them.

^e This is the arrangement of the clause in most Hebrew copies, and is most consistent with the parallelism; this line forming the last of an introverted quatrain.

^f The stanza to this mark is an Epanodos, and contains also several artificially disposed divisions: but they are not exhibited here, as that would confuse the main arrangement of the poem.

^g A play upon words: הַבֵּל, "vanity:" בְּהֵל, "trouble."

And with their tongue they lied unto him.
 For their heart was not prepared for him,
 And they believed not in his covenant.

IV.

Yet he in his compassion forgave their iniquity,
 And destroyed them not.
 And many a time he turned away his wrath,
 And would not rouse all his displeasure.
 For he remembered that they are but flesh,
 A wind that passeth away, and doth not return.

How often provoked they him in the wilderness,
 They grieved him in the desert!
 And they turned back, and tempted God,
 And the Holy One of Israel they moved:
 They remembered not his hand,
 Nor the day when he delivered them from *adversity:

V.

How he had wrought in ^a Egypt his signs,
 And his *marvels in the field of Zoan,
 And had turned into blood their rivers,
 And their *streams, that they could not drink. [them,
 He sent among them ^ball manner of flies, and they devoured
 And frogs, and they destroyed them.
 And he gave to the caterpillar their increase,
 And their labour to the locust.
 He destroyed with hail their vines,
 And their sycamore trees with frost:
 And he gave up to hail their cattle,
 And their flocks to thunderbolts.
 He sent on them the fierceness of his wrath,
 Anger, and indignation, and *adversity,
 Sending among them angels of evil.

^a In this part of the Psalm is shewn the art of an epic poet, who begins with going in medias res, and then recounts past events by an episode.

^b ערב: κυρόματα.

He made a way for his wrath ;
He spared not from death their soul,
And their life to the pestilence he gave over :
And he smote every first born in Egypt,
The chief of their strength in the tabernacles of Ham.

But he led forth, like sheep, his people ;
And guided them, like a flock, in the wilderness ;
And he led them in *confidence, and they feared not ,
And their enemies were overwhelmed in the sea.^a
And he brought them to the borders of his Sanctuary,
The mountain which ^bhe had purchased with his right hand ;
And he cast out before them the heathen,
And divided to them by line an inheritance,
And caused to dwell in their tents the tribes of Israel.

But they tempted, and * rebelled against God Most High,
And his testimonies they kept not,
But turned back, and dealt unfaithfully as their fathers ;
They started aside, like a bow that is deceitful ;
And they grieved him with their high places,
And with their graven images they made him jealous.

VI.

God heard, and he was wroth ;
And had an abhorrence exceeding great of Israel,
And he forsook the tabernacle of Shiloh,
The tent that he had pitched among men,
And delivered into captivity his strength,
And his beauty into the hand of the *adversary.
And he gave over to the sword his people ;
And with his inheritance he was wroth :
Their ^cyoung men were devoured by the fire,^d

^a Heb. overwhelmed the sea.

^b Heb. had purchased his right hand.

^c Heb. chosen men.

^d Heb. devoured the fire.

And their maidens * made no funeral song ;^a
 Their priests by the sword were slain,
 And their widows made no lamentation.

Then the LORD awoke, as one out of sleep,
 As a mighty man refreshed with wine :
 And he smote his * adversaries in the hinder part ;
 A ^bperpetual reproach he cast on them.
 And he ^crefused the Tribe of Joseph,
 And the Tribe of Ephraim he chose not,
 But he chose the Tribe of Judah,
 The hill of Sion, which he loved :
 And he built like high places his Sanctuary :
 As the earth he hath founded it for ever.

And he chose David his servant,
 And took him from the folds of sheep :
 From following the ewes he brought him,
 To feed Jacob his people,
 And Israel his inheritance.
 And he fed them in the integrity of his heart,
 And by the ^dskilfulness of his hands he guided them.

^a Heb. did not praise : the verb is active. This meaning has been hazarded, as apparently the most consistent : and thus this line will form the second of an alternate parallel quatrain. Vide Schleusner in voc. πεινέω.

^b Heb. reproach perpetual.

^c Heb. abhorred : מאס, the same word so translated before.

^d Heb. understanding ; a great understanding : תבונות.

PSALM LXXIX.

A Psalm of Asaph.

I.

O God, the ^aheathen are come into thine inheritance :
 They have defiled the Temple of thy holiness :
 They have laid Jerusalem in heaps : [the fowls of heaven,
 They have given the dead bodies of thy servants as meat to
 The flesh of thy saints to the beasts of the land.
 They have shed their blood like water round about Jerusalem,
 And there is none to bury.
 We are become a reproach to our neighbours,
 A scorn and derision to them that are round about us.

II.

How long, O LORD, wilt thou be angry ?
 Shall ^bthy jealousy for ever burn, like fire ? [known thee,
 Pour out thine indignation upon the heathen that have not
 And on the kingdoms that on thy Name have not called :
 For they have ^cdevoured Jacob,
 And his dwelling place they have laid waste.

III.

Remember not the iniquities of ^{*}them that were before us ;^d
 Let ^ethy tender mercies speedily prevent us,
 For we are ^fbrought low exceedingly.

^a Heb. are come the heathen.

^b Heb. for ever shall burn like fire their anger ?

^c אכל is the received reading : but the LXX, both our versions, and 16 Hebrew MSS. read אכלו.

^d So the marg. of Eng. Bibl., and the compilers of the Litany : but the text of the English Bible and Prayer Book, and the LXX, make it agree with עונות, "our former iniquities."

^e Heb. speedily prevent us thy tender mercies.

^f ἐπτωλεσάμεν.

Help us, O God of our salvation, for the glory of thy Name :
And deliver us, and *forgive our sins, for the sake of thy Name.

IV.

Wherefore say the heathen, Where is their God ?
Make ^aknown among the heathen in our sight
The vengeance of the blood of thy servants that is shed.
Let^b the sighing of the prisoners come before thee :
According to the greatness of thy power, reserve the children of death.^c
And render to our neighbours sevenfold the reproach
Wherewith they have reproached thee, O Lord.

V.

And we, thy people, and sheep of thy pasture,
Shall give thanks to thee for ever :
From generation to generation we will declare thy praise.

^a Heb. let it be known.

PSALM LXXX.

To the Chief Musician on Shoshannim Eduth. A Psalm of Asaph.

I.

O Shepherd of Israel, give ear :
Thou that leadest Joseph as a sheep :
Thou that sittest between the Cherubims, shine forth.
Before Ephraim, and Benjamin, and Manassch,
Lift up thy strength, and come to save us.
O God, turn us again, [saved.
And shew the light of thy countenance, and we shall be

And thou makest them to drink of tears in great measure.
Thou makest us a strife to our neighbours,
And our enemies are scornful to us :

And shew the light of thy countenance, and we shall be

III.

A vine out of Egypt thou didst bring :
Thou didst cast out the heathen, and plant her :
Thou madest room before her,
And she took deep ^droot, and filled the land :
The ^ehills were covered with her shadow,

^a A frequent expression in the Psalms of Asaph.

^b Observe the advance in each recurring burthen, "O God;" "O God of hosts;" "O Lord God of hosts."

^c Here a Diapsalma occurs in the LXX, and in the right place.

^d Heb. rooted her roots.

^e Heb. were covered the hills.

And her * arms^a were as the cedars of God :
 She sent out branches unto the sea,
 And to the river her boughs.

Why^b hast thou broken down her hedges,
 So that they pluck at her all who pass by the way ?
 The ^cboar out of the wood doth root it up,
 And the beast of the field doth devour it.

O God of hosts, return even now,
 Look down from heaven, and behold, and visit this vine,^d
 And the place, which thy right hand hath planted,
 And^e the branch that that thou madest strong for thyself.
 It is burnt with fire, it is cut down.

At the rebuke of thy countenance let them perish.
 Let thy hand be upon the man^f of thy right hand,
 On the Son of man, whom thou madest strong for thyself,
 And we will not go back from thee :
 Let us live, and on thy Name we shall call.
 O LORD God of hosts, turn us again :
 Shew the light of thy countenance, and we shall be saved.

^a The word "boughs," in the next line but one, is a different word.

^b All this is in the style of Isaiah.

^c Heb. doth root it up the boar out of the wood.

^d Heb. vine this.

^e So both our translations : but the word is בן, "Son." The LXX has υἱὸν ἀνθρώπου : 2 of Kennicott's MSS. have בן אדם, "Son of man," which perhaps is right.

^f אֵיט : a term of greater honour than אדם, which occurred before.

PSALM LXXXI.

To the Chief Musician upon Gittith. Of Asaph.

I.

1. Sing for *joy to God our strength :
Make a joyful noise to the God of Jacob :
Take^a a Psalm, and bring the timbrel,
The harp of pleasantness, with the lute.
Blow up, in the new moon, the trumpet,
In^b the time appointed, on the day of our feast.
2. For a statute^c of Israel is this :
A *judgment of the God of Jacob :
A testimony in Joseph he ordained it,
When he had gone forth through the land of Egypt.
A ^dlanguage which I knew not I heard :
3. I eased from the burthen his shoulder :
His hands from the pots were removed.
In trouble thou calledst, and I delivered thee :
I heard thee in the secret place of thunder :
I proved thee at the waters of strife.

Neither shalt thou worship any other God ;^a

 So I gave them up to the imaginations of their own

 The haters of the LORD should have been found liars
 But their time should have been for ever :
 And he should have fed them with the flour of wheat,
 And from the rock with honey should^c I have

^a Heb. god strange : a different word from that in the preceding line.

^b Heb. hearkened not my people.

^{c, d} The LXX, and one of Kennicott's MSS., reads " he " and " them," which is obviously right.

PSALM LXXXII.†

A Psalm of Asaph.

But like men shall ye die :
And like one of the princes shall ye fall.

For thou thyself shalt inherit all the nations.

† שׁב “turn,” is the characteristic word of this Psalm.

^a שׁבוּת : nearly the same word as שׁבת, “thou hast turned.”

^b נִשְׁאַת : hast borne. This whole paragraph is evangelical.

^c Heb. and let cease thine anger.

^d Heb. and generation.

^e Heb. and thy people.

^f Heb. shall speak God the Lord.

^{*} I suspect instead of לִבְסֶלָה the reading ought to be סֶלָה לֵב, “those who turn their heart. Selah.” This would be exactly the place for the Diapsalma ; and the word “folly” seems redundant. The LXX reads καὶ ἐπὶ τοὺς ἐπιστρέφοντας πρὸς αὐτὸν καρδίαν· reading לֵב (לו) וְאֵל שׁוּבִי (לו) or, לֵב לו, instead of לִבְסֶלָה וְאֵל שׁוּבִי.

A Prayer of David.

A Song of a Psalm of the Sons of Korah. To the Chief Musician on Mahalath Leannoth. Maschil of Heman the Ezrahite.

I.

O LORD God of my salvation,
By day have I cried, by night before thee:
Let ^amy prayer enter into thy presence:
Incline thine ear unto my calling:
For full of troubles is my soul;
And my life to hell draweth nigh:
I am counted with them that go down to the pit:
I am even as a ^bman without strength:
Free ^camong the dead,
Like the wounded, that lie in the grave,

And they from thy hand are cut off.

He shall call upon me, and I will hear him :
With him will I myself be in trouble :
I will deliver him, and *glorify him.
With length of days will I satisfy him,
And shew him my salvation.

^a Hence the heathen fables of Hercules, Bacchus, &c.

^b Here God speaks.

* * * The second part of this Psalm is a moral antistrophe to the first. Among other particulars, the open violence of the lion, and the subtlety of the serpent, are opposed to the secret pestilence, and the visible arrow.

PSALM XCII.

A Psalm of a Song for the Sabbath day.

I.

It is a good thing to give thanks unto the LORD,
And to *make a psalm to thy Name, O Most High :
To shew forth in the morning thy mercy,
And thy truth in the night ;^a
Upon an instrument^b of ten strings, and^c upon the lute :
Upon a loud^d instrument, ^ewith the harp.

For thou hast made me glad, O LORD, because of thy *doings,^f
Because of the works of thy hands I will *sing for joy.
How great are thy works, O LORD !
Exceeding* deep are thy thoughts.

A man that is brutish doth not know,
And a fool doth not understand this thing.

II.

When ^gthe wicked spring up as the grass,
And all the^h doers of iniquity do flourish,
It is that they may be destroyed for ever :
But Thou art exalted for evermore, O LORD.

For lo, thine enemies, O LORD,
For lo, thine enemies shall perish,

^a Heb. nights.

^b Heb. upon ten.

^c Or, "even upon," &c.

^d הַגִּיט : "higgaion." Vide Psalm ix. If עֵשֶׂר means an instrument, so must "higgaion," since עַל is prefixed to each.

^e Heb. in the harp.

^f Heb. doing.

^g Heb. in the springing up of the wicked.

^h Heb. and do flourish all, &c.

And ^aall the doers of iniquity shall be scattered :

But ^bmine horn shall be exalted like an unicorn :

I am anointed with ^cfresh oil.

And mine ^deye shall *look upon mine enemies : [shall hear.

And of those that rise against me, even the wicked, mine ear

III.

The righteous like a palm tree shall *spring up,

As a cedar in Lebanon he shall spread abroad.

Those that are planted in the house of the LORD

In the courts of our God shall flourish.

Still shall they bring forth fruit in old age :

Fat ^eand well liking shall they be.

That they may *declare how upright is the LORD, my rock :

And that there is no unrighteousness in him.

^a Heb. and shall be scattered all, &c.

^b Heb. but shall be exalted as an unicorn my horn.

^c Heb. oil fresh.

^d Heb. and shall look mine eye.

^e Like the style of Moses.

PSALM XCIII.

The LORD is King : with majesty he is apparelled :
 Apparelled is the LORD : with strength he hath girded himself.

Surely the world^a is established :
 It cannot be moved :
 Established is thy throne of old : ^b
 From everlasting art Thou.

The^c floods have lifted up, O LORD,
 The floods have lifted up their voice :
 The floods lift up their waves.
 Than the voices of many waters,^d
 Of the mighty *breakers of the sea,
 More mighty on high is the LORD.

Thy testimonies are *true *exceedingly.
 In^e thy house is the *beauty^f of holiness, O LORD,
Even to the *end of days.

^a Heb. is established the world.

^b Heb. from them : marg. Eng. Bibl.

^c Heb. have lifted up : and "lift up the floods," (in these three consecutive lines).

^d Heb. waters many.

^e Heb. to thy house.

^f Not the same word as in Psalm xevi. : here it is נאורה, there הדרר.

PSALM XCIV.

I.

O God of vengeance,^a O LORD,
 O God of vengeance, shine forth.
 Lift up thyself, O Judge of the earth,
 Render a reward unto the proud.

How^b long shall the ungodly, O LORD,
 How long shall the ungodly triumph?
 They utter, they speak hard things:
 They boast themselves, all the doers of iniquity.

Thy people, O LORD, they smite down;
 And thine heritage they afflict.
 The widow and the stranger they slay,
 And the fatherless they put to death.
 And they say, The^c LORD shall not see:
 And^d the God of Jacob shall not *understand.

II.

Understand^e, ye brutish among the people:
 And ye fools, when will ye be wise?
 He that planteth the ear, shall not he hear?
 Or he that formed the eye, shall not he *behold?
 He that chasteneth the heathen, shall not he correct?
 He that teacheth man knowledge, even the LORD,^f
 He knoweth the thoughts of man, that they^g are vanity.

^a Heb. vengeance.

^b עַר כִּתִּי: an expression common in these latter Psalms.

^c Heb. shall not see the Lord.

^d Heb. and shall not understand the God of Jacob.

^e Compare Psalm xcii. v. 6.

^f I have ventured to alter the usual division of these sentences, to make the parallelism more consistent.

^g "they," emphatic.

Happy^a is the man whom thou chastenest, O LORD,
 And out of thy law teachest him.
 That thou mayest give rest to him from the days of * evil,
 Until there be digged up for the ungodly a pit.
 For^b the LORD will not cast off his people,
 And his inheritance he will not forsake :
 For unto righteousness judgment shall return,^c
 And they shall ^d follow it all that are upright of heart.

III.

Who will rise up for me against the wicked ?
 Who will stand up for me against the doers of iniquity ?
 If the LORD had not been a help to me,
 Quickly^e my soul had dwelt in silence.

When I said, My foot hath slipped,^f
 Thy mercy, O LORD, held me up.
 In the multitude of the sorrows within me,
 Thy comforts have delighted my soul.

Shall^g the throne of wickedness have fellowship with thee,
 Which frameth mischief by a * statute ? [teous :
 They gather themselves together against the soul of the right-
 And the blood of the innocent they condemn.

But^h the LORD is indeed a * high tower to me,ⁱ
 And my God is the Rock of my refuge.
 And he shall render unto them their iniquity :
 And in their own wickedness he shall cut them off :
 He shall cut them off, even the LORD our God.

^a נִבְרָ.^b Heb. for wilt cast off the Lord.^c Heb. shall return judgment.^d Or, "ensue it : " enjoy the consequences of it.^e Heb. quickly had dwelt in silence my soul.^f Heb. hath slipped my foot. In this stanza there is an alternation of external and internal suffering and comfort.^g Heb. shall have fellowship with thee the throne, &c.^h Heb. but is the Lord : "is" emphatic.ⁱ Heb. to me a high tower.

PSALM XCV.

I.

O come, let us sing unto the LORD :
Let us make a joyful noise in the Rock of our salvation :
Let us come before his presence with thanksgiving,
With psalms let us make a joyful noise unto him.

For a ^agreat God is the LORD,
And a ^bgreat King above all Gods.
In whose hand are the corners of the earth,
And the heights of the hills are his :
Whose is the sea, and He made it :
And ^cthe dry land his hands have formed.

II.

O ^{*}go, let us worship and fall down,
Let us kneel before the LORD our Maker.
For He is our God,
And we are the people of his pasture,
And the sheep of his hand.

III.

To day if his voice ye hear, harden not your heart,
As in the provocation,
As in the day of temptation in the wilderness,
When ^dyour fathers tempted me ;
They proved me, they also saw my works.

^a Heb. God great.

^b Heb. King great.

^c יִבְּשֶׁת : very Mosaical. Compare Gen. i. 9. & 10.

^d Heb. when tempted me your fathers.

Forty years was I grieved with this generation, and said,
It is a people that do err in their heart,
And they ^ahave not known my ways.
Unto whom I swear in my wrath,
That ^bthey should not enter into my rest.

^a "they," emphatic.

^b Heb. if they should: so the Septuagint; as quoted by St. Paul, Hebrews, iv. 5.

PSALM XCVI.

I.

O sing unto the LORD a song that is new :
Sing unto the LORD, all the earth :
Sing unto the LORD, bless ye his Name :
Shew forth from day to day his salvation.
Tell *among the heathen his glory,
Among all *nations his wonders.

For great is the LORD, and to be praised highly.
To be feared is He above all gods.
For all the gods of the nations are idols :
But the LORD the heavens hath made.
Honour and majesty are before him :
Power and beauty are in his sanctuary.

II.

Give unto the LORD, O ye kindreds of the *nations,
Give unto the LORD glory and power.
Give unto the LORD the glory of his Name :
Bring a present, and go into his courts.
O worship the LORD in the *majesty of holiness,
Stand in awe of him, all the earth.
Say among the heathen, the LORD is King.
Truly *the ^aworld is established, it shall not be moved.
He shall judge the *nations in uprightness.
Let ^bthe heavens be *glad, ^clet the earth rejoice :
Let the sea roar, and the fulness thereof :

^a Heb. is established the world.

^b, ^c Heb. let be glad : let rejoice : let roar : let be joyful, &c.

Let the field be joyful, and all that is in it,
Then shall *sing for joy all the trees of the wood before the LORD.
For he cometh, for he cometh to judge the earth,
He shall judge the world in righteousness :
And the nations in his truth.

* * * The structure of this Psalm is exactly that of the xcvi. The first stanza commemorating God's general Providence, and exhorting to general thanksgiving : the second, his grace, and exhorting to a peculiar worship.

PSALM XCVII.

I.

The LORD is King : ^a let the earth rejoice :
Let ^b the multitude of the isles be glad.
Clouds and darkness are round about him,
Righteousness and judgment are the habitation of his throne.

A fire before him shall go,
And shall burn up round about him his enemies.
His ^c lightnings gave shine unto the world ;
The ^d earth saw, and was afraid.
The hills like wax melted at the presence of the LORD,
At the presence of the Lord of the whole earth.

The ^e heavens declare his righteousness,
And ^f all the ^{*} nations have seen his glory.
Let them be ^{*} ashamed all that serve a graven image,
That boast themselves of idols :
Worship him, all ye Gods.

II.

Sion ^g heard, and was glad :

Be * glad, O ye righteous, in the LORD,
And give thanks for a remembrance of his holiness.

* * The construction of this Psalm is similar to that of the xcvith and xcvith.

For marvels hath he done. [the arm of his holiness.

All^c the ends of the earth have seen the salvation of our God.

Let^f the sea roar, and the fulness thereof,
The world, and the dwellers therein.

O LORD our God, Thou didst hear them:

PSALM C.

A Psalm of thanksgiving.

I.

Make a joyful noise unto the LORD, all the earth :

Serve the LORD with gladness :

* Go before his presence with a song.

Know that the LORD He is God :

It is He who hath made us, and not we ourselves :

We are his people, and the sheep of his pasture.

II.

O go into his gates with thanksgiving,

Into his courts with praise,

Give thanks unto him,

Bless his Name.

For God is the LORD,

Everlasting is his mercy :

And from generation to generation is his truth.

* * This Psalm is similar in its construction to the xcvi. ; but there is a difference. Both parts speak of his Providence and Grace : both refer as well to his chosen people, as to the whole world. The second part, however, speaks more definitely of his peculiar worship ; and his everlasting grace, which shall continue when the Church is no longer militant on earth, is commemorated.

PSALM CI.

Of David. A Psalm.

I.

Of mercy and judgment will I sing:

To thee, O LORD, will I *make a psalm.

I will behave myself wisely in the way of perfectness.

O when wilt thou come unto me?

I will walk in perfectness of heart within my house.

I will not set before mine eyes any thing of Belial.

The work of them that turn aside I hate :

It shall not cleave to me.

A heart of frowardness shall depart from me.

A wicked person I will not know. [destroy :

Whoso slandereth in secret his neighbour, him will I

The *haughty of eyes, and the proud of heart, him

I will not suffer.

II.

Mine eyes are upon the faithful of the land,

That they may dwell ^awith me.

He that walketh in the way of perfectness

Even he shall serve me.

He shall not dwell in my house, whoso worketh deceit :

He that speaketh lies shall not tarry before mine *eyes.

Soon shall I destroy all the ungodly of the land,

That I may cut off from the city of the LORD all workers of iniquity.

^a Heb. rest.

PSALM CII.

A Prayer of the afflicted, when he was overwhelmed, and before the LORD poured out his * supplication.

I.

O LORD, hear my prayer :
And let my crying unto thee come.
Hide not thy face from me in the day when trouble is with me :
Incline unto me thine ear in the day when I call :
O speedily hear me.

II.

For they are consumed like smoke, my days :
And my bones as a firebrand are burned up.
It is smitten like grass and withered, my heart,
So that I forget to eat my bread.
For the voice of my groaning
My ^a bones are cleaving to my flesh.

I am like unto a pelican of the wilderness,
I am ^b even as the owl of the deserts :
I have watched, and I am ^c even as the sparrow
Alone upon the house top.

All day they reproach me, mine enemies,
They that are mad upon me against me are sworn :

For ashes like bread have I eaten :
And my drink with weeping have I mingled :
Because of thine indignation and wrath :

* Heb. are cleaving my bones.

^{b, c} אֵינִי, emphatic.

For thou hast taken me up, and cast me down :
My days like a shadow are declined,
And I myself like grass am withered.

III.

But thou, O LORD, for ever shalt endure,
And thy remembrance to generations and generations.
Thou thyself shalt arise, thou shalt have mercy upon Sion :
For it is time that thou have pity on her ; for it is come, the
For ^athy servants take pleasure in her stones : [set time.
And on her dust they have pity.

And the ^bheathen shall fear the Name of the LORD,
And all the Kings of the earth thy glory :

He shall appear in his glory :
He will regard the prayer of the destitute,
And will not despise their prayer.

This ^dshall be written for the generation to come :
And the people which shall be created shall praise the LORD.
For he hath looked down from the height of his sanctuary :
The LORD from heaven the earth hath beheld :
That he may hear the groaning of the prisoner,
That he may set loose the children of death.

Throughout generations of generations are thy years.
Of old the earth thou hast founded :
And the work of thy hands are the heavens.
They shall perish, but Thou shalt stand :
And they all as a garment shall wax old :
As a vesture thou shalt change them, and they shall be changed :
But thou art the same, ^b and thy years shall have no end.
The children of thy servants shall continue :
And their seed in thy sight shall stand fast.

^a כָּחַן is the reading of the Septuagint and of the received Hebrew text : but both our versions, and 51 of Kennicott's copies, read כָּחִי.

PSALM CIII.

Of David.

I.

Bless, O my soul, the LORD :
 And all that is within me, the Name of his holiness :
 Bless, O my soul, the LORD,
 And forget not all his rewards.

Who forgiveth all thine iniquities : ^a
 Who healeth all thine infirmities :
 Who redeemeth from ^b destruction thy life :
 Who crowneth thee with mercy and loving-kindness.
 Who satisfieth with good thy mouth :
 Thy youth like an eagle is renewed.^c

II.

The ^d LORD *doeth righteousness,^e
 And ^f judgment for all the oppressed.
 He made known his ways to Moses :
 To the children of Israel his works.

Full of * loving kindness and gracious is the LORD :
 Slow to anger, and plenteous in mercy.
 He will not alway chide :
 Neither for ever will he keep his anger.
 He hath not according to our sins done unto us,
 Neither according to our iniquities hath he rewarded us.

^a N.B. כִּי, instead of ׀ termination.

^b The pit, or, corruption : יַחַת.

^c Heb. is renewed like an eagle thy youth.

^d Heb. doeth the Lord.

^{e, f} Both are plural in the Hebrew.

For as high as the heaven is above the earth,

 So far hath he set from us our transgressions :
 As the *loving kindness of a father towards his children,
 So is the loving kindness of the LORD towards them that fear him.

For he himself knoweth our frame :
 He remembereth that dust are we.
 Man . . . ^bas grass are his days :
 As a flower of the field, so he *flowereth :
 For the wind goeth over it, and it is not :
 And ^cthe place thereof shall know it no more.

But the mercy of the LORD is from everlasting to everlasting towards them that fear him,
 And his righteousness unto children's children ;
 Unto them that keep his covenant,
 And unto them that remember his *precepts to do them.

III.

The LORD in heaven hath prepared his throne,
 And his kingdom over all *hath dominion.

Bless ye the LORD, ye angels of his,
 Ye that are mighty in strength,
 Ye that do his word,
 Hearkening to the voice of his word.
 Bless ye the LORD, all ye his hosts,
 Ye ministers of his, that do his pleasure.
 Bless ye the LORD, all his works.
 In all places of his dominion :
 Bless, O my soul, the LORD.

^a נָבֵה, "high," and נָבַר, "great," resemble one another in sound. Possibly, for the latter word, the former ought to be read : but for this there is no authority.

^b The nominative absolute.

^c Heb. and shall know it no more the place thereof.

PSALM CIV.

I.

Bless, O my soul, the LORD :
O LORD my God, thou art great exceedingly :
With honour and majesty thou art clothed ;
Covering thyself with light, as with a garment :
Spreading out the heavens as a curtain :

Who walketh upon the wings of the wind :
Who maketh his angels spirits :
His ministers a fire that flameth.

II.

He laid the earth upon her foundations :
She shall not be moved for ever * and ever.
With the deep, as with a clothing, thou coveredst her,
Above the hills stood the waters :
At thy rebuke they fled ;
At the voice of thy thunder they hasted away.
The^b hills ascend : the valleys go down
Into the place which thou hadst * laid for them.
A bound thou hast set ; they shall not pass it ;

Among the hills they run.

From among the branches they shall give their voice.

Who watereth the hills from his upper chambers :
With the fruit of thy works ^bthe earth is full.
Who maketh the grass to grow for the cattle,
And herb for the service of man :
That he may bring forth bread from the earth,
And that wine may gladden the heart of man ;
That he may make his face to shine with oil,
And that bread the heart of man may strengthen.

They are full, the trees of the LORD :
The cedars of Lebanon which he hath planted :
Wherein the birds make their nests :
As for the stork, the fir trees are her dwelling.
The^c high hills are for the wild goats,
The stony rocks are a refuge for the conies.

He made the moon for seasons :
The sun knoweth his going down :
Thou makest darkness, and it is night :
Wherein doth move every^d beast of the forest :
The young lions are roaring after their prey,
And seeking from God their meat.

The^e sun ariseth ; they gather themselves together :
And in their dens they lay them down :
Man^f goeth forth to his work, and to his labour,
Until the evening.

 Beasts both ^dsmall and great.
 There the ships go ; there is that Leviathan,^e
Whom thou hast formed to take his pastime therein.

All of them on thee do wait :
 That thou mayest give them their meat in due season :
 Thou givest it them ; they gather it :
 Thou openest thine hand : they are satisfied with good.
 Thou hidest thy face : they are troubled :
 Thou takest away their ^{*}spirit, they die,^f
 And to their dust they return :
 Thou sendest forth thy spirit ; they are created :
 And thou renewest the face of the earth.

V.

The^g glory of the LORD shall ^{*}be for ever :
 The^h LORD shall be glad in his works :
 Who looketh on the earth, and it trembleth :
 He toucheth the hills, and they smoke.

I will sing unto the LORD, while I live :

The economy of the earth in regular progression, viz. the provision for the cattle and birds ; for man ; for the birds again and animals : then he ascends to the heavenly influences of the sun and moon. IV. The general providence of God throughout the universe, as the giver of life. V. The concluding ascription of praise.

PSALM CV.

I.

O give thanks unto the LORD,

Call upon his Name :

Make known among the * nations his doings.

Sing to him, * make psalms to him :

Talk ye of all his * marvels.

Praise him in the Name of his holiness :

Let^a there be * gladness in the heart of them that seek the LORD.

II.

O seed of Abraham, his servant,

O children of Jacob, his chosen ;

He is the LORD our God :

In all the earth are his judgments.

He hath remembered for ever his covenant,

The word which he commanded to a thousand generations,

Which he * covenanted with Abraham ;

And his oath unto Isaac :

And he confirmed it to Jacob for a * statute,

And to Israel as a covenant for everlasting.

Saying, To thee will I give the land of Canaan,

The lot^b of your inheritance.

Whilst they were * small in number,

 From one kingdom to another ^a nation.
 He suffered not man to * oppress them ;
 And he reprov'd for their sakes even kings : saying,
 Touch not mine Anointed,
 And to my prophets do no * evil.

And he called for a dearth upon the land,
 All the staff of bread he brake.
 He sent before their faces a man,
 Who for a servant was sold, even Joseph :
 They * afflicted with fetters his feet :
 The iron entered into his soul.
 Until ^b the time of his cause came,
 The word of the LORD tried him.

The King ^c sent, and delivered him,
Even the ruler of the * nations, and freed him.
 He made him lord over his house,
 And ruler of all his substance.
 That he might restrain his princes after his will,^d
 And to his senators might teach wisdom.
 And Israel came into Egypt,
 And Jacob was a stranger in the land of Ham.
 And he increased his people exceedingly :
 And made them stronger than * those who troubled them.
 Their ^e heart turned to hate his people,
 To deal untruly with his servants.
 He sent Moses his servant,
 Aaron whom he had chosen.
 They shewed among them the words of his tokens,
 And wonders in the land of Ham.
 He sent darkness, and it was dark :

 He spake, and there came all manner of flies,^c
 Lice in all their coasts.
 He^d gave them rain of hail,
 Fire of flames in their land.
 And he smote their vines and their fig trees,
 And he brake the trees of their coasts.
 He spake, and there came locusts,
 And caterpillars without number,^e
 And they devoured all the herb in their land,
 Yea, devoured the fruit of their ground.
 And he smote all the first born in their land,
 The chief of all their strength.

And he brought them out with silver and gold ;
 And there was not among their tribes a feeble person.
 There^f was gladness in Egypt at their departing,
 For^g the fear of them fell upon them.
 He spread a cloud for a covering,
 And fire to give light in the night.
 They^h asked, and he brought quails,
 And with the bread of heaven he filled them.
 He opened the rock, and there gushed out waters,
 They ran in dry places as a river.

 Abraham his servant.

And the labour of the people they inherited :
To the end that they might keep his statutes,
And his laws that they might observe.

PSALM CVI.

Praise ye the LORD.

I.

O give thanks unto the LORD, for he is good,
For everlasting is his mercy.

Who can express the mighty acts of the LORD,
Or shew forth all his praise?
Happy* are they who keep judgment,
Who do righteousness at all times.

Remember me, O LORD, according to thy favour towards thy

That I may see the good of thy chosen,
That I may *be glad in the gladness of thy people,
That I may give thanks with thine inheritance.

II.

We have sinned with our fathers :
We have committed iniquity : we have been ungodly.
Our fathers in Egypt understood not thy *marvels,
They remembered not the multitude of thy mercies,
But they *rebelled at the Sea, at the Red Sea.

Yet he saved them for the sake of his Name,
That he might cause to be known his might.
And he rebuked the Red Sea, and it was dried up ;
And he led them through the deep ^aas through a wilderness.
And he saved them from the hand of him that hated them,
And redeemed them from the hand of the enemy.
And ^bthe waters covered them that *troubled them.

* Heb. deeps.

^b Heb. and covered the waters.

One of them was not left.
Then ^athey believed his words ;
They sang his praise.

Soon they forgot his works ;
They waited not for his counsel.
And they lusted with lust in the wilderness ;
And they tempted God in the desert.
And he gave them their desire,
But he sent leanness into their soul.

And they were envious with Moses in the camp,
With Aaron, the saint of the LORD.
The ^bearth opened, and swallowed up Dathan,
And ^ccovered the company of Abiram.
And there was kindled a fire in their company,
A flame burnt up the ungodly.

They made a calf in Horeb,
And worshipped the molten image :
And they changed their glory
Into the similitude of an ox that eateth grass.
They forgot God their Saviour,
Who had done great things in Egypt,
Marvels in the land of Ham,
And fearful things by the Red Sea.

And he said that he would ^{*}cut them off,
Had not Moses his chosen stood in the breach before him,
To turn away his wrath from destroying.

And they despised the land of pleasantness ;

They did not believe his word.

And they murmured in their tents,

They hearkened not unto the voice of the LORD.

And he lifted up his hand against them,

And to scatter them in the lands.

And they joined themselves to Baal Peor,
And ate the sacrifices of the dead.

And they provoked him with their inventions,
And^b the plague brake in among them :
Then stood up Phinehas and prayed,
And there was a staying of the plague.
And that was counted unto him for righteousness,
From^c generation to generation for ever.

And they angered him at the waters of strife,
And it went ill with Moses for their sakes.
For they provoked his spirit :
And he spake unadvisedly with his lips.

They * cut not off the nations,
As^d the LORD had spoken to them,
But they were mingled with the heathen,
And they learned their works :
And they served their idols,
And they were to them a snare :
And they sacrificed their sons and their daughters unto devils :
And they shed innocent blood,^e
The blood of their sons and of their daughters,
Which they sacrificed to the idols of Canaan :
And^f the land was defiled with blood.
And they were stained with their own works,
And they went a whoring with their own inventions.

Then^g was kindled the wrath of the LORD against his people,
And he abhorred his inheritance.

 And^a their enemies oppressed them,

 Many^b times did he deliver them,
 But as for them they *rebelled with their counsel,

But he* looked on their affliction,^c
 When he heard their cry.
 And he remembered for them his covenant,
 And he repented, according to the multitude of his mercies.^d
 And he made them^e to be pitied

BOOK OF PSALMS.

PART V.

PSALM CVII. TO CL. INCLUSIVE.

PSALM CVII.

I.

O give thanks unto the LORD, for he is good :
For everlasting is his mercy.
Let them say so, who are redeemed of the LORD,
Whom he hath redeemed from the hand of the enemy :
And from the lands hath gathered them,
From the east and from the west,
From the north and from the sea.

II.

They wandered in the wilderness, in a solitary way :
A city to dwell in they found not :
Hungry and thirsty also ^a
Their souls within them fainted.
Then they cried unto the LORD in their trouble :^b
From their distresses he delivered them :
And ^c he led them forth by the ^dright way,
That they might go to a city to dwell in.
Let them give thanks to the LORD for his mercy :
And for his wonders to the children of men :
For he hath satisfied the soul that longeth :
And the soul that hungereth he hath filled with good.

II.

They that sit in darkness, and the shadow of death,
They that are bound in affliction and iron,
Because they rebelled against the words of the LORD,
And the counsel of the LORD they *despised :

^a Heb. also thirsty.^b Heb. trouble that was on them.^{c, d} Both the verb and noun are the same in the Hebrew : ׀׀׀.

And he brought low with *sorrow their heart :
They fell down, and there was none to help.
Then they cried unto the LORD in their trouble :
From their distresses he saved them :
He brought them out of darkness, and the shadow of death :
And their bonds he brake asunder.
Let them give thanks to the LORD for his mercy :
And for his wonders to the children of men :
For he hath *shivered the gates of brass,
And the bars of iron he hath smitten through.

IV.

Fools for *the way of their transgression
And for their iniquities are afflicted.
All meat ^a is an abhorrence to their soul,
And they draw nigh unto the gates of death.
Then they cried unto the LORD in their trouble :
From their distresses he saved them :
He sent his word, and healed them,
And *set them free from their destruction.
Let them give thanks to the LORD for his mercy,
And for his wonders to the children of men :
And let them sacrifice the sacrifices of thanksgiving,
And tell out his works with singing.

V.

They that go down to the sea in ships,
That *work in the ^bgreat waters,
These men see the works of the LORD,
And his wonders in the deep.

For he speaketh, and there riseth the wind of storm,
And it lifteth up the waves thereof :
They mount up to the heavens,
They go down to the depths ;

^a Heb. all meat abhorreth their soul.

^b Heb. waters great.

Their soul because of the trouble melteth away.
They reel and stagger like a drunkard,
And all their wisdom is swallowed up.
Then they cried unto the LORD in their trouble,
And from their distresses he bringeth them out :
He maketh the storm a calm,
And ^athere is a stilling of the waves thereof.
And they are glad, because they are at rest :
And he bringeth them unto the haven of their desire.

Let them give thanks to the LORD for his mercy,
And for his wonders to the children of men :
Let them exalt him in the congregation of the people,
And in the seat of the elders let them praise him.

VI.

He turneth the floods into a wilderness,
And ^bsprings of water into a thirsty land :
A land of fruit into saltness,
For the wickedness of them that ^{*}abide therein.
He turneth the wilderness into ^{*}a pool of water,
And a land of drought into springs of water :
And there he causeth to ^{*}abide the hungry,
And they shall prepare them a city to dwell in :
And they shall sow fields, and plant vineyards,
And they shall yield fruits of increase.
And he blesseth them, and they multiply exceedingly.
And their cattle he doth not minish.

But if they be minished and brought low,
Through oppression, ^{*}evil, or trouble :
He poureth contempt upon princes, [there is no way :
And maketh them to wander in the void place, where
But he lifteth up the poor out of affliction,
And maketh as a flock his households.

^a Heb. and are still the waves thereof.

^b A play upon words : צמא, "thirsty:" מַצֵּא, "springs."

The upright shall see, * and be glad :
And all iniquity shall stop her mouth.
Who ^ais wise, and will observe these things? [LORD.
Even such as he shall understand the *mercies of the PSALM CVIII.

A Song of a Psalm of David.

I.

Fixed ^ais my heart, O God : ^b
 I will sing and *make a psalm, even ^cwith my glory.
 Awake, ^dlute and harp,
 I will awake early.
 I will give thanks to thee, among the (a) people, O LORD : ^f
 And ^eI will *make a psalm to thee among the nations :
 For great ^gabove the heavens is thy mercy :
 And unto the clouds reacheth thy truth.
 Be thou exalted above the heavens, O God :
 And ^habove all the earth thy glory.

* The first part nearly corresponds to the third part of Psalm lvii., as the following table shows ; the letters refer to the text above : —

That ^athy (a) beloved may be delivered,
 Save with thy right hand, and hear me.
 God hath spoken in his holiness:
 I will rejoice: I will divide Sichem:
 And the valley of Succoth I will meet out.
 Mine is Gilead: ^bmine is Manasseh:
 And Ephraim is the strength of my head:
 Judah is my lawgiver.
 Moab is my wash-pot:
 Over Edom will I cast out my shoe:
 Over Philistia ^cwill I triumph.
 Who will bring me into the city of strength,
 Who will lead me into Edom.
 Wilt not ^dthou, O God, who didst cast us off?
 And (b) thou, O God, who didst not go forth with our hosts?
 Give unto us help from trouble:
 For vain is the salvation of man.
 Through God we shall do valiantly:
 And He it is that shall tread down our enemies.

^a The second part nearly corresponds to the second part of Ps. lx., as the following table shows:—

Psal. cviii.	Psal. lx.
^b mine is Manasseh.	and mine	33 or 35 of Kenn. MSS.; many of De Rossi's; and the LXX, read with Ps. lx.

^d ("thou" omitted.)	thou	5 of Kenn., and 8 of De Rossi's MSS. read "thou:" also the LXX and Syriac.

(a) Heb. may be delivered thy beloved ones.

(b) Heb. and didst not go forth, O God.

PSALM CIX.

To the Chief Musician. A Psalm of David.

I.

O God of my praise, hold not thy peace :
For the mouth of the ungodly, and the mouth of the deceitful against me are opened :
They have spoken against me with a tongue of lying :
And with speeches of hatred have they compassed me.
In return for my love they are mine adversaries :
But as for me, I am for prayer.
And they have rewarded me evil for good,
And hatred for my love.

II.

Set thou over him an ungodly man :
And let the adversary stand at his right hand :
When he is judged, let him be returned as guilty,^a
And let his prayer become sin.
Let^b his days be few :
His office let another take.^c
Let ^d his children be fatherless,
And his wife a widow.
And in ^e wandering let his children ^e wander, and beg :
And seek bread out of their desolate places.
Let^f the extortioner^g catch all that he hath :
And^h let the strangers spoil his labour.

Let^a there be none to extend mercy to him, [children.
 And let there be none to have compassion upon his fatherless
 Let^b his posterity be cut off :
 In the generation following let ^ctheir name be blotted out.
 Let there be a remembrance of the iniquity of their fathers
 before the LORD :
 And the sin of his mother, let it not be blotted out.
 Let them be before the LORD continually,
 And let him cut off from the earth their remembrance.

Because he remembered not to do mercy,
 But persecuted the man that was poor and needy,
 And the broken in heart, that he might slay him.
 As^d he loved cursing, so let it come unto him :
 As^e he delighted not in blessing, so let it be far from him :
 As^f he clothed himself with cursing as a garment,
 So let it come like water within him,
 And like oil into his bones.
 Let it be to him as a garment that may cover him,
 And for a girdle wherewith he may be continually girded.
 Let this happen to mine adversaries from the LORD ;
 And to them that speak evil against my soul.

III.

But Thou, O LORD my Lord, deal thou with me for the sake
 For good is thy mercy. [of thy Name,
 Deliver me, for poor and needy am I :
 And my heart is wounded within me.
 Like a shadow that declineth am I going :
 I am driven away like the locust.
 My knees are weak through fasting :
 And my flesh faileth of fatness.
 And I am^g indeed become a reproach to them :
 They look upon me : they shake their head.

^a Heb. let there not be to him.

^b Heb. let be his posterity for cutting off.

^c Heb. be blotted out their name.

^d, ^e, ^f Heb. and he loved cursing : and, &c.

Help me, O LORD my God :
Save me, according to thy mercy.
And they shall know that this is thy hand ;^a
That it is thou, O LORD, who hast done it.
They^b shall curse, but Thou shalt bless :
They shall rise, and shall be put to shame :
But thy servant shall * be glad.
Let^c mine adversaries be clothed with * confusion :
And them be covered, as with a cloke, with their own * shame.

I will give thanks unto the LORD greatly with my mouth,
And among the multitudes I will praise him.
For he shall stand at the right hand of * the needy.
To save him from the judges of his soul.

Of David. A Psalm.

The^a LORD said unto my Lord,
 Sit thou on my right hand,
 Until I make thine enemies thy footstool.

The rod of thy strength the^b LORD shall send out of Sion :
 Rule thou in the midst of thine enemies.
 Thy people shall offer willingly
 In the day of thy power, in the majesty of holiness :
 More than the womb of the morning shall be to thee the dew of thy birth.

The^c LORD sware, and will not repent :
 Thou art a Priest for ever after the order of Melchisedech.
 The Lord is upon thy right hand ;
 He shall strike through, in the day of his wrath, even kings.
 He shall judge among the heathen :
 He shall fill the places with dead bodies :

 Of the brook in the way shall he drink :
 Therefore shall he lift up the head.

PSALM CXI.

Praise ye the LORD.

- א I will give thanks unto the LORD with my whole heart :
 ב In the secret place of the upright, and in the congregation.
 ג Great are the works of the LORD,
 ד Sought out of all that delight in them.
 ה Full of honour and *majesty is his work :
 ו And his righteousness endureth for ever.
 ז To be^a remembered hath he made his wonders :
 ח Merciful and gracious is the LORD.
 ט Meat hath he given to them that fear him :
 י He will remember for ever his covenant.
 כ The power of his ^bworks hath he *declared to his people,
 ל That he may give them the heritage of the heathen.
 מ The works of his hands are *truth and judgment ;
 נ True are all his *precepts ;

 פ Redemption hath he sent to his people :
 צ He hath commanded for ever his covenant :
 ק Holy and to be feared is his Name.
 ר The beginning of wisdom is the fear of the LORD :

 ט A good man is merciful, and lendeth ;
 י He will guide ^ehis words with judgment :
 כ For he^d shall not for ever be moved :
 ל In^e everlasting remembrance shall be the righteous.
 מ Of tidings of evil he shall not be afraid :

* * There is a great resemblance between this Psalm and the preceding. The expressions are in several places identical : the exulting of God ; the exulting of the servant of God. Each has a stanza of triplets at the end.

PSALM CXIII.

Praise ye the LORD.

O praise, ye servants of the LORD,

Gracious is the LORD, and righteous :

And our God is merciful.

The ^dLORD preserveth the simple :

I was brought low, and for me he wrought salvation.

Return, O my soul, to thy rest,^e

PSALM CXIX.

K. 1.

*Happy are the perfect in the way,
Who walk in the law of the LORD.
*Happy are the *observers of his testimonies :
With the whole heart they seek him.
*Verily they who do no iniquity,
In his ways they walk.
Thou thyself hast commanded us
Thy precepts to keep with diligence.^a
O that my ways were made direct

PSALM CXXII. †

A Song of Degrees. Of David.

I was glad, when they said unto me,

Prosperity within thy palaces.

For the sake of my brethren and companions,
I will say now, Peace be within thee:
For the ^{*}sake of the house of the LORD our God,
I will seek good for thee.

† The burthen of this Psalm is שָׁלוֹם, "peace." The play upon words is very remarkable: שָׁם, "there," and שֵׁם, "the name:" lines 5 and 6. שִׁבְטִים, "tribes," line 5; מִשְׁפָּט, line 7. Then in line 9, and those which follow: שֶׁאֵלֹו, "pray;" שָׁלוֹם, "peace;" יְרוּשָׁלַם, "Jerusalem;" יִשְׁלִי, "shall prosper;" שְׁלוֹה, "prosperity."

^a Or, "were standing:" עֲמֻדוֹת הֵיךְ : ἐστῶτες ἡσυχας, LXX.

^b Dr. Kennicott, in his Remarks on Select Passages of the Old Testament, observes, that in this Psalm occurs the first instance of the abbreviation of אֶשֶׁר, into שׁ (in this line יִשְׁחַבְרָה). The internal marks of several of the following Psalms, particularly the exxliid and exxxviith, will make it probable that this abbreviation is the work of a later age, and at least as recent as the Captivity." But the same abbreviations occur in the Books of Judges and of Job. See the same work, Page 153.

† שוב, "turn," and רנו, "sing," are the burthens of this Psalm.

^a There is a play upon the words: שוב, "turn;" שיבת, "captivity." The English Bible translators seem to consider שיבת as derivable, either from שב, "to turn," or שבה, "to lead captive;" their marginal rendering being "returned the returning."

^b "Hath magnified to do with them:" marg. Eng. Bibl.: ἐμαγάλυνεν τοῦ ποιῆσαι: LXX. The expression is too idiomatic to render literally.

PSALM CXXX.

A Song of Degrees.

Out of the depths have I cried unto thee, O LORD :
Lord, hearken to my voice :
O^a let thine ears attend to the voice of my supplication.
If for iniquities thou shouldest *watch, O LORD,
Lord, who could stand ?
For with thee is forgiveness :
Therefore shalt thou be feared.
I *hope for the LORD : ^bmy soul doth hope,
And in his word I *trust.
My soul is for the LORD,
More than the watchmen for the morning,
Than the watchmen for the morning.

Let^c Israel *tarry for the LORD :
For with the LORD there is mercy,
And^d with him is the plenteousness of redemption :
And He it is who shall redeem Israel from all his iniquities.

^a Heb. be (emph.) thine ears attentive.

^b Heb. doth hope my soul.

^c Heb. trust Israel in the Lord.

^d Heb. and the plenteousness is with him of redemption.

PSALM CXXXI.

A Song of Degrees of David.

LORD, there is^a no haughtiness in my heart,
Neither lofty are mine eyes:
Neither have I walked in great matters,
Or in wonderful things that were above me.
Surely I have ^brefrained, and been quiet,^c
My soul is like a child that is weaned from his mother:
Like a child that is weaned is my soul.

Let^d Israel trust in the LORD,
From henceforth and for evermore.

^a Heb. is not haughty my heart.

^b Heb. been equable: ἐταπεινωφρόνων.

^c This word is rendered transitively in both our translations: but the parallelism requires the present arrangement.

^d Heb. trust Israel.

PSALM CXXXII.

A Song of Degrees.

I.

1. Remember, O LORD, David,
Even^a all his afflictions:
How he sware unto the LORD:
How he made a vow to the Mighty One of Jacob.
2. I will not come within the *tent of mine house,
I will not climb up into the *covering of my bed,
I will not give sleep to mine eyes,
To mine eyelids slumber,
Until I find a place for the LORD,
A *tabernacle for the Mighty One of Jacob.

Behold, we heard of it at Ephratah:^b
We found it in the fields of the wood.
We will go into his tabernacle:
We will worship at his footstool.

II.

3. Arise, O LORD, into thy resting place,
Thou, and the ark of thy strength:
4. Let thy priests be clothed with righteousness,
And let thy saints sing for joy.
5. For the sake of David thy servant
Turn not away the face of thine Anointed.

^a נס, emphatic.

^b This passage is thus explained by Dr. Lightfoot, Chorogr. Cent., c. 45.: "We heard of it (the ark) in Ephratah, (that is, Shiloh,) a city of Ephraim; we found it in the fields of the wood, that is, in Kirjath Jearim. 1 Sam. vii. 1., &c."

III.

1. The LORD hath sworn to David in truth :
 He will not turn from it.
 Of the fruit of thy body will I set upon thy throne.^a
 If ^bthy children keep my covenant,
 And my testimonies which I shall learn them,
 Then their children for ever shall sit upon thy throne.^c
2. For^d the LORD hath chosen Sion :
 He hath desired it as a dwelling for himself.
3. This is my rest for ever :
 Here will I dwell, for I have desired it.
4. Her provision in blessing I will bless :
 Her poor I will satisfy with bread :
 And her priests I will clothe with salvation :
 And her saints in singing shall sing for joy.
5. There will I make to bud the horn of David :
 I have ordained a lantern for mine Anointed.
 His enemies I will clothe with shame :
 But upon himself shall flourish his crown.

^a Heb. thy throne for thee.^b Heb. if keep thy children.^c Heb. on the throne for thee.^d Heb. hath chosen the Lord.

PSALM CXXXIII.†

A Song of Degrees. Of David.

Behold, how good and how pleasant is it
 The^a dwelling of brethren together in unity !
 Like^b * the good ointment upon the head
 That came down unto the beard, the beard of Aaron,
 That came down to the skirts of his garments.
 Like the dew of Hermon,
 That came down upon the hills of Sion.
 For there the ^cLORD commanded the blessing,
Even ^dlife for evermore.

† ירר, to descend, or come down, is the burthen of the Psalm.

^a Heb. the resting.

^b Heb. like the ointment good.

^c Heb. for there commanded the Lord.

^d חיים, "lives."

PSALM CXXXIV.

A Song of Degrees.

Behold, bless ye the LORD :
All ye servants of the LORD.
Ye that stand in the house of the LORD by night,
Left up your hands in the sanctuary,
And bless ye the LORD.
The ^aLORD bless thee out of Sion,
Even he who hath made heaven and earth.

† בָּרַךְ, to bless, is the characteristic word of this Psalm.

^a Heb. bless thee the LORD.

PSALM CXXXV.

Praise ye the LORD :

1.

Praise the Name of the LORD :
 Praise it, O ye servants of the LORD.
 Ye that stand in the house of the LORD,
 In the courts of the house of our God :
 Praise the LORD : for good is the LORD :
 Make a * psalm to his Name : for it is pleasant.
 For Jacob the^a LORD hath chosen to himself :
 And Israel for his own possession.

2.

For I^b know that great is the LORD,
 And that our LORD is above all Gods. [earth,
 Everything that the ^c LORD pleased, he did in heaven and in
 In the sea, and in all depths :
 Causing^d the vapours to rise from the ends of the earth :
 The lightnings for the rain he maketh :
 Bringing the wind out of his treasures.

He smote the first-born of Egypt,
 From man even unto beast.
 He sent tokens and wonders into the midst of thee,^e O Egypt,
 On Pharaoh, and on all his servants.
 He smote of * the heathen * multitudes,
 And slew kings that were strong.
 Schon^f King of the Amorites,

^a Heb. hath chosen to himself the LORD.^b "I," emphatic.^c Heb. pleased the LORD.^d Heb. causing to rise the vapours.^e כִּי, the Syriac termination.^f שֹׁחַן is prefixed to "Schon." and "Og," as in the Psalm following.

And Og the King of Basan,
 And all the kingdoms of Canaan.
 And gave their land for an heritage,
 An heritage to Israel his people.

O LORD, thy Name is for everlasting :
 O LORD, thy memorial is to generations of generation.

3.

The idols of the heathen are silver and gold ;
 The work of the hands of man.
 A mouth have they ; but they speak not :
 Eyes have they ; but they see not.
 Ears have they ; but they hear not.
 Truly^a there is^b no breath in their mouths.
 Like them^c are they that made them :
Even every one who trusteth in them.

4.

O house of Israel, bless the LORD :
 O house of Aaron, bless the LORD :
 O house of Levi, bless the LORD :
 Ye that fear the LORD, bless the LORD.
 Blessed be the LORD out of Sion,
 Who dwelleth at Jerusalem.
 Praise ye the LORD.

^a נח : I strongly suspect that a passage beginning with this word (noses have they) has fallen out of the text. It is found in one of Kennicott's MSS., and has been added in later times to the LXX.

^b "is," emphatic.

^c "are," emphatic.

PSALM CXXXVI.

O give thanks to the LORD, for he is good :
for everlasting is his mercy.
O give thanks to the God of Gods :
for everlasting is his mercy.
O give thanks to the Lord of Lords :
for everlasting is his mercy.

To him who doeth great ^awonders alone :
for everlasting is his mercy.
To him who made the heavens by ^{*}understanding :
for everlasting is his mercy.
To him who spread out the earth above the waters :
for everlasting is his mercy.
To him who made great ^blights :
for everlasting is his mercy.
The Sun to rule by day :

The Moon and the Stars to rule by night :
for everlasting is his mercy.

To him who smote Egypt in their first-born :
for everlasting is his mercy.
And brought out Israel from the midst of them :
for everlasting is his mercy.
With a hand of strength, and an arm stretched out :
for everlasting is his mercy.
To him who ^{*}parted the Red Sea into parts :
for everlasting is his mercy.
And made Israel to pass through the midst of it :
for everlasting is his mercy.

^a Heb. wonders great.^b Heb. lights great.

And overthrew Pharaoh and his host^a in the Red Sea :

To him who led his people in the wilderness :

To him who smote kings who were great :
for everlasting is his mercy.

And slew kings who were mighty :
for everlasting is his mercy.

Sehon king of the Amorites :
for everlasting is his mercy.

And Og the king of Basan :
for everlasting is his mercy.

And gave their land for an heritage :

An heritage to Israel his servant.
for everlasting is his mercy.

Who^b in our low estate remembered us :
for everlasting is his mercy.

And hath redeemed us from our enemies :
for everlasting is his mercy.

He giveth food to all flesh :

O give thanks unto the God of heaven :
for everlasting is his mercy.

^a Heb. his strength.

PSALM CXXXVII.

By the rivers of Babylon, there we sat down,
 Yea, we wept, when we remembered Sion.
 Upon the willows in the midst thereof
 We hanged up our harps.

For there they required of us, they that led us captive, the words of a song,
 And they that ^awasted us, the words of gladness :
 Sing us one of the ^bsongs of Sion.

How shall we sing the song of the LORD,
 In the land of a stranger ?
 If I forget thee, O Jerusalem,
 Let ^cmy right hand forget herself.
 Let ^dmy tongue cleave to the ^eroof of my mouth,
 If ^fI prefer not Jerusalem above my chief ^{*}gladness.

Remember, O LORD, the children of Edom, in the day of Jerusalem :
 Who said, ^gDown with it, down with it, even to its foundations.^h

^a "that laid us on heaps:" marg. Eng. Bibl.

^b The Hebrew reads "song;" but the Septuagint, and both our versions, "songs."

^c Heb. let forget (herself) my right hand.

^d Heb. let cleave my tongue.

^e But one word in Hebrew: "my palate."

^f Heb. if I exalt not: הִלָּחֵם

^g "Rase it," or "make it bare:" ἐκκενοῦτε: LXX.

^h Heb. the foundations in it.

O daughter of Babylon, who art ^a to be destroyed,
Happy the man, that *performeth to thee
The *recompense wherewith thou hast recompensed us.
Happy the man that taketh
And dasheth thy little children against the stony rock.

^a הַיִּטְרוּדָה: Dathe, following De Dieu, the Chaldee, and Symmachus, gives an active signification to this word, the construction being, he says, a Chaldaism or Syrism. But it surely is prophetic.

PSALM CXXXVIII.

Of David.

I will give thanks unto thee, ^a O LORD, with my whole heart :
 Before the gods I will *make a psalm to thee.
 I will worship toward the temple of thy holiness :
 And I will give thanks unto thy Name,
 For thy *mercy, and for thy truth :
 For thou hast magnified, above every name of thine, thy word.
 In the day when I called, then thou heardest me :
 Thou didst *stir up in my soul strength.^b

They shall give thanks unto thee, O LORD, all the kings of the earth,
 When they have heard the words of thy mouth.
 And they shall sing in the ways of the LORD,
 That great is the glory of the LORD.
 For high is the LORD : yet the lowly he *beholdeth :
 And the proud from afar he knoweth. [*quicken me :
 Though I walk through the midst of trouble, thou shalt
 Against the wrath of mine enemies thou shalt *send forth
 And ^cthy right hand shall save me. [thy hand :
 The LORD will perform that which concerneth me :
 O LORD, thy mercy is everlasting :
 The works of thy hands do not forsake.

^a The word LORD is not in the received Hebrew text : but is in the Septuagint, in 6 of Kennicott's, and 8 of De Rossi's copies, and in the Prayer Book translation. The omission of the divine name in a passage like this at the beginning of the Psalm, is altogether unexampled.

^b πολυωρίσις : LXX.

^c Heb. shall save me thy right hand.

PSALM CXXXIX.

To the Chief Musician. A Psalm of David.

I.

O LORD, thou hast searched me out, and known me :
 Thou, even thou dost know my *resting and my rising ;
 Thou understandest my thoughts afar off.
 My path and ^amy bed thou spiest out : ^b
 And with all my ways thou art acquainted : ^c
 For there is not a word in my tongue ;
 But, lo, O LORD, thou knowest it altogether.
 Behind and before thou hast fashioned me : ^d
 And thou hast laid on me thy hand.

II.

Too wonderful is this knowlege for me :
 It is high : I cannot reach it.

Whither shall I go from thy Spirit ?
 And whither from thy Presence shall I flee ?
 If I climb up to heaven, there art thou :

^a רבע: this might appear a Chaldaism for רבין, were it not that the Psalm is unquestionably from the hand of David.

^{b, c} “Winnowest” and “layest up in store :” these two metaphors are from husbandry. Compare Shakspeare, 2 Hy. iv., Act iv. Sc. 1. : —

Were our loyal faiths martyrs in love,
 We shall be winnow'd with so rough a wind,
 That even our corn shall seem as light as chaff,
 And good from bad find no partition.

^d ἐπ' αὐτῶν: LXX: also Prayer Book translation, taking the verb to be יצר. The Syriac agrees with this; the English Bible takes the sense of צר, to constrain: “thou hast beset me.”

And if I make my bed in hell, behold there art thou.
 I will take the wings of the morning ;
 I will dwell in the ^auttermost parts of the sea : . . .
 Even there thy hand shall lead me,
 And there shall hold me thy right hand.
 And if I say, Surely darkness shall cover me :
 The night shall be light about me.
 Yea, the darkness is not darkness with thee : ^b
 And the night as the day shineth ;
 As is the darkness, so is the light.

For thou, even thou dost possess my reins :
 Thou didst cover me in the womb of my mother.
 I will give thanks to thee, for fearfully and wonderfully am
 Wonderful ^{*}are thy works : [I made :
 And my soul knoweth it well.
 My ^cbones were not hid from thee,
 When I was made in secret,
 And ^dcuriously wrought in the lower parts of the earth.
 Mine imperfect substance thine eyes beheld ; ^e *
 And in thy book all my members were written,
Which day by day were to be fashioned :
 While as yet ^fthere was not one of them.
 But to me how precious are thy thoughts, O God :
 How great is the sum of them !
 I ^hwill tell them : . . . than the sand they are more in number.

^a Literally, "the places behind the sea:" the furthest parts of the earth: the extreme west. In this passage we have heaven and earth, east and west.

^b So Æschylus, in his Suppliees. πάντα τοι φλέγεται κἄν σκότῳ: "Even in thick darkness all is light with thee." For such I apprehend to be the meaning of that very obscure, but surely very religious passage.

^c Heb. were not hid my bones from thee.

^d Heb. as with embroidery.

^e Heb. beheld thine eyes.

^f Heb. and there was not one of them.

^h The same root in the Hebrew as "book," a few lines preceding: ספר.

III.

I ^ahave waked up: and I am still with thee.
 Wilt thou not slay, O God, the ungodly?
 Therefore, ^bye men of blood, depart from me:
 For ^cthey ^dspeak against thee unrighteously:
 Thine ^eadversaries ^{*}take thy Name in vain.
 Do^f I not hate them, O LORD, that hate thee?
 And with those that rise against me am not I grieved?
 With perfect hatred I hate them:
 As enemies are they to me.
 Search me, O God, and know my heart:
 Prove me, and know my ^{*}imaginings:
 And see if there be the way of ^gwickedness in me:
 And lead me in the way everlasting.

^a Hitherto, the Psalmist has given us his meditations. The active duties of the day follow, in the midst of which, even when exercised in God's service, there is the greatest need of self-examination.

^b Heb. and.

^c Heb. who.

^d Or "rebel;" or "murmur."

^e Heb. they take in vain their adversaries: a play upon words: נִשְׁוֹא, לִשְׁוֹא. This is a disputed passage. The LXX translates עֵרִיך by τὰς πόλεις σου, reading עֵרִיך. If עֵרִי means "enemies," this is a Chaldaism for צֵרִיך.

^f Heb. do not I thine haters, O Lord, hate?

^g Heb. sorrow or pain: עֶצֶב.

PSALM CXL.

To the Chief Musician. A Psalm of David.

I.

Deliver me, O LORD, from the ^aman of evil :
 From the man of violence preserve me :
 Who *purpose *evil things in their heart :
 All day they stir up wars.
 They have sharpened their tongue like a serpent :
 The poison of asps is under their lips.

SELAH.

II.

Keep me, O LORD, from the hands of the ungodly :
 From the man of violence preserve me :
 Who purpose to overthrow my goings.
 The ^bproud have *privily laid a snare for me, and cords :
 They have spread a net by the way-side :
 Traps have they set for me.

SELAH.

III.

I said unto the LORD, My God art Thou :
 Hear, O LORD, the voice of my supplication,
 O LORD, my *Lord, the strength of my salvation,
 Thou hast been a covering to my head in the day of battle.
 Grant not, O LORD, the desires of the ungodly : [selves.
 Their wicked imaginations further not, lest they exalt them-

SELAH.

^a The word "man," in these two lines is expressed in the first by אָדָם (homo), in the second by אִישׁ (vir).

^b Heb. have privily laid the proud.

IV.

As for the head of those that compass me,
 Let the mischief of their own lips cover them.
 Let ^aburning coals ^{*}come down upon them :
 Into the fire he shall ^{*}make them fall : into deep pits :
 They shall not rise.
 The man of ^bwords shall not be established in the earth :
 The man of violence . . . evil shall ^chunt him, to ^{*}overwhelm him.
 I know that the ^dLORD will ^emaintain the cause of the poor,
 The ^{}judgment of the ^{}needy.
 Surely the righteous shall give thanks to thy Name :
 The upright ^fshall continue in thy Presence.

^a Heb. let there fall upon them burning coals.

^b Heb. of tongue : i.e. "the man of evil and the ungodly (vide supra) :
 עוֹסֵם is the word in both these lines.

^c Heb. shall lay wait for him.

^d Heb. will maintain the Lord.

^e Heb. will do.

^f Heb. shall continue the upright.

PSALM CXLI.

A Psalm of David.

O LORD, I cry to thee :

Haste thee to me :

Give ear to my voice, when I cry to thee.

Let ^amy prayer be set forth as incense before thee :

Let the lifting up of my hands be the sacrifice of the evening,

Set, O LORD, a watch before my mouth :

Keep thou the door of my lips.

Let ^bnot my heart be inclined to any thing evil, [iniquity ;

So as to ^{*}work works of ungodliness with the men who do

And let me not eat of their dainties.

Let ^ethe righteous smite me in mercy :

Yea, ^dlet their reproof be to me as oil that is ^eprecious :

It shall not break my head :

But ^fstill my prayer shall be against their wickednesses.^g

Their ^hjudges were ^{}dismissed by the ^{}sides of the stony rock ;

And they all heard my words, for they are pleasant.

^a Heb. let be set forth my prayer.

^b Heb. let not be inclined my heart.

^c Heb. let smite the righteous.

^d Heb. and they shall reprove me.

^e A play on words: ראש, the same word as that which means "head," in the following line: vide Exod. xxx. 23., Cant. iv. 14. The LXX and the Syriac here read ראש.

^f Heb. for.

^g "In their calamities:" Eng. Bible.

^h This is translated according to the view of Bp. Patrick, Bp. Horne, Mr. Parkhurst, and Dathe, as referring to the event in David's life, recorded in 1 Sam. 26. The imagery and allusions of the Psalm are in keeping; viz. the oil which had lately anointed him; and the watch before

As he that cleaveth and heweth wood upon the earth,
So are scattered our bones at the mouth of *hell.
But unto thee, O LORD my Lord, are mine eyes :
In thee is *my refuge : leave not destitute my soul. [me :
Preserve me from the ^asnare wherewith they are entrapping
And from the traps of the doers of iniquity.
The ^bungodly shall fall into their own nets together ;
As for me, I shall ever escape.

his mouth, &c. suggested by the watching at the mouth of the cave, though ultimately referring to the tabernacle service. This Psalm is closely connected with that which follows.

^a Heb. from the hands of the snare.

^b Heb. shall fall the ungodly.

PSALM CXLII.

Maschil of David. When he was in the cave. A Prayer.

With my voice unto the LORD I cried :
 With my voice unto the LORD I made supplication.
 I poured out before him my complaint :
 My trouble before him I * declared.

In the overwhelming within me of my spirit

 In the way wherein I walked they privily laid a snare for me.
 I ^b looked on the right hand and saw,
 But there was no ^c man that would know me :
 Refuge ^d failed me :
 There was no man to care ^e for my soul.

I cried unto thee, O LORD : I said,
 Thou thyself art my ^f hope,
 My portion in the land of the living.
 Attend unto my complaint : ^g
 For I am brought low * exceedingly. [Name :

^a Heb. and thou.

^b "Look," and "see : " marg. Eng. Bibl. : which reading is in the Hebrew text : but the Syriac, Septuagint, and both our versions, read as above. The Hebrew reading, however, is very consistent with the context as an address to God, and resembles the passage in Lamentations i. 12., "Behold, and see."

^c Heb. there was no man for me to know.

^d Heb. failed refuge from me.

^e "to seek : " marg. Eng. Bible.

^f Heb. refuge.

PSALM CXLIII.

A Psalm of David.

I.

O LORD, hear my prayer:
Give ear unto my supplications in thy truth:†
Answer me, in thy righteousness:
And enter not into judgment with thy servant,
For^a no man living shall be justified in thy sight.

For^b the enemy hath persecuted my soul:
He hath smitten to the earth my life:
He hath made me to dwell in darkness,
As those that have been dead long time.
And^c my spirit in me is overwhelmed:
Within me^d my heart is desolate.

I remember the days of old:
I meditate on all thy *doings:^e
On the work of thy hands I muse.
I stretch forth my hands unto thee,
And my soul, as a land of thirst, to thee.

SELAH.

II.

Hear^f me speedily, O LORD; there is a failing of my spirit:^g
Hide not thy face from me,

PSALM CXLIV.

Of David.

Blessed be the LORD my Rock,

My fingers to fight.
My * ^ahope and my fortress,
My high tower, and my deliverer,
My shield, and he in whom I trust :
Who subdueth my people under me.

O LORD, what is man, that thou takest knowledge of him :
The son of man, that thou makest account of him ?
Man to a thing of nought is like :
His days are as a shadow that is passing.

O LORD, bow thy heavens, and come down :
Touch the mountains, and they shall smoke.
Lighten *with thy lightning, and scatter them :
Send * forth thine arrows, and destroy them.
Send forth thy hand from * on high :
Rid me, and deliver me from the great waters, ^b
From the hand of the children of the stranger :
Whose mouth speaketh vanity :
And their right hand is a right hand of falsehood.

O God, a song that is new I will sing to thee :
On a lute of ten strings will I *make a psalm to thee :

^a The common reading of the Hebrew, the LXX, and the Eng. Bible, is חסדִי, "my mercy." The English Psalter reads חסִיתִי, "my refuge," rendered there "hope."

^b Heb. waters great.

Who hast given salvation to Kings :
Who hast * rid David thy servant from the sword * of evil.
Rid me, and deliver me^a
From the hand of the children of the stranger :
Whose mouth speaketh vanity :

That our sheep may be thousands, ten thousands in our * folds :
That our oxen may be strong to labour ;
That there be no^e decay, no leading away captive :
And there be no complaining in our streets.
Happy the people, that is in such a case :
Happy the people, to whom the LORD is their God.

 And merciful in all his works.

VI.

- 9 Nigh is the LORD to all that call upon him :
 To all who call on him in truth.
 10 The desire of him that fear him he will perform :
 And their cry he will hear, and save them.
 11 The^d LORD keepeth all that love him :
 And all the ungodly he will destroy.
 12 The praise of the LORD my mouth shall speak :^e
 And^f all flesh shall bless the Name of his holiness for ever and ever.

^a Heb. to generation and generation.

^b The letter 2 begins no distich in the received Hebrew text, nor in either of our versions : but in the Septuagint occurs the following : Ἡσυχὸς Κύριος ἐν πᾶσι τοῖς λόγοις αὐτοῦ, καὶ ὁστος ἐν πᾶσι τοῖς ἔργοις αὐτοῦ. The Syriac reads the same, and one copy of Kennicott (142), which begins with כִּנֵּן : this supplies the vacancy, and is consistent with the structure of the Psalm, thus forming a burthen corresponding to Teth and Tzaddi, and concluding in each instance a moral division of the Psalm.

^c Heb. upholdeth the Lord, and raiseth up.

^d Heb. keepeth the Lord.

^e Heb. shall speak my mouth.

^f Heb. and shall bless all flesh.

PSALM CXLVI.

Praise ye the LORD.

Praise, O my soul, the LORD:

I will praise the LORD, while I live:^a

I will make a psalm to my God, while I have being.

O trust not in princes,

In the son of man, in whom there is no salvation.

His^b breath goeth forth,

He returneth to his earth;

In^c that day do perish his thoughts.

Happy is he who hath the God of Jacob for his help:

Whose hope is in the LORD his God:

Who made heaven and earth,

The sea, and all that is in them:

Who keepeth truth for ever.

Who doeth judgment for the oppressed:

Who giveth bread to the hungry.

The LORD looseth the prisoners:

The LORD openeth the eyes of the blind:

The LORD raiseth those that are bowed down:

The LORD loveth the righteous:

The LORD *keepeth the strangers:

The fatherless and widow he defendeth:^d

But the way of the ungodly he *overturneth.^e

^a Heb. in my life . . . in my being.

^b Heb. goeth forth his breath.

^c Heb. in day that.

^d Heb. preserveth.

^e A play upon words: יעורר, "he defendeth;" יעות, "he overturneth."

The^a LORD shall be King for evermore,
Even thy God, O Sion,
From^b generation to generation.
Praise ye the LORD.

^a Heb. shall be King the Lord.

^b Heb. to generation and generation.

PSALM CXLVII.

I.

Praise ye the LORD,
For it is good to * make a psalm to our God:
For it is pleasant: comely is praise.
The^a LORD doth build up Jerusalem:
The outcasts of Israel he gathereth.
Who healeth the broken in heart,
And bindeth up their wounds.
Who telleth the number of the stars:
All of them by their names he calleth.
Great is the LORD, and * manifold is his power:
Of his understanding there is no * end.^b
The^c LORD setteth up the meek:
Bringing down the ungodly to the ground.

II.

O^d sing unto the LORD with thanksgiving:
Make * a psalm to our God on the harp.
Who covereth the heaven with clouds,
Who prepareth for the earth rain,
Who maketh to grow upon the mountains grass:
Giving to the cattle their food,
To the sons of the raven that cry.
He hath not in the strength of a horse any pleasure:
He hath not in the legs of a man delight.
The^e delight of the LORD is in them that fear him,
In them that put their trust in his mercy.

^a Heb. doth build up the LORD.

^b "no number:" marg. Eng. Bibl.

^c Heb. setteth up the meek the LORD.

^d עני, "sing antiphonally."

^e Heb. delighteth the LORD.

III.

Rejoice,* O Jerusalem, in the LORD:

Praise thy God, O Sion.

For he hath strengthened the bars of thy gates:

He hath blessed thy children within thee:

He maketh in thy border peace:

With the flour of wheat he filleth thee.

He sendeth forth his^a commandment upon earth:

Very swiftly runneth his word.

Who giveth snow like wool:

The hoar-frost like ashes he scattereth;

Casting forth his ice like morsels:

Before his cold who shall stand?

He sendeth forth his word, and melteth them:

He bloweth with his wind^b; the waters flow.

He sheweth his word to Jacob:

His statutes and his judgments to Israel.

He hath not done so to all the heathen:

And his judgments, they have not known them.

Praise ye the LORD.

* Heb. his word.

^b Heb. flow the waters.

PSALM CXLVIII.

I.

Praise ye the LORD.

Praise the LORD from the heavens ;

Praise him in the heights.

Praise him, all his angels :

Praise him, all his host.

Praise him, Sun and Moon :

Praise him, all stars of light.

Praise him, heaven of heavens,

And waters above the heavens.

Let them praise the Name of the LORD :

For He commanded, and they were created.

And he hath* made them to stand for ever and ever :

A* statute he hath given : and it shall not pass away.

II.

Praise the LORD from the earth,

Dragons, and all deeps :

Fire and hail, snow and vapour,

Wind of storm, fulfilling his word :

Mountains, and all hills,

Trees of fruit, and all cedars :

Beasts, and all cattle,

Creeping things, and fowl of wing :

Kings of the earth, and all people :

Princes, and all judges of the earth :

Young men, and maidens also,^a

Old men, together with children :

Let them praise the Name of the LORD,

* Heb. also maidens.

For high is his Name alone :
His worship is above earth and heaven.
And he shall exalt the horn of his people,
The praise of all his saints,
Of the children of Israel,
Of a people near unto him.
Praise ye the LORD.

PSALM CXLIX.

Praise ye the LORD.

O sing unto the LORD a song that is new,
His praise in the congregation of the saints.
Let^a Israel^{*} be glad in his Maker:
Let the children of Sion rejoice in their King.
Let them praise his Name with the pipe:
With timbrel and harp let them ^{*}make a psalm to him.

For^b the LORD hath pleasure in his people;
He will beautify the meek with salvation.
Let^c the saints be joyful with glory:
Let them sing for joy in their beds.
Let the ^{*}exaltation of God be in their mouth,^b
And a sword of two edges in their hand:
To execute vengeance upon the heathen,
Rebukes upon the ^{*}nations:
To bind their kings with chains,
And their nobles with fetters of iron; †
To execute upon them the judgment that is written.
This honour^e have all his saints.

Praise ye the LORD.

^a Heb. be glad, Israel.

^b Heb. hath pleasure the LORD.

^c Heb. be joyful the saints.

^d Heb. their throat.

^e Heb. honour this is to all his saints.

† Compare the second Psalm: this seems to be the fulfilment of the prophecy there announced.

PSALM CL.

Praise ye the LORD.

Praise God in his holiness :

Praise him in the firmament of his power.

Praise him in his mighty acts :

Praise him in the* multitude of his greatness

Praise him with sound of trumpet :

Praise him with lute and harp.

Praise him with timbrel and pipe :

Praise him with strings and organ.

Praise him with cymbals that are loud :

Praise him with cymbals of high sound.

Let every thing that hath breath praise the LORD.

Praise ye the LORD.

* מניח, an ὑπαξ λεγόμενον. Of many strings, or notes; from מנה, "to number:" χορδαῖς: LXX. This possibly bears upon the names "She-minith," &c.

APPENDIX.

HABAKKUK III.

A Prayer of Habakkuk ^athe Prophet, upon Shigionoth.

O ^bLORD, I have heard thy speech :^c
I ^dam afraid, O LORD, of thy work :
At the ^edrawing near of the years do thou ^frevive it ;
At the drawing near of the years thou wilt make it ^gknown :
In ^hwrath, mercy thou wilt remember.
God from Teman shall come :ⁱ
And the Holy One from mount Paran.

SELAH.

His ^jglory covered the heavens,
And of his praise the ^kearth was full :
And the brightness was even as the light :^l

^a These last words, "the Prophet, upon Shigionoth," are omitted in the LXX.

^b The division of these two lines is Archbp. Newcome's, which preserves the parallelism better than our authorized version.

^c שָׁמַעַךְ, "thy rumour:" marg. Eng. Bibl. The same construction is in 2d Kings xix. 7. (וַיִּשְׁמַע שְׁמוּעָה). Also Deut. iii. 25.

^d The verb יִרְאֵה is here taken transitively.

^e "The midst:" Eng. Bibl. The word קֶרֶב is used in the sense of the text in most places, especially in Joel ii. 1. : ἐν τῷ ἐγγύζειν τὰ ἔσθλη : LXX.

^f The English Bible omits "it:" the LXX read חַיִּים, or חַיּוֹת (vide note at the end). Bishop Newcome renders it "thou hast shewn it," reading חַיּוֹת, which is conjectural.

^g One MS. reads הוֹדִיעַן.

^h בָּרַגַּן : a characteristic word in this Prayer: (vide v. 7 & v. 16 twice.)

ⁱ "came:" Eng. Bible. The verb is future: so the LXX: ἤξει.

^j Heb. covered the heavens his glory.

^k Heb. was full the earth.

^l Heb. as the light was: תְּהִיָּה is emphatic: here explained by "even."

He ^ahad bright ^bbeams out of his hand :
 And there was the hiding of power.^c
 Before him went the Pestilence,^d
 And burning coals went forth at his feet.
 He stood, and measured the earth :
 He beheld, and drove asunder the nations :
 And they were ^eburst open, the eternal mountains ;^f
 They did bow, the everlasting hills :^g
 His ways are everlasting.^h

Under affliction I saw the tents of Cushan :
 They ⁱshall tremble, the curtains of the land of Midian.
 Against the rivers is the LORD displeased ?
 Is ^kthine anger against the rivers ?
 Is ^lthy wrath against the sea,
 That thou dost ride upon thine horses,
 Thy chariots of salvation ?
 Thy ^mbow shall be made quite naked,
Because of the oaths unto the tribes, even thy word.

SELAH.

With ⁿrivers thou shalt cleave the earth ;
 They saw thee, they trembled, the mountains :

^a Heb. bright beams out of his hand to him.

^b So marg. Eng. Bible, the text having "horns."

^c Or, "the hiding," or "secret place."

^d λόγος : LXX, דבר having an equivocal meaning. In the passage which might be supposed parallel, Ps. lxxviii. 11., the word is not דבר, but אמר.

^e "scattered:" Eng. Bible : ἐσθρύνει : LXX.

^f Heb. mountains eternal.

^g Heb. hills everlasting : "perpetual:" Eng. Bible.

^h Heb. the ways are everlasting to him.

ⁱ "Did tremble:" Eng. Bible.

^k "Was" in this and next line: Eng. Bible. Heb. was against the rivers thine anger.

^l Heb. was against the sea thy wrath.

^m Heb. naked shall be made naked thy bow.

ⁿ An instance of the nominative absolute. See Bishop Horsley's Preface to Hosea.

The overflowing of the waters passed by :
 The ^adeep uttered his voice ;
 On high his hands he lifted up.

The Sun, the Moon stood still in its habitation :
 In ^blight thine arrows shall go forth ;^c
 In brightness the glittering of thy spear.
 In indignation thou shalt ^dmarch through the land :
 In anger thou shalt thresh the heathen :
 Thou shalt go forth for the salvation of thy people,
 For the salvation of thine Anointed.^e
 Thou woundedst the head out of the house of the wicked,
 Making naked the ^ffoundation unto the neck.

SELAH.

Thou didst strike through with his staves the heads of his
 They came, as a whirlwind, to scatter me : [^gvillages :
 Their rejoicing was to devour the poor in secret.
 Thou didst walk through the sea with thine horses :
Through the ^hheap of mighty waters.

I heard, and my belly trembled :ⁱ
 At the voice my lips quivered :^j
 Rottenness^k entered into my bones,
 And in myself I trembled.

^a Heb. uttered the deep his voice.

^b Heb. to light.

^c "went : " Eng. Bible.

^d The verbs in these three lines are in the past tense in the English Bible.

^e "With thine Anointed : " Eng. Bible.

^f Cappellus, Houbigant, and Archbp. Newcome read צור, "the rock," which is more consonant to the parallel passage, Deut. xxxii. 22. : מוסדי, "the foundations of the mountain."

^g See Bp. Horsley's note (A) on the song of Deborah : Bibl. Crit. iv. 455. Our translators read, with several MSS., פרזון ; פרזון is the received text.

^h The LXX reads חמרי ταρασσοντες ; חמר will bear the same sense, "troubling."

ⁱ Heb. trembled my belly.

^j Heb. quivered my lips.

^k Heb. entered rottenness.

Oh ^a that I may rest in the day of trouble,
When he cometh unto the people, when he shall invade us. ^b

Although the fig-tree shall not blossom,
 And there be no fruit in the vines :
Though the labour of the olive fail,
 And the fields yield no meat :
Though the flock from the fold be cut off,
 And there be no herd in the stalls :
 Yet as for me, in the LORD will I rejoice :
 I will joy in the God of my salvation.
 The ^c LORD God is my strength :
 And he will make my feet like harts' feet :
 And on my high places he will make me to walk.

To the chief Musician upon my stringed instruments.

^a I have ventured to give this interpretation to a passage confessedly obscure, which, as Archbp. Newcome shews, is essentially the same as that given by Dr. Wheeler. The Archbp. renders it "because I shall be brought to the day of trouble," taking the word to belong to the root נחה, "to lead," not נח, "to rest."

^b So the Eng. Bible, reading יגורנו instead of יגורנו.

^c Heb. Jehovah the Lord.

* * The reading of the first verse by the LXX is very different from ours, or that of the Hebrew. The Hebrew text is subjoined, compared with the text which the LXX translators may be supposed to have had before them: the LXX version itself being added:—

Received Text.

יהוה שמעתי שמעך
 יראתי יהוה פעלך
 בקרב שנים חייהו
 בקרב שנים תודיע
 ברנז רחם תזכור :

Supposed Text.

יהוה שמעתי שמעך [ו]יראתי
 יהוה התבינת [פעלך] [ו]חרדתי
 בקרב שנים חיות [תודיע]
 בקרב שנים תודיע
 [בבוא מעיד] [תודיע]
 [ברנז נפשי]
 ברנז רחם תזכור

Κύριε, εἰσακήκοα τὴν ἀκοήν σου, καὶ ἐφοβήθησιν.
 Κύριε, *κατανόησά' τὰ ἔργα σου, *καὶ ἐξέστης.
 Ἐν μέσῳ ἐύω ζωων γιγνῶσκῃς,

Ἐν τῷ ἐγγίξειν τὰ ἔτη, ἐπιγνωσθήσῃ.
 [Ἐν τῷ παρῆναι τὸν καιρὸν, ἀναδεχθήσῃ.]
 [Ἐν τῷ παραχθῆναι τὴν ψυχὴν μου,]
 Ἐν ὀργῇ ἐλεύσας μνησθήσῃ.

It is probable that in many respects the text in possession of the LXX was correct: for the following reasons: 1. The parallelism of the first two lines is perfect, and very Hebraic, although the words marked with asterisks are obelized by Origen, and consequently belong to no known text. 2. The repetition of the word בְּרַגַּז, in "wrath," or perturbation, is quite in the spirit of those ancient scriptural poems of Moses and Deborah, which this Prayer so remarkably resembles. They appear, however, to have been incorrect in reading, שְׁתִּים חַיִּית for שְׁנֵים חַיִּים: and the translator has missed the meaning by this mistake, giving ὁ ὦ ζῶων ἐν τῷ παρῆναι, &c. instead of ἐν τῷ ἐγγίξειν τὰ ἔτη τῆς ζωῆς. The whole line in brackets (ἐν τῷ παρῆναι, &c.) seems to be a mere marginal gloss on the preceding line, subsequently through error inserted in the text. The words ἐν ὀργῇ ought to have been ἐν τῷ παραχθῆναι, as the parallelism demands: but the original is evidently the same as that so translated in the preceding line. Subjoined is a translation of the above supposed text, corrected:—

O Lord, I have heard thy voice, and am afraid:
 O Lord, I have considered thy works, and am confounded.
 At the drawing near of the years of life thou shalt make it known,
 At the drawing near of the years thou shalt make it known.
 In the terror of my soul,
 In (its) terror thou shalt remember many.

But many objections are obvious. Among them the interference with the regularity of the metre of the received text, which, for nineteen consecutive lines, has but three words in each line.
